Essex Ties for Leadership.

By defeating Harrow, on Sunday, he had the excellent pitching of Jack Fleming, who allowed the home team only three hits, none in the last six innings, the Maple Leafs, with 3 wins against 1 loss, are tied with Leamington for first place in the league standing. The game just about proved beyond a doubt that Gordie Wright, starting Harrow pitcher, and one of the best pitchers of all time in the county, is through, as the local team hit him hard, getting more hits off his delivery in one inning than they would have made in a whole game a few years ago. The Leafs played their best ball of the season, both at bat and in the field.

First Inning.

Essex—Queen batted back to G. Wright for the first out; Brown popped to Webster, and Brackell flied to Baldwin at short—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Harrow—Baldwin drew a base on balls; R. Wright struck out on three pitched balls; Butler's fly in right fell among the trees for a ground rule double; Webster struck out, and Clark ended the inning grounding out second to first—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Second Inning.

Essex—Parent flied high to Butler in center; Art Miller was safe at first on Clark's throw of his ground ball; L. Loebach struck out; Art Miller stole second; M. Miller struck out—0 run, 0 hit, 1 error.

Harrow—Hendershot dropped a single into right but was caught on a delayed steal; L. Ross to A. Miller to Queen to A. Miller; Gillanders and Cornwall struck out—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Third Inning.

Essex—L. Ross got Essex first hit, a single to left; Fleming struck out; Queen hit an easy grounder to Webster at first and was safe when the Harrow first baseman failed to field the ball cleanly. Brown hit back to G. Wright, who threw to third to force Ross; Brackell struck out—0 run, 1 hit, 1 error.

Harrow—G. Wright doubled to deep left; Baldwin was called out on strikes; R. Wright hit to Brown at short and G. Wright was out going into third; Brown to Brackell; Butler grounded out to Art Miller, unassisted—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Fourth Inning.

Essex—Parent singled to right; with Art Miller at bat, Parent was picked off first on a quick throw by G. Wright; A. Miller struck out; Loebach singled to right; M. Miller singled to left; Loebach taking third on the hit and M. Miller second on the throw to third; L. Ross struck out—0 run, 3 hits, 0 error.

Harrow—Loebach took Webster's fly in left; Brackell threw out Clark and Hendershot—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Fifth Inning.

Essex—Fleming popped to short; Queen got credit for an inside single to deep third base; Brown doubled to right; Queen stopping at third; Brackell's fly fell safe in short left; Queen scoring and Brown moving over to third; Parent laid down a perfect sacrifice to squeeze Brown home, but was out at first; Webster to Clark; G. Wright threw out Art Miller—2 runs, 2 hits, 0 error.

Harrow—Gillanders walked; Cornwall flied to Parent in center; Gillanders moved down to second and then to third on two wild pitches; G. Wright flied to Loebach in left; Gillanders scoring after the catch; Queen made a fine stop to throw out Baldwin—1 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Sixth Inning.

Essex—Loebach looped a single to center; M. Miller hit to Hendershot for what looked like a double play, but Clark failed to touch second after he received Hendershot's perfect throw and both batter and runner were safe; L. Ross, attempting to sacrifice, was safe at first on a fielder's choice; when G. Wright, after fielding the ball, turned to throw to third and found no one covering the bag; Fleming struck out; Queen's fly ball fell safe in short center to score Loebach, with Brown at bat. Wright uncorked a wild pitch; M. Miller scoring; L. Ross taking third and Queen second; Brown, after fouling off six pitches, drew a base on balls, to again fill the bases; Brackell popped to Hendershot in foul territory back of third; Parent singled to right, scoring; L. Ross; Queen also scored and was declared safe by plate umpire Bill Jordan, but Carney evidently thought he never touched the plate, went back to make sure, whereupon the umpire had no alternative but to declare him out, as R. Wright had tagged the runner—3 runs, 3 hits, 0 error.

Harrow—Ewing went into catch for Essex. R. Wright popped to Brown; Butler walked and stole second; Art Miller took care of both Webster and Clark, unassisted—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Seventh Inning.

Essex—Reese looped the box for Harrow. G. Wright took over second and Sinasac replaced Hendershot at third. Art Miller lined a single to right; Loebach sacrificed; Reese to Webster; G. Wright made a nice stop of Max Miller's grounder, toward right, but couldn't make a play; Art Miller moving over to third on the hit; M. Miller stole second; Ewing walked to fill the bases; Fleming struck out, but Queen hit a ground rule double to right to score Art and Max Miller; Brown went out, pitcher to first—2 runs, 3 hits, 0 error.

Harrow—Sinasac was safe on G. Queen's error; Gillanders walked;

Eighth Inning.

Essex—Brackell singled to right; Parent lined to Butler in center; Brackell stole second; A. Miller singled through short to score Brackell and he took second on the throw to the plate; Loebach and M. Miller struck out—1 run, 2 hits, 0 error.

FOOD —The Sineus of Peace.

Canadians are asked only to share their abundant food supplies with the starving of the war-torn countries. They MUST share, if peace is to endure. By avoiding all waste, by substituting vegetables and fruit for bread, cake and pastries, every individual can make a personal contribution toward increasing Canadian shipments of wheat and flour to the hunger areas overseas. This is a practical way to work for enduring peace.

Christianity is not a theory or speculation, but a life; not a philosophy of life, but a life and a living process.—Coleridge.

South Essex Youth Rally.

S. E. Y. C. These four letters will become very familiar to the readers of this good paper in the months to come. They stand for "South Essex Youth for Christ."

Have you heard about the "Youth for Christ" work? It is the greatest movement today among Protestant Evangelical Young People. Did you know that hundreds of thousands of young people meet for great rallies in the United States and Canada on Saturday evenings and indeed all over the world? At these meetings the Young People have the opportunity of hearing the best Christian musical speakers of the continent. The music is provided by young people, the song leader is a young person, the chairman a young person, the pianist a young person, and the speakers are those who are themselves young people, or who specialize in young people's work and are loved by young people.

Look at these figures to gain a little idea of the way young people are attending these meetings. These are in individual meetings: In Chicago, the average weekly attendance is 3,800; Toronto (Massey Hall) 3,000; New York, 3,500; Seattle, 1,600; Los Angeles, 2,800; Minneapolis, 5,000; Detroit (Musical Hall) 2,000; Toledo, 700; Grand Rapids, 600.

In one great rally recently 70,000 Christian young people and adults gathered together. Did you get that figure? 70,000.

Take for instance the Youth for Christ work in Windsor. The meetings are held every other week in the Patterson Collegiate. On these occasions nearly 1,000 young people representing many denominations gather together. When the roll is taken, as many as a dozen denominations will be represented in strength.

But S. E. Y. C. is to be your Youth Rally. It is called "South Essex Youth for Christ" because it is for all young people living in the south part of the County of Essex, taking in Amherstburg, Harrow, Essex, Kingsville, Cootnam, Leamington, Wheatley. About six weeks ago a council meeting of young people representing all of these towns but Amherstburg, met in Kingsville for the purpose of organizing this "Youth for Christ." Each town was evenly represented and many denominations were represented in the young people gathered. These young people represent some of the finest Christian young men and women in the county.

The outcome of this meeting being that it was decided to organize a "Youth for Christ" to cover this area. Meetings to be held once a month and also to be held in a different town each month. The first meeting was planned for Kingsville, to be held in the town hall, on Saturday, June 15th. The next meeting will be held in Harrow, on July 13th, and the third in Leamington.

At this Kingsville rally usherettes will take care of the seating as over 500 young people are expected to attend. Bus loads of young people will be coming from other towns besides hundreds of cars. The leader on the platform will be Harding McCormack, of Harrow; the song leader, Gordon Monk, of Windsor, and the pianist Marion Damm, of Essex. Special attractions will be the "Russian Boy Singers," of Detroit; two boys aged 10 and 12 years respectively, with voices that will thrill the people assembled. Also an outstanding trumpet trio from Detroit's Salvation Army Headquarters. Some of the finest singing talent among Christian young people of Essex County will also bring special quartets and duets.

Speaker for the evening will be Rev. Orville Williams, of River Rouge, one of Detroit's ablest Youth speakers, who is often used in great rallies held in Detroit and Chicago, etc. This rally is expected to be the greatest Youth gathering ever held in South Essex. All roads will lead to Kingsville on Saturday evening, June 15th.

Glass-Fabric Dyeing.

Ever since glass-thread and glass fabric were produced, the need has arisen to dye these glass-substance by similar methods to those employed in ordinary textile dyeings. The great obstacle to the success of these experiments has, of course, been the very nature of glass which is unsuited to absorb the dyes normally used in textile. A United Kingdom firm has now been able to overcome all obstacles and develop a process enabling glass to be dyed in the same way as textiles. The great advantage of this epoch-making discovery, is that the dyeing process can be carried out without the necessity of altering existing machinery. The machinery can, therefore, be used alternately for glass-fabrics or for textiles.

Behind the numerous stories which are circulating about the current world food crisis which is not expected to be limited to 1946, according to well-informed quarters in Ottawa, extending at least until after the summer harvest of 1947, there is a story here which hints that the Canadian Government would be willing to consider on its merits any other steps which may be taken to give further assistance, though foresight in the form of a conservation policy has allowed Canada to export more wheat alone to starving nations during 1945-46 than was actually harvested in 1945, with the Canadian system enabling wheat, cheese and bacon to be shipped to the extent of 70 per cent.

Moreover, it is also strongly hinted in some quarters that it is not being done only in the spirit of charity since there is already a "suggestion" for example, that Britain may have a "permanent interest" in purchasing meat from Canada, though, of course, at this time, there can be no commitment for Britain to make such exclusive purchases here. Likewise, there is a story that charity in the distribution of food may be a thing of the past within the year possibly and world shipments of food may be on a distinct commercial basis.

It is reported in Ottawa that the upward revision in maximum prices of farm machinery, as announced by War-time Prices and Trade Board, constitutes provision for appropriate increases in prices but does not make such increases mandatory. This is to say that in any case where a buyer and a seller had a firm contract as of April 15th for future delivery of farm machinery at prices lower than the new maximum price the buyer has the ordinary protection of the law against any variation in the contract price, though if both buyer and seller agree the price might be adjusted within the limits of the revised maximum price.

Termed by one prominent member as the "most far reaching constitutional change since Confederation," the Government's proposed system of redistribution of seats in the next Parliament, as explained by Justice Minister Louis St. Laurent, is considered as a "very lively issue" along Parliament Hill. Some of the points brought out show that changing the basis of representation in Parliament, which now is founded on 65 into the population of Quebec formula, may be accomplished by a petition to the British Parliament for amending the British North America Act of 1867; since this is in reality an affair concerning the central Parliament such a petition does not need the consent of the various provincial legislatures; the legislature, the resolution does not need the unanimous approval of Parliament; the previous amendment to put off redistribution during the war received passage through the British Parliament in approximately ten days. Under the proposed plan, the representation in the next Parliament would be as follows, present representation being given in brackets: Prince Edward Island 4 (4); New Brunswick 10 (10); Quebec 73 (65); Ontario 83 (82); Manitoba 16 (17); Saskatchewan 20 (21); Alberta 17 (17); British Columbia 18 (16); Yukon 1 (1); total 255 (254).

On June 7th, 1946, Premier Mackenzie King will equal the record of the longest term of public service of any British Empire Prime Minister that is Sir John A. Macdonald who served from July 1st, 1857 to November 6th, 1873, and from October 17th, 1867, to June 6th, 1891. Mr. King has served from December 29th, 1921, to June 28th, 1926; from September 25th, 1926, to August 7th, 1930, and from October 23rd, 1935, to the present.

A report tabled in the Senate in Ottawa has recommended the creation of a seven-man appeal board to hear and to decide any appeal made by a Canadian taxpayer from an assessment under the Income War Tax Act and the Excess Profits Tax Act. This report was the first of three to be made by a special committee of the Senate, this established in the fall of 1945, in order to look into the provisions and operations of the Income War Tax Act and the Excess Profits Tax Act.

It is evident in Ottawa that the exercise Musk-Ox proved most valuable in providing information about Canada's vast Arctic region, judging by at least two significant statements here. Col. J. T. Wilson, director of operational research at National Defence headquarters and leader of the exercise Musk-Ox, stated in Ottawa that much valuable information of this kind had been obtained, though more blanks on topographical maps of the vast Canadian Arctic remain to be filled in and if Canadians do not explore it then expeditions from other countries will do it. Group Capt. V. S. J. Millard, staff officer to R.C.A.F. Maintenance Command, also declared to the House of Commons war expenditure committee that exercises similar to Musk-Ox could be expected in future.

Important changes are proposed in the Unemployment Insurance Act and it is reported in this capital that these include placing the national employment service in the jurisdiction of the Labor Minister acting through the Unemployment Insurance Commission; increasing from $1 to $1.50 a day the amount received by a person under employment insurance as earned without losing insurance benefits; providing for compulsory reporting of employment changes. Likewise, consideration is being given extending the insurance scheme to seamen, and others and broadening the definition of a person with dependents, such as those maintaining a household and supporting a related person.

Since it is known in Ottawa that there is a virtual flood of applications or requests of persons wishing to come to Canada, the special Senate committee investigating immigration is one being watched with intense interest, with A. L. Jolliffe director of immigration, testifying that about 60,000 dependents of Canadian servicemen were in the United Kingdom and Europe and about half have been brought to this country already, estimating the remainder might be here during the present year. Moreover, from 1939 to 1945, Canada's total immigration was 68,287 and in the same period Canadian emigration to United States was a little less than 10,000 a year, probably 55,000 altogether.

"Women of Canada cannot expect to protect their homes, and the things their husbands, sons and brothers died for, unless they recognize their responsibilities as citizens and the need for the establishment and protection of their civil rights," said Ottawa the only woman member of Parliament, Mrs. Gladys Stein, in endorsing the creation here of the Civil Liberty Group. "We have tried to emphasize for the benefit of all concerned that it is good business for the future not to gyp tourists this year on the different services rendered them," declared the director of the Canadian Travel Bureau, D. Leo Dolan, in dis-

Keep an Eye on that Toaster.

Burned toast feeds nobody. That slice of bread which goes up in smoke in the breakfast rush is part of the waste which Canadians are asked to eliminate in order that there may be more wheat for the hungry. One slice of wasted bread from every Canadian household means a waste of 1,200 98-pound bag of flour, or more than 117,000 24-ounce loaves. Thousands of loaves can be saved simply by using every crumb of bread which is bought, and buying only what is needed. Every man, woman and child in the Dominion can add a little to the world's stockpile of foodstuffs by eliminating waste.

Discussing such matters before the tour of the committee of the Senate, "In all your hotels service to the public could be improved by a little cracking down on private graft," said Leslie Munn, M.P., to the president of the C. N. R., R. C. Vaughan, in referring to some of the employees in these hotels before a hearing in the Railway Committee of the House of Commons, with Mr. Vaughan promising to investigate. "An important question before us at present is the number of farmers Canada's land can carry," said Dr. E. S. Archibald, director of the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa. "If we can increase the area of arable land by 50,000,000 acres we will have reached, in my opinion, the limit of agricultural expansion."

Authorities have considered it carefully and they have reported in Ottawa that there is no prospect of an increase in sugar which will be available for canning purposes in Canada.

Dr. H. F. Lewis, superintendent of wild life protection, has told in Ottawa that there was need in this country for a national zoological garden, with the practice in many countries of establishing it near the national capital, though in the case of Canada no definite site has been recommended. One of the largest delegations of M. P.'s went from Ottawa to the annual convention of the Canadian Legion in Quebec. The C. A. F.'s peacetime force has received a huge number of applications for commissioned posts, it is learned in Ottawa, with the Air Minister Gillson's statement revealing that "about 11,000 applications have been received so far for approximately 1,500 commissioned openings and the number of applications is increasing every day." Essex and Leamington Tied for Lead.

Essex Maple Leafs and Leamington are tied for first place in the Essex County Baseball League as a result of Essex victory over Harrow, 5 to 1, on Sunday, and Tecumseh's loss to Leamington by a score of 5 to 3. In the other games Belle River edged Kingsville 5 to 4, and Amherstburg laced Tilbury 12 to 4.

Leamington Defeats Tecumseh.

Gerry Gouin was the victim of the Tecumseh defeat, as Leamington Barons grabbed a two-run lead in the first inning without the benefit of a hit.

Hugh Heaney, of the Barons, was safe on Mose Beausoleil's bout of his grounder, Gouin hit "Spike" Hillier and Francis McVicar to fill the bases. Glen Parker then drew a walk, forcing in Heaney. Sudds hit a long fly to left, scoring Hillier.

In Tecumseh's half of the fourth, Bob Sawyer and Beausoleil hit successive singles. Then Birnie Dunning hit a lustrous triple along side the school in center to score the first two. A fly to center by Maurice Lappan, scored Dunning.

Leamington scored its winning run in the eighth when Earl Lott took two bases on Dom Papivian's bout of his roller. Ward Roach walked. Cy Scratch and Heaney hit singles and Sawyer hit home with a wild throw.

Leamington 200 000 020—5 4
Tecumseh 000 000 000—3 8 4
Batteries—Leamington, Scratch, Garton and Bowles; Tecumseh, Gouin, and Lappan.

Kingsville Loses to Belle River

A five-run rally in the eighth inning gave Belle River a 5-1 victory over Kingsville, at Belle River, on Sunday.

Dick Parent led off with a single, which Chappus followed with a double. Duncan dropped Dick Hargrave's long fly to centerfield for a two-base error. Cliff Rose singled and Hec Durocher doubled. Lloyd Martin prize got out when Ormond Middleton threw wild to first. Ernie Cote then bunted to score Durocher with the winning run.

Joe Penner struck out to end the inning, but here down in the ninth to hold Kingsville scoreless.

The fielding star was Joe Bechard, of Kingsville, who made some nice ground-covering plays.

Kingsville 000 112 000—4 9 4
Belle River 000 000 05—5 6 2
Batteries—Kingsville, T. Howe and Orton and J. Howe; Belle River, Penner and Cote.

Amherstburg 12, Tilbury 4.

Eleven errors by Tilbury made the Amherstburg Cardinals' job much easier as the 'Burg swept to a 12-4 victory, but it was a great relief hurling job by Nory Bertrand that saved the day.

Bertrand came in from second base to relieve Lloyd Jones with the bases loaded and two out in the fourth. Bertrand forced the next batter to fly out. He gave up only one hit in the next five innings.

Amherstburg won the game in the fifth as Rupert Scott tripled and scored on Harvey Nicholson's single. When the ball went through Bill Pickering, Nicholson also crossed the plate.

Scott and Reardon were the fielding stars. Losing pitcher Andy King struck out 12 and walked seven. Tilbury 211 000 000—4 6 11
Amherstburg 112 021 05—12 2 7
Batteries—Tilbury, King and Chevalier; Amherstburg, Jones, Bertrand and Scarlett.

Culling Poultry on Range is Profitable.

Culling starts on the day the chicks are hatched as it is essential that all chicks be examined and weak ones discarded before being sent to the brooders. During the rearing period first in the brooders and later on ranges the flock should be watched constantly and any birds showing weakness of any kind discarded. Each weak bird on the range means a loss of feed and time because they can never become good adult stock and are a menace to their pen mates. Only when all stock has its full measure of health and vitality is the range operating efficiently states C. R. Goodwin, Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Disease presents a problem to the poultryman at any time of year, but particularly when rearing young stock. Pullorum disease can now be avoided by the purchase of eggs or chicks from pullorum free flocks but the poultryman has still the menace of coccidiosis and worms to contend with. These can be combated by sanitation and care in management. It is advisable to be sure that all equipment is clean and that young birds are kept separated from old birds. Well ventilated and clean houses are also essential.

The transition from range to the laying houses provides the occasion for a most thorough culling on the basis of physical condition and disease. If culling has been efficient during the range period only a small number will have to be removed at this time. Weaklings should not get beyond this point, however, as they may be morbid and lay only spasmodically thus adding additional feed cost to that already accumulated against them during the rearing period. To sum up, be particularly thorough about culling on range because the longer a bird, which is likely certainly to give a poor account of itself in the laying house, lives, the greater will be its rearing cost without the compensation of adequate egg production to offset out of pocket expenses for feed and other charges.

Have a Victory Garden.

Every extra square foot of fertile Canadian soil cultivated this summer will add to the Dominion's food supply. Is your backyard fighting famine? Home-grown vegetables will not only nourish the family, but by substituting them for staple foodstuffs greater quantities of meat, wheat, flour, eggs and cheese will be released for the hunger areas.

J. G. CHURCH, Agent

Reib-Reichel Nuptials.

At the Cottam United Church, on Saturday evening last, the Rev. Stanley R. Johnston united in marriage Marion Kathleen Reichel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Reichel, of Medicine Hat, Alta., and Donald Keen, of the late Mrs. Reib, of the ninth concession of Gosfield North.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride was charming in a floor-length gown of white sheer, featuring a round, embroidered yoke, three-quarter-length sleeves, a full skirt and a long, embroidered veil caught to her head in a sweetheart headpiece. She carried a cascade of American Beauty roses.

Miss Ethel Macdowell, sister of the bridegroom, as senior bridesmaid, wore a floor-length gown of shell-pink tulle, the neck and sleeves outlined in narrow matching ruffles. Her finger-ring veil of pink net was caught to her head with pink roses, and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Elsie Newman, niece of the bridegroom, as the junior bridesmaid, wore a floor-length pale blue gown, with matching veil, and carried a nosegay of pansies. Two little nieces of the bridegroom, Joanne Hill and Beverly Cox, acted as flower girls. They carried white baskets and scattered rose leaves in the path of the bride.

The bridegroom was attended by his cousin, Gordon Reib, of South Woods, Ont. Mrs. Fred Gordon, placed the wedding music, and before the ceremony Mrs. Johnston sang "O Promise Me" and during the signing of the register, "Through the Years."

A reception followed at the Kingsville Golf Club for 30 guests, where the bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. The bride's mother wore a navy georgette dress with a matching hat and accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Reib left on a motor trip, the bride travelling in a lime-green dressmaker suit trimmed with red fox fur and brown accessories. On their return they will reside on the ninth concession, Gosfield North.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Coombs, of Fort William; Mrs. Jake Reichel, of Medicine Hat, and Miss Dorothy Macdowell, of Windsor.

Mrs. Munger Wagner Passes.

The many friends of the Munger Wagner family will be sorry to learn that Mrs. Wagner passed away on May 31st, at her home in Payne, Ohio. The Wagner family moved to Essex County, purchasing a farm on the 8th Concession of Colchester North, in 1914, and remained here until the old people retired in 1936, when they moved back to Payne, Ohio.

The following item was taken from the Payne, Ohio, Reflector, June 6th edition:

Mrs. Munger Wagner was born August 1870. Her parents were Moses Johnston and his wife, Susannah. They gave her the name Alice Lavina.

At the early age of six she came to Paulding with the other members of the Johnston family.

Interest in things spiritual led her to attend Sunday school and to become a baptized member of the Church of Christ in Paulding, Ohio, in the days of her youth. "They that seek Me early shall find Me."

She was united in wedlock to Munger Wagner, who was then a resident of Paulding County. Their union was exchanged on June 23rd, 1892, and their home was established on a farm 3 miles north and 1½ miles west of Payne, Ohio.

Born to this union were the following: Mae, now Mrs. Clair Kham, of Woodstock, Ontario; Canada; Roma, now Mrs. R. W. Hyland, of Windsor, Ontario; Canada; Harry, of Payne, Ohio; Evelyn, now Mrs. E. T. Fahsine, and Edith, now Mrs. Elvin Foust, both of Now Haven, Ind.

Preceding their mother in death were three children, William, Cora, and Herman.

Other close relatives surviving Mrs. Wagner are a sister, Mrs. Joseph J. Pio, of Sherwood, Mich.; 12 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Twenty years of her married life were spent near Essex, Ontario, on a farm. Upon retiring from active farming almost ten years ago the Wagners returned to Payne and vicinity.

Throughout her adult life Mrs. Wagner had proved herself a true companion and mother — devoting herself to the members of her household. In her quiet home-loving way she obtained the esteem of dear ones, of neighbours, friends and kin alike. Advancing years and declining health brought her life to a close May 31st, 1946, at

E. D. Martin Laid to Rest.

Funeral services for the late Dawson Martin were held from the United Church on Friday afternoon, with Rev. R. H. Parr officiating. A short service was held at the family home, at 12.30, when the body was moved to the church, where it rested in state until the funeral. The large number to attend the service and to call at the home, as well as the dozens of floral pieces sent, showed the high esteem in which deceased was held by the people of Essex.

Including those attending the service at the church were a group of Windsor druggists, the members of the Essex Rotary Club, the Essex School Trustees, and members of the Essex County Tourist Association.

The pallbearers were C. M. Reynolds, R. Ross, J. P. Gandy and Dr. S. M. Asselstine, of Windsor; W. J. Blankstein, of Kingsville; Dr. J. D. MacDonald and J. W. Easley, of Essex.

Interment was in Victoria Memorial cemetery.

Miss Minnie Miller Retires.

After serving for twenty-three years on the staff of the Essex Public School, Miss Minnie Miller will retire from her chosen profession on June 30th. During this period hundreds of pupils whom still reside in or around Essex have benefited from her teaching.

Miss Miller was born in Ontario, and has been a resident of Essex since 1903. She is a member of the public school board and the members of the public school board are arranging an open house and a complimentary evening to Miss Miller, at the public school on Friday, June 21st, from 8 to 10 p.m., when citizens, teachers, former pupils, and friends are invited to visit the school.

The new fluorescent lighting system, hear the public address system and honour Miss Miller by their presence. A short program of instrumental music choruses, etc., will be given by some of the pupils, from 8.30 to 9.30, which will be heard equally well from any part of the building. We trust that hundreds of citizens will accept this invitation to spend an evening in the Essex public school.

At the age of 73 years, 9 months and 27 days, her last resting place is the Windsor cemetery. Interment, June 3rd, 1946, in charge of Rev. A. A. Knupke.

Imperial Bank to Build New Modern Bank Building.

The Imperial Bank, finding their present quarters, which was built just forty years ago, far too small to give the people of Essex the quick service they would like, have purchased the Dr. J. W. Brien property and will start at once to build a new modern bank building on the land in front of the Brien residence. The house will be left where it is and the new building erected right against it, which will make the new bank 70 odd feet facing Talbot by a depth of about 43 feet. The present bank property will be sold. The new bank will be a fine new addition to the Talbot street business section and the bank officials are to be congratulated on taking this step to remedy the crowded condition often caused in the present quarters.

Rural Telephone Merger is Proposed.

"The only hope for the very small rural telephone system may be to amalgamate, or at least pool their resources and provide a common management and maintenance staff," said A. G. Austin, of Toronto, speaking at the annual convention of the Western Counties Telephone Association, in London, on Thursday of last week. Mr. Austin is president of the Canadian, Independent Telephone Association. Herman Sweetman, of the Gosfield North System, and John Padbury, of the Sandwich South System, attended the meeting.

At a quiet wedding ceremony, at the Baptist parsonage, Essex, at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Rev. Fred V. Wakeling united in marriage Carl Brushett and Miss Harriett Truesdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Truesdale, all of Essex.

The bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of flowered white satin, with white accessories. She carried a bouquet of red roses. Her only attendant, her sister Ruby, was dressed identically as the bride, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was assisted by his brother Charles.

Later in the evening the young couple left on a week's motor trip to Ottawa and other eastern points, the bride travelling in a suit of powder blue, with white accessories. They will reside in Essex.

The QUEEN Range Burner is a pot type burner which should not be confused with out-of-date ring type burners in any way. In the QUEEN burner, the oil vaporizes from a cool pool of oil around the oil inlet in the combustion chamber. It will produce 50% more heat on ½ less oil — a burner with a six-year reputation in the United States. A ½ saving in operation cost under either manufactured, bottled gas or electricity. The remarkable economy offered by the QUEEN Range Burner is a result of the tremendous volume of air used in the heating flame. This burner actually burns 90% air, and will heat the oven to 400 degrees for over seven hours on one gallon of fuel oil (No. 1 Distillate). This great economy of operation is made possible by special features of construction that generate the greatest amount of heat from the amount of oil used. The QUEEN Range Burner is PERFECTLY SAFE — there is no danger whatsoever of the oil flooding the burner in case the flame goes out, since the special carburetor shuts off automatically.

The QUEEN Range Burner is what is known as a Hydroxylation type oil burner. It is similar in design to the burner used in the new fuel oil circulating heaters, but is larger than average. This type of burner has proved to be the most efficient method used in the heating field. Thousands of these QUEEN Range Burners are now in use, giving universal satisfaction. Women everywhere are welcoming the QUEEN Range Burner to relieve them once and for all of the work, inefficiency and time-wasting trouble experienced in burning coal or wood. Only the most modern of gas ranges can rival the convenience and efficiency of your range when it is equipped with a QUEEN Range Burner. Certainly, no gas range can equal the economy of this modern home appliance because the QUEEN Range Burner uses low cost fuel oil (No. 1 Distillate). This grand new burner operates for more than seven hours on only one gallon of this oil.

Essex Heads League.

Essex Maple Leafs, behind the four-hit pitching of Jack Murray, defeated Tilbury, over the week-end, but not before the visitors threw a scare into the leaf camp, when they scored two runs in the 7th, to go ahead 3 to 2. Gamey Queen hit in the tying and scored the winning run in the home half of the 7th, with a home run to center. The Tilburyites again blew wide open, as they have done in every game this year, made five errors and, with six Leaf hits, Essex clinched the game with a 7-run rally.

First Inning.

Tilbury—Reardon struck out; Fletcher singled just out of Queen's reach, into right; Pendergast hit to Brown, who tossed to Queen to force Fletcher; Brackell singled to left but Pendergast went out on a ground ball to Pendergast, unassisted.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—J. Fourth Inning.

Essex—Queen made a fly catch on Pendergast's soft liner over second; Pendergast popped to right; a throw and throw of a hard hit ball by Ewing; Askin hit a line drive to Queen; Trotter and Fletcher to Pendergast; Queen bounced back to King and was out; Pendergast popped to Brown; Brackell hit a line drive to Fletcher; the runner on first hit so far that the ball was caught by Ewing.—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Seventh Inning.

Tilbury—King hit a line drive to center; Ballard walked on four pitched balls and seeing no one near second, stole the bag; Odette hit an easy fly to short left, which should have been the shortstop's ball, however Brown and Loebach both stopped and it fell for a hit; Ballard reached third and Odette second on the throw to third; Askin hit to Brackell, who threw to Ewing but the Essex catcher dropped the ball after Ballard knocked him over and the runner scored; Odette moved over to third and Askin was safe on second on a holder's choice; with Benoit at bat, Odette was caught off third, but in the rundown Brackell threw high over Ewing's head. Odette scoring and Askin moved over to third, being held there by ground rules; Benoit, batting for Chevalier, walked on four pitched balls; Benoit stole second, but Askin was out at the plate, Ewing to Queen to Ewing; Reardon was hit by a pitched ball, however Fletcher ended the inning lining out to Pendergast in center.—2 runs, 1 hit, 2 errors.

Miller, and when Reardon let the ball get through him Murray scored and Queen reached third; Brown hit an easy grounder to Askin, who errored on the hit. Queen scored and Brown reached first; Brackell bunted to first and when the first baseman also came in to field the ball, King had no one to throw to, so Brackell peached first and Brown scored; Pendergast singled to right to score Brown and Brackell moved over to third; Benoit came in from right field to relieve King, who replaced him in right; Pendergast stole second and when Benoit tried to pick Pendergast, who had a lead, off second, he threw into center field, both Brackell and Pendergast scoring; Art Miller singled to right; Loebach also singled to right; Art Miller stopping at second; M. Tornado Strikes County.

A tornado, the intensity of which never was known to have hit this district in the memory of the oldest resident, in fact it was the first one ever to hit Detroit, struck a swath through the north part of the county, on the outskirts of Windsor, shortly after 6 p.m. on Monday night, leaving a terrific toll of life and property damage in its wake. It is estimated the wind reached 250 to 400 miles per hour. The tornado, which the Detroit weather Bureau states was formed when a huge cold air mass moved into the area from South Central Canada in the wake of an extreme heat wave started near the village of Melvindale, in Michigan, smashed business places and rows of houses in River Road, killing two people, crossed the river at Ojibway, where it continued its destruction, crossing the Huron Line and No. 3 Highway, along the Grand Marais Road, doing considerable damage to the M. C. R. Round House and the Windsor Gas Plant, continuing up the Grand Marais Road again to Walker Road, where it again struck full force, levelling houses, cut through back of the County Hydro Station, lifting six box cars off the C. P. R. tracks and throwing them into the ditch alongside the tracks. It continued across mostly vacant land to Tecumseh Road, where two brick homes were completely destroyed, and then spent itself on Lake St. Clair.

Among the injured are Caspar Segrist, of Ojibway, who lived for years on Malden street, in town, when he worked for Harold Findlay, and Mrs. Jack Fleming, wife of the Essex Maple Leaf pitcher, who suffered a broken leg. The Flemings, whose home was on Walker Road, lost everything.

List of Dead.
Mrs. Daniel Fields, of Little River. Waldo Berman, of Ojibway, his wife, Joan, 19, and her newborn child which was delivered by Caesarian operation at Hotel Dieu.
Mr. and Mrs. Archie MacDougald, of Brighton Beach, Ont.
D. Waychuk, of Tecumseh.
Ulysses Soullège, aged 28, and his son Wallace, aged 3, of Sandwich West.

Mrs. Sadie Jones, aged 42, of Ojibway; her sons, Harold, 18, and Marvin, 10, and daughter, Frances, 8.
Donna Marie Fox, 13 months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Raymond Fox, of Ojibway.

Mrs. Catherine Ebbinghaus Passes.

Mrs. Catherine Ebbinghaus, widow of the late Julius Ebbinghaus, passed away at her home in Vimy Court, Talbot street, Essex, on Friday last. She was 87 years of age, and had been in ill-health for some years.

Surviving are a son, George, at home, and a daughter Jennie (Mrs. Allan Mills) of Windsor.
Funeral services, in charge of Rev. R. H. Parr, were held from the Hicks & Son Funeral Home, on Monday. Burial was in Puce Cemetery.

Mrs. Walter Jessop Dies.

Mrs. Christina Jessop, wife of Walter Jessop, well-known manager of the Oldcastle Farmers Co-Operative, died at her home on the North Talbot Road, Sandwich South Township, on Wednesday. She had been in ill health for the past year or so.

Deceased was always active in Ladies' organizations of the district, having been a member of Roseland Women's Institute and of St. Stephen's Church.

Her maiden name was Gibb, and she is survived by her husband, Walter, and three sons, Carson, Marshall and Manson, all of Sandwich South; also five brothers, John, Norman, Manly and Howard, of Malden Township, and David Gibb, of Amherstburg; and three sisters, Miss Sarah Gibb, of Amherstburg; Mrs. Albert Arner, of Kingsville; and Mrs. Fred Cornwall, of Andover.

Services will be held from the family home, on Friday, at 2 p.m., to St. Stephen's Church at 2.30. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Prior to the Tornado of Monday evening, Essex County had been visited by severe electrical storms and cloudbursts on Sunday evening. The first storm started about 4 o'clock and when it was over the streets of Essex were like rivers, the town's storm sewers being unable to take away the water. Between 10 o'clock and midnight another storm struck, with nearly as heavy a rainfall and again early Monday there was more rain. On Monday night, following the big wind, there was still another rain, but not so heavy. Terrible damage of crops may result if it should turn out hot, but the Detroit weather bureau states that cool weather will stay for at least a week.

Clarke-Ciphery Wedding.

Peonies and orange blossoms formed the setting in the Gesto United Church at 2.30 p.m. on Saturday, June 15th, for the wedding of Bernice Marion, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ciphery, of Gesto, and Ctn. Harold Edward Clarke, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Clarke, of Fenwick, Ontario, the Rev. Stephen Dunk officiating.

To the strains of the wedding music played by Miss Doris Elford, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She was lovely in a floor-length gown of white broadened marquisette over satin, made with a fitted bodice, full skirt and long sleeves, which formed points on her hands. She wore a fingertip veil and carried a bouquet of red roses, from which fell white satin streamers. She also wore a string of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Mrs. Jack Westlake, as her sister's matron of honour, was in yellow, made with a satin bodice and net skirt. Her head-dress was of matching net and she carried yellow roses with yellow satin ribbon.

Miss Betty Clarke, sister of the groom, chose ice-blue with matching head-dress and carried pink roses. Judith Anne Westlake, second in rank, made a charming little flower girl. Jack Westlake assisted the groom as best man, and the usher was Harry Colburn.

Before the ceremony and during the signing of the register, Miss Joan Peacock, of Kingston, cousin of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly" and "Through the Years".
A reception for 100 guests followed at the church hall, under the capable supervision of the Young Adult Class of the Sunday school.

Mrs. Ciphery chose for her daughter's wedding a blue printed silk dress with navy accessories, and a corsage of pink sweet peas. Mrs. Clarke wore a pale green printed silk dress, with white accessories, and a corsage of pink rosebuds.

The couple left by motor, the bride wearing a blue dressmaker suit with white accessories and a corsage of red roses. They will reside in Ottawa, where the groom is stationed in the service.

There is no fit search after truth which does not, first of all, begin to live the truth which it knows.—Horace Bushnell.

Linton-Grant Nuptials.

Pink and white flowers and ferns formed a beautiful setting in Grace United Church, at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, June 20th, for the marriage of Miss Norma Grant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Grant, of Cottam, to Lloyd Linton, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Linton, of Essex. The Rev. R. H. Parr officiated, and Miss Mary Lewis sang "Through the Years" and "Because" during the signing of the register. Mrs. J. W. Elsieley played the organ music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a gown of white satin and net, styled with full skirt and fitted bodice with net ruching outlining the neckline and short sleeves, with long matching mittens. Tiny satin buttons extended down the torso back. Her fingertip veil was of fine net with embroidered corners and scalloped border. She carried pink roses.

Miss Doris Linton was her only attendant and wore blue taffeta, the skirt draped and the fitted bodice had high neck and fastened with tiny pale green mittens of lace and a head band of pale green moiré of lace and silver carried tulleman roses.

Robert Taylor was the best man, and Evan Grant and Harvey Moore were the ushers.

A reception at "Sewdis", where arrangements of pink and white flowers were used followed.

The bride's table was clothed with the wedding cake, the top of which was recently used on the occasion of the bride's christenings with wedding anniversary. White flowers and tiny white tapers surrounded the cake.

The waitresses were Mrs. Evan Farlin, Mrs. Stanley Harrison, Misses Elizabeth Montgomery, Roberta Haggins, Dora Ferguson, Betty Woods, and Mrs. Margaret Tilley.

Mrs. Grant wore for her daughter's wedding a dress of dusty rose facemore crepe with white and black accessories. Her corsage was of white roses. Mrs. Linton wore pearl grey with white and black accessories. Her corsage was of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Linton left later for a motor trip north, the bride travelling in a soft blue dress with drape effect, with white and brown accessories and summi gold shortie. They will reside in Essex.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was fitted at several lovely showers, among them being a party given by the girls.

Confirms Death.

Mr. and Mrs. Jose Reeb are in receipt of a beautiful telegram, from R.C.A.F. headquarters in Ottawa, re their late son, P/O John C. Reeb, John, a former student of Essex High School, enlisted in April of 1943, and went overseas in November.

Royal Canadian Airforce, Ottawa, Can., June 12, 1946.

Mr. Jose Reeb, R. R. 3, Essex, Ont.

Dear Mr. Reeb: It is with deep regret that I must convey to you the information which was received from our Missing Research and Enquiry Unit on the continent.

The police at Hadsund have confirmed that the aircraft in which your son was flying was shot down by a fighter over Ove, Denmark, about mid night on August 29th, 1944, and the entire crew lost their lives at that time.

Due to the severe nature of the crash, the bodies could not be separately identified, and they were buried in a common grave in the cemetery at Ove. The grave is not numbered, as the cemetery is very small, and the local population intend to erect a suitable monument on the grave and full particulars of the crew have been supplied to local authorities.

May I again offer you my deepest sympathy in the loss of your gallant son. Best wishes to you, Cousins Reeb, yours truly.

ESSEX

FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1946.

Since Prime Minister Mackenzie King shortened his stay abroad to return home there have been in circulation numerous stories purporting to explain this haste to come back to Ottawa. One story claimed that this was due to complications arising at home over the long delayed budget. Another widely publicized story alleged that this was due to the serious disputes in the rank and file on the flag issue which found a joint Senate-Commons committee reduce 2,000 suggestions to a mere two flags. Still another rumour attributed the cause to events or decisions abroad from which had come reports of studies of defence revisions of the Commonwealth. Likewise, there have been other stories offered in explanation for the sudden and quick return of the Prime Minister to Ottawa.

However, it is stated backstage in Ottawa that while other reasons may be top secret, the main reason for the Prime Minister's return is the pressing demand for his most advisable presence here. The Prime Minister's return is being hailed as a victory for the government, and it is pointed out here, can why the Prime Minister had to shorten his stay abroad this being hinted back. War-time Prices and Trade Board.

In the latest report on the Cost of Living in Canada this being a closely watched item now in Ottawa on account of the labour troubles, price control, cost of the publicity personnel, etc., it is shown that in the Department of Agriculture is $13,953.12, including cost of living bonus and travelling expenses.

Veterans, who purchase new power implements, are allowed a discount in Canada and the same applies to all other implements, with the exception of wagons. This has been made known in Parliament.

No less than 23,396 prisoners of war were transported from Canada from January to the end of May, 1946, including none in January, 3,054 in February, 16,216 in March, none in April, and 4,126 in May.

Minister of Finance Rt. Hon. J. L. Halsey, has made the following statement in the House of Commons on the retail price ceiling of beef: "I would not like to give any encouragement whatever to the idea that the retail ceiling on beef may be raised. The wholesale ceiling on red and blue brand beef was adjusted a few weeks ago as an experimental measure. There has been much dispute whether the retail margin was too great or not. If the present arrangement is not working out well, consideration will have to be given to something better, but as I said at the beginning, I cannot encourage at all the idea that there will be any raising of the retail price."

The Canadian government has paid out no less than $12,677,809.16 in re-establishment credits during the past year of 1945, and from January 1st, 1946, until May 31st, 1946, such payments have reached a total sum of $2,710,127.12 during the time. This has been reported in Ottawa by the Minister of Veterans' Affairs, Hon. J. Macdonald.

It has been revealed in Parliament that the National Research Council had earned $1,306,997 in the six years ended April 1st, in rewards or payments for its services in the interests of private industry as well as other enterprises.

It is emphasized in Ottawa that the sale of wheat by farmers may be forced by dealers to purchase flour, any secondary commodity, when buying wheat for stock are entirely illegal since the regulations forbid specifically such sales. This is the reaction in Ottawa to the rumour that "tie-in" sales are being forced on some farmers who, it is pointed out here, can report such abuse to any agent of the War-time Prices and Trade Board.

there was a point change upwards in April, 1946, of 0.7 since it was 120.1 in March as against 120.8 in April, with the index based on 1935-39 being equal to 100, in foods rising from 133.1, clothing from 123.1 to 123.2, 120.4 to 120.7, and miscellaneous from 110.9 to 111.0. The principal price changes between March and April occurred in increases in butter, pork products and vegetables in foods, women's wear, footwear, in clothing, and furniture, hardware, and dishes in home furnishings as well as in gasoline.

"The best security we yet have for peace in the world is the British Commonwealth of Nations," said in an address in Ottawa the principal of Queen's University, Kingston, Dr. R. C. Wallace. "We have the greatest degree of stabilization we have ever had in the Dominion of Canada," said Canada's Minister of Agriculture, Hon. James G. Gardiner, emphasizing that this was accomplished through the government's price stabilization programme and indicating that prices were stabilized on a higher level than for any three-year period since the First World War. "It is obvious to everyone that freezing producer prices at the 1941 level brought undue inequity to agriculture because agricultural prices had not risen after the depression to the same degree as those of manufactured goods," said G. Russell Boucher, M.P., in Parliament. "Since 1941, the farmer has found himself handicapped by the fact that labour has been getting better wages and shorter hours of work in industry outside agriculture. The rural areas have been denied of farm help." "Because they wanted action, we sent the Canadian Fire-Fighters to the hot test spots in Britain, Plymouth, Southampton and Bristol," declared in Ottawa Smdr. Sir Ayler Firebrace, C.B.E., R.N., chief of the British National Fire Service.

Although the Second World War has ended a relatively long time ago, and wartime activities in this capital have lessened considerably, yet this overcrowded capital does not suggest the expected decrease of personnel in the civil service, even if a certain percentage of personnel has disappeared in recent months, with the Unemployment Insurance Commission's Department and Veterans' Affairs Department being witnessed by actual increases in staff. Royal Canadian Navy ship will train reservists in the Great Lakes, the St. Lawrence and off the East Coast this summer. The total for nine out of 43 departments, boards and commissions publicity department is shown in Ottawa to be no less than $248,525. "Did you ever hear of anybody knocking a theatre because they couldn't get a seat?" asked Senator McGeer in a committee hearing when fear was expressed by someone that too much encouragement may be given tourists and they would flood Canada, finding accommodation lacking and then returning to their homes "knocking the country," with Senator McGeer adding that the popularity of a place was increased by the increased number of persons who visited it. Dr. Frantisek Pavlasek, Czechoslovak Minister to Canada and who has had one of the longest stays in Canada, is leaving Ottawa for home July 1st. He has been in Canada since 1934 and he had the adventure of a visit from the German consul in Canada after Munich. Dr. Ecker, who demanded the keys of his official office. Dr. Pavlasek refused and he had the subsequent pleasure of seeing the Germans put back in their place as well as his country's freedom restored. When a speaker in the House of Commons suggested that the return of Mr. King would be accompanied by his taking the lead "in trying to get the session over before the very hot weather," or at least that this was his hope, considerable desk-pounding from all sides of the House stressed the desires of the other members on this point. Freezing for Home Vegetables and Fruits.

The popularity of frozen fruits and vegetables has been increasing at a rapid pace recently. Housewives in particular and the consuming public in general are realizing the many advantages of these products, both from the standpoint of ease of preparation and the ultimate palatability, says W. R. Phillips, Division of Horticulture, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. As with many processes which are new, many errors are being made which lead to disappointment in the taste and quality of the frozen fruits or vegetables.

Many of the errors frequently noted are easy to correct. Delays between harvest and freezing result in loss of much of the fresh aromatic flavours associated with freshness. The ideal procedure is to commence the processing as soon as the fruit and vegetables are harvested.

Vegetables, and some fruits, should be blanched before freezing, which is done by placing the product in boiling water or a steam cabinet for a short time. The purpose is to arrest chemical reactions, often referred to as enzymatic activity, which will cause taints or off-flavours.

The choice of package for frozen produce is important. Rectangular packages, with the contents clearly marked, permit a convenient arrangement in the locker with a minimum of space. The package should also be heavy, and the wool growers must for this purpose, heavily waxed cellophane or rubber materials are very satisfactory. A well sealed glass container is good but is liable to break with freezing.

After being placed in containers, the fruits or vegetables should be frozen before being placed in the locker. Most locker plants have available, sharp, fast, or preferably pre-freezers for this purpose. If an extra charge is necessary for this service it is usually found to be a good investment.

THE PROVINCE OF PROMISE...

ONTARIO'S rich mining country is still a hard—and chanceful—land. Copper Cliff and Sudbury, Porcupine and Kirkland Lake still entice the courageous. Whoever is 'anybody' in Ontario mining has been around here... in this northern region of mineral resources beyond calculation... after gold, nickel, copper, the platinum metals and silver. Today, new substances are constantly being discovered... camps and towns with mineral-sounding names are springing up... nothing that is of use to man will stay hidden longer than he takes to come for it.

A CORNER IN GOLD

In 1945, the province of Ontario recorded 15,225 gold-mining claims. In the previous year $25,000,000—salaries and wages—went to the 10,000 people engaged in the province's gold-mining industry and $30,000,000 in nickel-copper. During the war the mines of the Sudbury basin supplied the United Nations with all the nickel and platinum metals required for victory, yielding 1,800,000,000 pounds of nickel, 2,000,000,000 pounds of copper, 15,250,000 ounces of silver and 1,750,000 ounces of platinum metals.

The Mourners Go About the Streets

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

It is taking us a long time to grasp what is happening to the people all over the world — if we can be said to have grasped it at all. Even yet, our sympathies are confused and cloudy because they are qualified by impatience over the actions of other countries whose basic thinking is completely foreign to us. In Europe the black shadow of hunger is the background of everything. Is it too hard for us, in these lands of plenty, to understand how fear and desperation can color the thinking of whole peoples?

Few of us have ever seen a starving man or starving child. The closest we have come to it is the corner panhandler with his appeal for "A cuppa coffee." Because we have not believed in his need, hunger is not real to us.
But it is real enough in Europe. Yet, with every known agency of publicity driving to make the terror of Europe clear to us, we turn from it as we tend to turn from any other unpleasant item of news. But it isn't just a breach of good taste on the part of newspapers and magazines and movies aiming to emphasize the unpleasant dramatic with a crafty eye on sales. It is the truth. It is unreal to us only because it has never come near us. So we have been quicker to respond to the small grim individual happenings at home than to the awful travail of a world.

Perhaps this explains, even if it does not justify. We stand back and argue and theorize and procrastinate because we are out of sympathy with the millions. We think of them as war-mund and impractical, self-seeking and ungrateful. So we are begging the prim immediacy of the challenge.
While millions are dying we are bus-

Success With Turkeys Raised on Range.

Rearing of turkeys on range at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, has been carried on with success for the last four years. The major requirements for success are a clean range, plenty of succulent green feed, and an attendant to look after the turkeys who has nothing to do with chickens or barnyard hens, says A. G.
Taylor, Poultry Division, at the Farm.

The range requirements are a field on which no poultry have been reared for at least four years and on which no poultry manure has been spread durin g that time. The land should be well drained and there should be no stagnant water on it at any time. It should be first year meadow and be capable of producing a good crop of red clover and alfalfa with one of the tender grasses such as timothy. If the early growth is cut off about the middle of June the second growth will be ready for the poult in about ten days. If the poult are old enough to be allowed out on range before the hay is cut a small section on the south side of the brooder house may be cut off with a scythe and fenced with wire frames to keep the poult from wandering into the hay and becoming lost. When the hay has been removed the poult may be given the entire range. The amount of space required for a turkey range would be about one acre for 75 to 80 poult.

Where turkey poult are raised on the ground every precaution must be taken to prevent the spread of disease.
Bleakhead is the disease most likely to affect the poult and one of the best ways to prevent infection is to break all contact with the mature turkeys and barnyard hens. The person who looks after the poult should have nothing to do with hens or chickens and should keep out of yards and houses which they frequent. Poultry droppings carried from the hens or chickens to the turkey range are a sure source in infection.

Experiments with turkeys at Ottawa show that larger and healthier turkeys can be reared on range than on wire runs. The cost in feed consumed (mashes and grains) is considerably less with the range reared birds of the same breed and weight. During the growing year of 1943, an exceptionally favourable year for growth, Bronze turkeys averaging 21.8 pounds consumed 81 pounds of feed in 28 weeks on range and birds of the same breed and age when reared on wire averaged 20 pounds and consumed 98.3 pounds of feed.

Your Friends....
The Retail Merchants

YOU rely on them as friends, neighbours and active participants in the life of your community.
If anyone is sick your druggist hurries up the prescription; and often, if a doctor is not immediately available, he can and will render first-aid in an emergency.

And isn't it marvellous the way your local grocer and butcher cater to your wants and whims? What would you do without them? Your hardware merchant, too, has everything you need from tin tacks to wheelbarrows.

And think of the scores of specialty merchants whom you rely on for shoes, wearing apparel, kitchen ware and the thousand and one other things that add to your comfort. Life simply could not run smoothly without could not run smoothly without Canada's obliging retail merchants.
Ninety-nine out of a hundred retail merchants own life insurance and thousands of them are valued policy-owners in the Confederation Life

Year, the Confederation Life publicly to the retail merchants of Canada.

HOW TO CULTIVATE YOUR GARDEN

Cultivating your garden tends to promote maximum plant growth.
Latest scientific experiment has proven that creation of a "dust mulch" prevents a crust forming on surface and excluding vital air.
Cultivate often: keep soil, unless covered by mulch, well but not deeply stirred. Shallow stirring after every rain (when soil is dry enough to crumble)—kills weeds in sprout stage—destroys crust.

United Church Notes.

Services last Sunday were well attended, especially at Woodslee, where the church was about filled. Topic, "A Boy For Sale." Assisting in the services were the following: Miss Ethel Plant, who represented the teaching profession; Donald Smith, a carpenter; Dick Ruston, sport; Thomas Hooker, medical; Harold Robinson, law; and Alvin Hodge, the press. The above made their bids for the boy, as well as the minister, who asked that he consider the ministry as a profession. Donald Robinson took the boy's part. The choir sang as an anthem, "Give of your Heart for the Master." The closing song was "Living for Jesus."

The service was impressive throughout and many fine comments were heard as the people left the church.

Sunday services will be as usual, at Ruscomb and Woodslee. All are cordially invited to attend Junior Church and Sunday School will be held as usual. Children are especially invited to the Junior Church and Sunday school.

The W. M. S. Baby Band meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. Wilcox, on Thursday, June 27th. Program in charge of Mrs. Landgraf and Mrs. R. Allison. All Baby Band members are invited to this annual meeting.

Peace is the healing and elevating influence of the world. — Woodrow Wilson.

GESTO

The Gesto United Church choir held a very enjoyable evening recently, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Prosper Adams, in honour of Miss Bertrice Ciphery, bride-elect. The members presented her with a beautiful table lamp and China cup and saucer.

PUCE

Mrs. Wm. Davies left the latter part of the week for a visit in London, Toronto and New York.

The funeral of Mrs. David Martin was held from the funeral parlors of Neveu & Patry, East Grand Boulevard, Detroit, to St. Martin's Church at 11:30 Saturday, followed by interment in St. Simon and Jude cemetery, Belle River, at 1:30. The funeral was largely attended by friends and relatives from Detroit, Toledo, Piquette, Belle River and St. Joachim districts. Mrs. Martin had just completed a ten-day's vacation at their summer home at Ruscomb, and had attended Mass at St. Joachim and returned to Detroit Sunday night. Later, she was stricken with a coronary heart attack and rushed to a hospital, where she died Wednesday morning. The sympathy of the community is extended Mr. Martin, a former resident of this district, and his son, David V. Jr., of the U. S. Navy, who was unable to be present when his mother passed away.

Mrs. Campbell, of Toronto, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Thos. Hampton.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Brown, of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., who is summering in Belle River, visited the latter's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Morley, on Friday.

The bazaar and strawberry festival held by the Home and School Club, of Puce school, on Friday evening, was a great success. The booths were so well patronized that quite early there was little left. Then the town again took over the floor for dancing. Quite a number from the lake shore were present.

The worst storm of the season struck this place Sunday evening. Accompanied by high winds, some hail, and a heavy downpour, causing low parts of sidewalks and along the creek to become inundated. Late Monday afternoon the Hydro went off. Later a bad storm again took over. This did not seem as bad as the one of Sunday night. The citizens were surprised at debris, corrugated roofing and boards falling in widely scattered parts of the district, leading many to believe a plane had disintegrated. Later, when reports from the Windsor district came in, it was found that the debris had evidently fallen from the spiral of cyclonic wind and had come from Windsor.

Sunday night a tree fell across the road near St. Andrew's cemetery, and was a traffic hazard until removed. Most of the summer only, who could, packed up and went back to the cities Monday night and Tuesday, when the Hydro had not returned and rain continued. It is not known yet what the damage to crops will be.

Frank Merskin spent Father's Day with his parents in Detroit.

Donald Mero, who was recently discharged from the army, is visiting his uncle, John Girard.

Leafs Lose Tough One.

Our Leafs learned Sunday that a ball game isn't won till three men are out in the 9th, for they had Tecumseh defeated 1 to 0, with two men out and two strikes on the batter, in the fatal last inning, when the visitors grouped together two singles and two doubles to score three runs, and win a hard-fought game. In the last half of the 9th, Essex filled the bases with only one out, but Brown hit into a double play to end the rally. The last inning, in spite of the fact that it was only five o'clock, was played in semi-darkness, due to a storm approaching, which broke but a few minutes after the game. Mush Jessop, starting his first game of the season, deserved a better fate, as he held the hard hitting Tecumseh team to six hits in the first eight innings, no two of which were allowed in one inning. He weakened in the 9th, but should have had a shut out on Lavoie's lazy fly to left. The Leafs will have to learn to take better advantage of their scoring chances, if they want to win games, for had they played heads-up ball, they would have surely had more than three runs at the end of the game. In the third inning, they had the bases loaded and nobody out, and then only scored one run, in the fifth they had a man on first and third and only one out, and did not score; in the 6th M. Miller was on third, with no one out, and failed to score, and in the 9th they had three men on, on three hits, and again failed to score.

First Inning.
Tecumseh—Robinet popped to Art Miller; Sawyer struck out; Lavoie and Jackson popped to Queen—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Papineau took Queen's fly in short left; Brown grounded out to Jackson at first; Art Miller was thrown out by Sawyer—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Second Inning.
Tecumseh—Eddie Bruneteau lined to Loeback in left; Dunning struck out; Papineau singled to left, but Craig went out, third to first—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Parent lined a single to right; Loeback sacrificed; Gouin to Jackson; M. Miller was called out on strikes; R. Ross grounded to Jackson to end the inning—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Third Inning.
Tecumseh—Lappan was thrown out by Queen; Gouin doubled; over M. Miller's head in right; Robinet and Sawyer went out, third to first—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Ewing singled to left; Jessop worked Gouin for a base on balls; Bruneteau dropped Queen's fly to right and the bases were loaded; Brown hit to Papineau and Ewing was forced at the plate, the bases remaining loaded; Art Miller lined to Robinet in left; Jessop scoring after the catch; Queen and Brown both moved up a base on the low throw to the plate; Parent popped to Sawyer—1 run, 1 hit, 1 error.

Fourth Inning.
Tecumseh—Jackson struck out; Bruneteau popped to Ross at third; Dunning again struck out—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Loebach's fly in short left center fell for a hit; M. Miller hit to Jackson, who threw to Papineau to force Loeback; Gouin in trying to cover first, twisted his ankle, but remained in the game after a short rest; M. Miller stole second; R. Ross walked; Sawyer took Ewing's fly near the right field foul line; Jessop grounded out, short to first—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Fifth Inning.
Tecumseh—R. Ross threw out Papineau; Craig singled to center and stole second; Lappan struck out; Gouin grounded out, second to first—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Queen lined a single to center; Brown popped to Sawyer; Art Miller singled just inside first base bag; Queen moving over to third; Parent was tagged out by Jackson, on his hit along first base line. Art Miller taking second on the out; Loeback was out on a close play at first; Papineau to Jackson—0 run, 2 hits, 0 error.

Sixth Inning.
Tecumseh—Robinet drew a base on balls and stole second; Sawyer flied high to Queen at second; Jackson hit to Brown and Robinet was out trying for third; Brown to R. Ross; Bruneteau flied to Parent—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Gouin had to retire from the game, Craig went to the box and Lavoie took over center field; M. Miller doubled to deep left; with R. Ross at bat, M. Miller moved over to third on a short passed ball; R. Ross struck out; with Ewing at bat, and the count one and one, the Essex players evidently got their signals crossed, for on the third ball pitched to Ewing, M. Miller broke for the plate, and was an easy out when Ewing let the ball go for a called ball; Ewing was hit by a pitched ball, but Jessop struck out, 0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Seventh Inning.
Tecumseh—Dunning struck out for the third time, but not before he drove two long fouls to right; Papineau singled to left center; Jessop threw out Craig; Papineau moving up to second; the Essex battery here decided to walk Lappan but he reached out with the count three and nothing, and hit to Brown, who bobbled the ball, Lappan was safe at first and Papineau took third; Lappan stole second and Lavoie walked to fill the bases; Robinet hit sharply to R. Ross, who stepped on third to force Lappan—0 run, 1 hit, 1 error.

Essex—Sawyer went out, Queen and Brown and Art Miller went out, short to first—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Father Kavanagh Ordained.

On June 5th, at St. Anthony's Monastery, in Marathon, Wis., one of the fourteen Capuchian Fathers ordained was one of St. Mary's parish, Malden, favoured sons, in the person of Edmund Kavanagh, third son of the late Arthur C. Kavanagh and Mrs. Kavanagh (nee Margaret Fields). At the impressive ordination ceremony, Rev. Fr. Timothy, O.F.M. Cap., was consecrated in the Sacrament of Holy Orders by His Excellency, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Tracey. Present at this joyous occasion was Father Timothy's beloved mother, Mrs. A. C. Kavanagh, one of his sisters, Miss Rita Kavanagh, and two of his brothers, Bernard and Thomas, and his aunt, Mrs. Fred Linley (Theresa Fields) of Grosse Isle, Mich.

Father Timothy accompanied his family home, and on Sunday morning, June 9th, at 10:30 o'clock, in his parish church, sang his first grand high mass. Rev. Fr. Dominic, O.F.M. Cap., acted as deacon, Rev. Fr. Xavier, O.F.M., sub-deacon, and his pastor, Rev. Fr. J. P. Gleeson, assistant priest. Rev. Fr. Alphonse, O.F.M. Cap., was the special guest speaker.

The children's choir of St. Mary's sang St. Sylvester's mass, by Margzo, under the direction of Sister Esther, with Mrs. Harry Collins, A.T.C.M., at the organ.

After singing mass Father Timothy bestowed his blessing on the congregation and then went to the gayly decorated parish hall, where a sumptuous breakfast was served to the guests of honour, his pastor, visiting priests, his mother and brothers and sisters, nieces and nephews, aunts and uncles and cousins, by the neighbour ladies. About one hundred in all enjoyed the breakfast and later, from 5 o'clock, over two hundred relatives and friends came to a reception to meet and congratulate the honourable guest.

Father Timothy received many useful and lovely gifts, besides many spiritual bouquets and cards.

After a week's vacation Father Timothy returned to Wisconsin.

Eighth Inning.
Tecumseh—Art Miller took Sawyer's high, inside fly; Jackson singled through short and stole second; Bruneteau flied to Loeback; Dunning was purposely passed; Papineau singled to left and Jackson was out at the plate trying to score; Loeback to Jessop; Ewing held on to the ball in spite of being knocked over by the base runner—0 runs, 2 hits, 0 error.

Essex—Parent popped to Sawyer; Loeback grounded out to Jackson, unassisted, and M. Miller lined to Lavoie in center—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Ninth Inning.
Tecumseh—R. Ross made a fine stop of Craig's hot grounder and throw him out; Beausoliel, batting for Lappan, struck out; Lavoie with the count two and two, hit what looked like an easy fly to left, but it fell in front of Loeback for a hit; Robinet singled to right, Lavoie stopping at second; Sawyer lined a double to left, scoring Lavoie with the tying run; Murray replaced Jessop; Jackson doubled to the cars in right, scoring Robinet and Sawyer; Bruneteau flied high to Parent in center—2 runs, 4 hits, 0 error.

Essex—Lacasse went in to catch for; Tecumseh, Brackell, batting for R. Ross, singled to left; Ewing struck out; Murray singled to center; Brackell stopping at second; Queen singled to left, to fill the bases; Brown hit into a double play, Craig to Lacasse to Jackson—0 runs, 3 hits, 0 errors.

Eyraud-Hayes Nuptials.

At St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Malden, the Rev. J. P. Gleeson officiated at the marriage of Miss Evelyn Irene Hayes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hayes, of Malden, and Stanley F. Eyraud, son of Mr. and Mrs. Florant Eyraud, also of Malden. The ceremony was solemnized in the sanctuary, as the bride was a member of the Young Ladies' Sodality.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an exquisite gown of white chiffon with inserts of Alencon lace in the skirt. The bodice was styled with a sweetheart neckline, and long, fitted sleeves tapering into points over her hands. Her high-length veil was held in a heart-shaped coronet of satin studded with seed pearls, and she carried white carnations, sweet peas and calla lilies.

Miss Lorraine Eyraud, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Ursula Hayes, cousin of the bride, as bridesmaids, were gowned in pink and blue, respectively. Their gowns, identically styled, featured bodices of french lace fashioned with sweetheart necklines and short, puffed sleeves, and the skirts were bouffant double net-over-satin. They wore matching shoulder-length veils held in tiaras of French lace, and carried colonial bouquets of rosebuds and sweet peas.

Leonard Hayes, brother of the bride, and Norman Chochois, cousin of the bride, were groomsmen. Lorne Eyraud and Emmett McLean were ushers.

A reception for 100 guests followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Hayes chose for her daughter's wedding a flowered silk jersey gown, with pink roses, and Mrs. Eyraud, mother of the bridegroom, chose a lime green crepe gown, with red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Eyraud left later on a short wedding trip, the bride travelling in a flowered silk jersey frock with white accessories. They will reside in Malden Township.

Essex Juniors Beat Kingsville.

The Essex Junior Baseball team played at Kingsville on Sunday last, defeating the home team by a score of 8 to 7. The Essex lads were in front at all times, having scored two runs in the first inning and were never headed.

Wes Garrod pitched a nice game for Essex, being in a few jams due to faulty fielding by his mates. He struck out the last man to end the game, with the tying run on third. He also made a fine fielding play in the fourth inning, spearing a line drive with his bare hand, and throwing to second to double a runner at that base. Bill Loeback got three hits, as did Wes Garrod, Stan Trudell and Frank Koval.

All the boys got at least one hit. The Essex boys are playing their first home game this Sunday, June 23rd, at 2:30 p.m., at the Fair Grounds diamond. Come out and see the youngsters in action and give them your support.

They have played two games to date and have won both, defeating Colches-ter and Kingsville, away from home, so they're hoping to get a good start on their own diamond.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Donald Newman, who passed away two years ago, June 22nd, 1944.

I cannot say and I will not say that he is dead.
He is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since he lingers there.

For the old time step and the lads return,
Think of him faring on as dear in the love of there as the love of here.
Think of them still as the same I say.
He is not dead he is just away.

SHUR-GAIN Feed Service

MORE MONEY from GRAINS

Ontario farmers found long ago that it was more profitable to feed livestock and poultry than it was to market their grains as such.

Today they are feeding not only nearly all their own grain but large quantities of Western oats, barley and wheat.

Whether you are feeding Western or local grains, you can make more money if you add SHUR-GAIN Concentrates to your grain and feed BALANCED rations to all your live-stock and poultry than you can by feeding grain alone.

SHUR-GAIN Concentrates contain the Proteins

Minerals Vitamins

that are lacking in Grain and that are ESSENTIAL for Essex Born Man Awarded the Military Cross.

A great many of the older residents of town will be pleased to learn that Capt. Max Baker, of Chatham, will be presented with the Military Cross, by Viscount Alexander, Governor General of Canada, in Windsor, on Friday.

Captain Baker, a Canadian officer, loaned to the British Army, was with General Montgomery's 2nd Army, and it was at the battle of Aachen that he was awarded a citation from General Montgomery, which has now earned him the Military Cross.

Captain Baker was born in Essex, and is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baker. Harry Baker, the older residents will remember, owned and operated, for years, a tailor shop in the building now owned by J. C. Linton.

William J. Trimble Passes.

William J. Trimble, well-known retired farmer, passed away at his farm home, on the 11th Concession, Gosfield North, on Tuesday, at the age of 83 years.

Surviving are three sons, Wesley, of Windsor; Richard, of Gosfield North, and Earl, at home, and a daughter, Wilma (Mrs. Solomon Quirk) of Gosfield North; also three sisters, Mrs. Wilmot Littlewood, of Windsor; Mrs. Wilmot Birch, of Gosfield North, and Mrs. Archie Millen, of South Woodlee.

Funeral services, in charge of Rev. F. M. Ward, were held today (Thursday) from his late home, and burial was in Evergreen Memorial Park, Leamington.

Scout Camp at Rock Glenn.

On July 4th, nearly 30 boys from the First Essex and First Cottam Scout Troop, will leave for their summer camp at Rock Glenn, near the town of Arkona.

As it has been a number of years since we have had a real visitors' day at camp, we are hoping that every parent and every old Scout will take this opportunity and drive up and spend the day with the boys, on Sunday, July 7th. Bring your picnic lunch and enjoy yourself for the day.

Our camp site is one of the beauty spots of Southwestern Ontario, so make a date to journey up and see the boys in camp.

Leaders in charge will be Don Maedel, Weldon Findlay, Murray O'Hara, Allan MacGirr and Ted Strickland. Henry Meyer is the cook.

The boys and leaders will be looking for you on the first Sunday in July.

South Woodlee Mills Sold.

Thomas P. Hooker has sold his South Woodlee Mills to Clifford and Ernest Ruston, who took over the business on Monday of this week. Mr. Hooker, who came to Canada, from England, in 1897, purchased the business from W. H. and H. B. Knister, in 1909. At that time it was a flour mill and his main product was buckwheat flour, which was ground on a millstone, however, in 1913, the mill burned, and he then built the present chopping mill and has handled flour wholesale, and feeds, the past 10 years he having been manufacturing agent for Purina, pig and chick feeds.

Mr. Hooker also was agent for the Ford Motor Co., from 1913 to 1922, selling the first two Fords in the Woodlee district, in 1913. He well remembers selling gasoline out of a barrel by a gallon measure, and had one of the first gasoline pumps installed in the county.

Mr. Hooker will take a holiday for the present, then no doubt supervise his farm in Rochester.

Hickmott-Gale Nuptials.

Summer flowers decorated the Church of the Epiphany, in Kingsville, on Saturday, at 2:30 p.m., for the wedding of Miss Ruth Virginia Gale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gale, of Kingsville, and Roy Hickmott, of Cottam, the Rev. J. A. Davies officiating.

The bride chose a street-length dress of blue crepe, and wore a red dress, and a corsage of red roses and valley lilies. She wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom.

Miss Eleanor Gale, as her sister's bridesmaid, wore a red crepe dress, and white accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

Kenneth Hickmott assisted his cousin, as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Hickmott left on a trip to Niagara Falls, and upon their return will reside in Cottam.

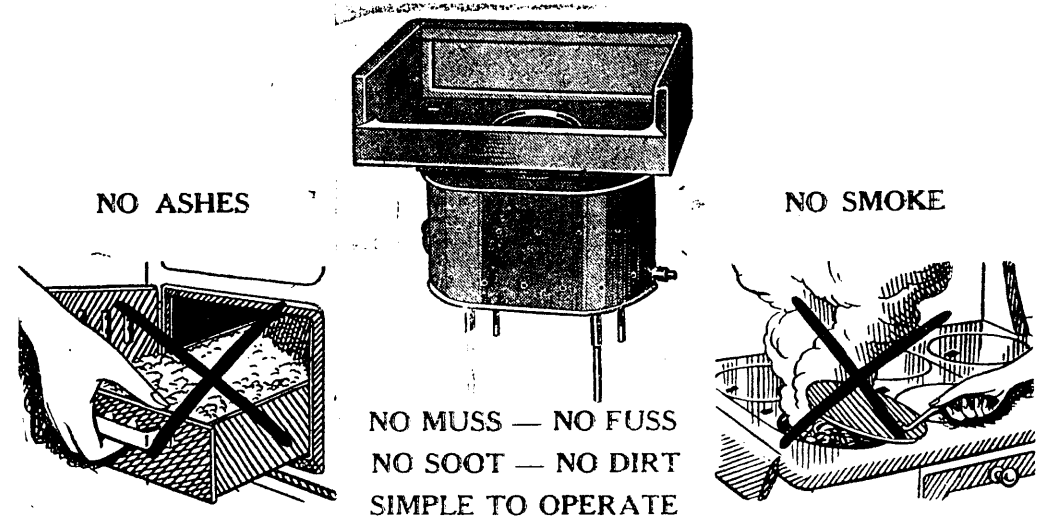

A reception followed at the home of the groom's parents, in Cottam.

No Record Set — But It Was Enough.

The 2.21 inches of rain that fell on Sunday, June 16th, was no kind of a record (compared to the 4.75 inches that fell one day in July, 1925). The total rainfall after Sunday, however, has been equaled by no other three-day period since 1943.

Sunday — 2.21 inches.
Monday — .83 inches.
Tuesday — .27 inches.
Total — 3.31 inches.

See The New Queen Range Burner In Action!

Here it is at last — the QUEEN Range Burner, bringing new convenience, safety and economy for every home now using a coal or wood range. No dirt or work, no smoke, no soot, no ashes, no need to worry about the supply of coal or wood, no wicks to clean or adjust.

The QUEEN Range Burner is a pot type burner which should not be confused with cut-of-date ring type burners in any way. In the QUEEN burner, the oil vaporizes from a cool pool of oil around the oil inlet in the combustion chamber. It will produce 50% more heat on 1/3 less oil — a burner with a six-year reputation in the United States. A 1/2 saving in operation cost under either manufactured bottled gas, or electricity. The remarkable economy offered by the QUEEN Range Burner is a result of the tremendous volume of air used in the heating flame. This burner actually burns 90% air, and will heat the oven to 400 degrees for over seven hours on one gallon of fuel oil (No. 1 Distillate). This great economy of operation is made possible by special features of construction that generate the greatest amount of heat from the amount of oil used. The QUEEN Range Burner is PERFECTLY SAFE — there is no danger whatsoever of the oil flooding the burner in case the flame goes out, since the special carburetor shuts off automatically.

Come in now and see this wonderful burner in operation in the store. Don't wait until fall to have the QUEEN Range Burner installed in your stove. We have been able so far to keep fairly well up with our orders. We will install the QUEEN Range Burner in your stove for only $75.00, complete.

Junior Farmers at Ridgetown Field Day.

The Junior Farmers of South Western Ontario are expecting Saturday, July 6th, to be one of the biggest days in their history, when the farm boys and farm girls from Middlesex, Elgin, Lambton, Kent, and Essex meet at Ridgetown Experimental Farm to hold their first Annual Picnic and Field Day.

Plans have been revised to fill the day with fun and entertainment for the over five hundred junior farmers who are expected to attend.

Of special interest to girls are the club exhibits which are being presented by the girls of Middlesex and Lambton. The subject of these exhibits are "Being Well Dressed and Well Groomed," presented by the Lambton girls, and "Cotton Accessories for the Club Girls' Bedroom," presented by the Middlesex Junior Institute.

To correspond with this educational feature for the girls is a tour of the Experimental Farm for the boys, where experimental work on corn, oats, fertilizers, and various types of permanent pasture grasses will be inspected under the direction of J. C. Steckley, superintendent of the Experimental Farm.

The Field Day is under the direction of T. R. Hilliard, Junior Extension Fieldman for Ontario, in co-operation with the Ridgetown Experimental Farm and the Ridgetown High and Vocational School staff.

Asparagus.

Asparagus shoots are now appearing in the garden plot and are a pleasant reminder that other fresh vegetables will soon be ready too. Asparagus should be cut below the bed. When cut stalks are showing it looks bad and is bad for the asparagus. The women of today appreciate the asparagus just as much as the early Romans did. They wrote about asparagus with much enthusiasm and it has been valued through the years, first as a medicine, like a spring tonic, then later as a vegetable.

If the asparagus bed is a large one, the homemaker will want to can as much as possible of this aristocrat of vegetables. This naturally will come after the family has had asparagus dishes to its heart's content. Asparagus may be served whole, cut up in pieces, in casserole dishes, in soups, muffs, short cakes and salads.

When asparagus is to be served in pieces, cut off the tips and reserve them. Cook the lower ends of the stalks for 10 minutes, then add the tips and cook 5 minutes longer. This cut asparagus is excellent served with cream sauce.

Asparagus stalks that are to be served whole should be cooked in an upright position, in a small amount of boiling salted water. This way, the tips, which require very little cooking, will be steamed rather than boiled. A narrow and rather tall container that will hold the asparagus in an upright position will do very well. The container and the upper part of the double boiler are most suitable.

No method of cooking will make asparagus as good as it is not washed and actually so that all sand and soil are removed. Before washing, remove the outer scales under which grit may be hidden. Wash carefully in water, lifting the asparagus out of the water instead of draining off the water.

Now that vegetables of all kinds will be coming along, meals can be built around them and with generous servings of fresh vegetables the family will be satisfied with less meat and bread.

The home economist of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggests the following recipes to help the homemaker make the most of the asparagus. The asparagus shortcake recipe is a nutritious dish, which can be served without rice.

ASPARAGUS SHORTCAKE.

1 cup fresh asparagus, cut into 1-inch pieces.
1 cup cooked asparagus, cut or in 1-inch pieces.
2 cups sifted pastry or flour.
1/2 cup sifted sugar.
1/2 cup sifted baking powder.
1/2 cup milk.
1/2 cup butter.
1/2 cup eggs.

Preparation: Wash asparagus carefully in water, lifting the asparagus out of the water instead of draining off the water. Cut into 1-inch pieces. Cook the lower ends of the stalks for 10 minutes, then add the tips and cook 5 minutes longer. This cut asparagus is excellent served with cream sauce.

ASPARAGUS "MEALIES"

1 cup fresh asparagus, cut into 1-inch pieces.
1 cup cooked asparagus, cut or in 1-inch pieces.
2 cups sifted pastry or flour.
1/2 cup sifted sugar.
1/2 cup sifted baking powder.
1/2 cup milk.
1/2 cup butter.
1/2 cup eggs.

Combine asparagus, potatoes, salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly. Spread on a greased baking dish. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375°F., for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Tilbury Defeats Belle River.

Tilbury came up with its first victory in six starts in the league by defeating Belle River 7 to 3, at Belle River.

Rogare Sylvester and Joe Penner worked good on the mound for the home team but their mates gave them poor support, so that six of the visitors' runs were unearned. Dick Benoit, for Tilbury, hurled good ball and had eight assists and one put-out to his credit. He also started a double-play. The winning runs were scored in the eighth when Tom Daigneau doubled, Bill Pendergast was hit by a pitched ball, Oederre and Benoit fanned, Warren Askin walked, filling the bases and Verne Ballard was hit by the pitcher, scoring Daigneau. Tilbury added three more unnecessary runs in the ninth.

Tecumseh Noses Out Harrow.

Harrow was off to a six-run lead before Tecumseh scored its first run in the last of the sixth—a four-bagger by Harold Jackson with no one on.

The visitors tallied their first run in the first on a walk and a double. In the third they added two more on two singles and two errors. Three were scored in the fourth, with two out, on four singles, a stolen base and an error. Their last two runs came in the seventh on two walks, a single, an error and an outfield fly.

Tecumseh added another run on two singles and two errors. The Indians scored two more in the seventh on two singles, an infield out and Brunette's triple. In the eighth they scored three on a double, two errors and a single. The ninth was the big frame for Tecumseh. Brunette made first on a two-base error by Baldwin. Dunlap popped out to first baseman Webb. Joe Savone was safe on a single. "TWO!" Tecumseh Noses Out.

Tecumseh was injured going into the bat. Gerry Cecile ran for him. Papienau made first when he was hit by a pitched ball and Maurice Lappan struck out. Cecile came to bat and hit an outside curve up onto the roof of one of the small buildings just back of left outfield and Brunette and Cecile scored to win the game.

Amherstburg Wins Close One.

Amherstburg Cardinals edged Kingsville 65 in a home tilt that put the Cardinals in a third-place tie with Essex. The Cards scored the winning run in the eighth when Wilf Robinson led off with a triple but was stranded and came down between third and home when Jim Scott committed an error.

Scott took third on the rundown. Wilf Robinson was hit by a pitched ball. Tressany running for him, scored. Jack Howe threw the ball into the outfield and Scott's score was easily from there.

Tecumseh had previously tied the score in the upper half of the eighth when four runs came in. But it was not until the ninth that the Cardinals won. Max Venge then struck out to end the game.

With the annual budget being discussed by every one in Ottawa from the lowly taxpayer who feels that they should not be even liable to such taxation to so-called "big business" which wants more inducements to carry out post war plans, it is now an inescapable fact along Parliament Hill that higher taxation in general than anticipated or desired will have to continue for a time, at least, until conditions become more settled in Canada and abroad.

It must be emphasized, and emphasized strongly, that failure to agree on the part of Dominion-Provincial Governments may some day lead to the creation of two distinct taxation structures or sets of taxations which might not prove popular with many Canadians in a practical sense outside of other possible complications arising from such conditions. But this point is not the whole story by any means, nor does it account for the rather slow process of gradual return to peacetime budgets. There are a number of what well-informed observers are inclined to call "uncontrollable" conditions affecting the economy of the Federal Government at this time and these, more than anything else explain the details of the budget decisions in certain lines or directions.

The Federal Government is faced with a situation which which causes expenditure normal increases to be affected throughout its expenditures and this is reflected in the main estimates for the current fiscal year of 1946-47, stressing, in no uncertain way that return to peacetime economy in Canada will have to be rather slower than most Canadians seem to realize, though the actual fighting has been ended for such a long time now. The total estimates for the year asked for $2,769,249,515 for ordinary demobilization and reconversion expenditure as compared with $4,650,540,645 for main war and demobilization in 1945-1946, with the ordinary expenditures for the current year showing an increase of no less than $97,503,000 over the ordinary costs of 1945-1946. This increase is accounted for primarily by various items totalling $104,102,000 which were attributed, directly or indirectly, to the war and then there was an additional $60,000,000 to provide for the "Baby Bonus" or Family Allowance payment for a full year as against only part of the previous fiscal year.

"The last word I should like to say is that as far as anyone can judge what will go further than anything else in helping to meet present world conditions is increased production and more effective distribution" said in part Premier King in Parliament. "There is the prospect of a good harvest but in some areas it has been, impossible thus far to find any means whereby large numbers who could be employed can be given work, because of lack of transportation for fuel, food and the like". These were part of his remarks on conditions abroad as they impressed him during his visit and meeting with leaders in the Old Country.

When Reconstruction Minister Howe was questioned in the House of Commons on the vital point if adequate security measures were taken around Canada's mines and plants connected with atomic development, the Minister replied emphatically "Yes". He had also disclosed on the same occasion Canada's total capital outlay on the Chalk River atomic development plant would be $20,000,000, but he could not say how much of that would be spent this year, with the estimated annual operating expenses there being $3,500,000.

The only assistance if it can be called assistance, which was made available in the production, handling, grading, shipping, storing, or milling of grains in Argentina by the Canadian Government is five or six samples, each of four or five pounds of wheat not more than half a bushel in all which were delivered in 1945 to Dr. Vivot, who was then the ambassador here, and that was done as a usual courtesy and on the understanding that it was the kind of thing which is reciprocal. This was stated in Parliament by Hon. Louis St. Laurent.

A report in Ottawa indicates that Ontario Labor Minister Charles Day has urged "more elasticity" in the administrative jurisdiction of regional war labor boards on Federal Labor Minister Humphrey, with these two having held a number of conferences in order to discuss labor problems, especially the operations of the regional war labor boards which they should not be so rigidly controlled.

"Never has there been so urgent a need for home-grown vegetables," said in this capital the chairman of the Food Information Committee, A. M. Shaw, who said that a quarter of a million Victory Gardens would be a good goal for this year. "I'm certainly glad to be home again," remarked Gen. Vokes upon his arrival in Ottawa by air after having been overseas almost seven years, being Canada's last divisional commander to return home and being the officer with the longest unbroken record of overseas service of World War II. "Twenty-five per cent more sheets of paper are going into the Canadian market than ever before," said in Ottawa N. B. Powter, Canadian official of the Direct Mail Advertising Association. "The current paper shortage is not due to a lack of pulp, but rather to a vastly increased demand for paper".

"I cannot say yet just what I hope to accomplish on this mission to Ottawa but I can say we in Chile have a lot to learn about Canada and your methods of agricultural production," declared here Agriculture Minister Humberto Mendoza, of Chile. "God spared my life and it must have been for some reason, perhaps, because my work there was not finished," stressed in Ottawa Adjutant Margaret Jones of the Salvation Army who had spent three and a half years in a Japanese internment camp, three years of which she was held up on a cot with her body almost entirely encased in a plaster cast, indicating a definite desire to return to her work there.

Alexander held a garden party at Government House in Ottawa and this event marked the first time in five years that such an event took place here. It is generally stated here that no shortage of bread or flour is anticipated to the extent which rumors would cause one to believe as imminent. A consumers' league in this capital has passed a resolution at a meeting asking that the Government should restore price ceilings on all essential articles, such as food, clothing, furniture, etc., relieving working people from the main burdens of rising prices and taxation. Several members of Parliament sent a crate of fresh, red and juicy British Columbia strawberries to the Federal Cabinet in the capital in order to impress upon the ministers the kind of fruits rotting as a result of the lumber strike in that province where the fruit-packing industry was so seriously affected by this stoppage of work. Canada has resumed trade relations with Bulgaria, according to a notice here by State Secretary Martin. Hon. James Glenn has revealed in Parliament that 27,400 war brides and dependents remain overseas awaiting transportation to this country, disclosing at the same time the matter of transporting fiancées to this country, disclosing at the same time that the matter of transporting fiancées of servicemen back to Canada would not be considered until after all servicemen and their brides as well as children had been repatriated. The operation of the Canadian passport offices are so great that it has been reported here that an official has estimated that the permanent staff should be increased over double for best results, with about 1,500 applications for passports being received weekly by these offices.

Save It to Send It.

Many persons have heard about the need to conserve wheat, meat, eggs and cheese, to increase the shipments to the hungry people of Europe. Every Canadian wants to take an active part in the conservation program but many are asking themselves how they can do their share. First, it must be remembered that every saving, no matter how insignificant, is of very real help because, the less wasted, the less bought and it is the food not bought that is made available for shipment overseas.

Meat is one of the foods apt to be wasted because of improper handling, storing and cooking. Meat should be unwrapped at once since wrapping paper draws juices from the meat. It should be stored in the coldest place available after being wiped with a damp cloth, placed on a dry plate and covered loosely, preferably with waxed paper. Many a housewife has had to throw away meat because she did not know that ground meat spoils more quickly than when unground. This applies to both raw and cooked ground meat. Cooked meat should be allowed to cool, uncovered, then covered

Sugar Beet Acreage Shows Steady Rise.

Announcement last week that over 26,000 acres in Ontario have been contracted for sugar beets this year, with an indication of further contracting, is considered by growers and processors alike to be the direct result of recent developments which have produced a brighter picture for 1946 sugar beet crops.

Although growers had assurance earlier in the year that beet prices would be highest in 26 years, there was no indication that sufficient labor would become available to handle crops, and contracting lagged behind expectations. Recent improvements in the labor situation is regarded as the main stimulus to increased acreage of beet crops.

German prisoners of war, in at least the same number as last year, are returning to Ontario beet fields now. Many have had three years' experience in beet culture, and their increased skill may make it possible for them to handle larger acreages than before.

Beet labor offices recently opened in Windsor, Delhi, Welland and Niagara Falls, by Canada and Dominion Sugar Company, to secure return of beet workers to the land, are reported to be producing favourable results. A company spokesman said that some beet workers who have been employed in wartime factories for the past five years are returning to beet fields this spring, through these offices.

Favourable weather for the spring planting season has proved a further stimulus to increased acreage of sugar beets.

The beet sugar industry in Ontario, which reached a low point in 1943, made some recovery in 1944 and 1945, re-establishment in the current year, and appears to be on the way to normal.

Synthetic Wools.

Science has not been able to duplicate all the good characteristics of wool in any one synthetic fibre. Some of these fibres feel like wool; others look like wool; while others do not resemble wool in character or use. Nevertheless, the wool grower must now compete with these new synthetic fibres, as well as the older fibres such as cotton and linen, in a restricted civilian market. If Canadian wool is to continue to hold its share of the market, the quality of the finished product must be the best possible.

Attention Farmers

If the weather has ruined any of your crops, why not plant sugar beets? It is not too late to get a good crop of sugar beets if planted soon. Last year, three-quarters of the sugar beet acreage was planted in June — and a fine yield was obtained.

There will be ample labour to block and thin beet fields seeded in late June. The sugar Company will supply seed free where beet fields have to be replanted.

Remember, there is still time to secure a good cash crop of sugar beets for 1946.

Kill Potato Tubs to Control Blight.

As a result of investigations of late potato blight and rot in the 1945 crop by the Dominion Plant Pathological Laboratory at Charlottetown, P.E.I., tuber infection may be prevented almost entirely by killing off the potato tubers toward the latter end of the growing season and leaving the crop on the ground for at least ten days. During that period the spores die and cannot cause infection, even if they are carried on the tubers into storage. If there are no frosts, it is recommended that the living plants be sprayed with a suitable and quick-acting chemical, such as weed killer. In any case, because of the almost certain presence of late season leaf infection, farmers are urged to adopt top killing as an extra late blight control.

The reason why late blight tuber rot occurs in storage, although not apparent at digging time has puzzled many growers. However, it can be easily explained, says R. R. Hurst, in charge of the Charlottetown Laboratory. Actually the plants have been attacked by the blight fungus which produces a great number of spores. These, in turn, contaminate the crop at digging time, germinating and infecting the tubers in storage. Damp storage conditions favour infection, but if good ventilation is provided, and the potatoes kept reasonably dry, the rot will be kept down to a minimum, for not only do the fungus spores require moisture for germination but they quickly dry up and die in dry air.

There are Boy Scouts in 47 countries of the world in addition to all parts of the British Empire and Commonwealth.

Fr. Murphy Addresses Holy Name Groups.

(Crowded out last issue) Wars do not solve the problems of mankind or the problems which arise from conflicting ideas and ideologies, declared Rev. John Murphy, C.S.B., when addressing 700 men and boys at a Holy Name rally at Saint John the Evangelist Church on Sunday.

Members of the Holy Name Societies in the parishes of Amherstburg, Essex, Kingsville, Leamington, Harrow and Woodville paraded to the shrine at the Ursuline Convent grounds for an open-air prayer and marched back to the church for the service and edifying benediction. The parade was headed by A. H. Triller, state treasurer of the Knight of Columbus, and J. A. McPharlin.

Rev. Edward Gordon Doe, pastor at Woodville, pledged the new members of the society, and Rev. F. J. Williams, of Kingsville, assisted by Rev. P. E. McKee, of Leamington, and Rev. R. Durand, of Harrow, was the celebrant of solemn benediction.

Reviewing present day world condition, Father Murphy said some people think they are witnessing the destruction of civilization in the west.

Hangs in Balance. "Others know and realize that it is not only political and economic issues which are at stake but our way of life, or life as we know it which hangs in the balance," the speaker observed.

"It's hard in the midst of promise and abundance to realize the terrible confusion which reigns over the sons of men. But these are troubled years. The problems of eight years ago are still with us.

"We've heard of the four freedoms. But we haven't heard so much of them lately. Freedom from fear with two-thirds of the European continent under Russian, from Russia, from war, with millions suffering and thousands upon thousands dead from plain cold, starvation; freedom of speech . . . a hollow mockery in Russia; freedom of religion . . . think of Poland, my brothers.

Not Same Worries. "Before the war," Father Murphy continued, "totalitarianism was our great worry. A few years ago, living wages were of great concern. The incidents of the last few months are proving to us that the problems which afflict mankind are not settled by war. Divorce, race suicide, juvenile delinquency are still with us. Wars never exterminate bad ideas. Such ideas and ideologies are only defeated by more attractive and made dynamic ideas."

Father Murphy referred to the futility of military men who think that force can make people peace loving and secure. The atomic bomb, he pointed out, has made such thinking absurd because the next war will be over before newspapers can announce the beginning of it.

Would Be End. "If some 300 to 400 bombs were dropped strategically, it would be the end of us. Amidst all this, it seems that Christianity is back to the point where we started from. The Sermon on The Mount seems to have had little effect upon men," he said.

Agreements between nations and between men are disregarded, he pointed out, and not love of God prevents men from doing wrong but fear of jail.

He said the Holy Ghost which transformed the Apostles who conquered the world has also given men spiritual manhood. "The miraculous is within us — all we need is the grace of God," he added.

(Crowded out last week)

Mrs. Harry Billing opened her home on the Cameron sidewalk, to 10 members of the North Ridge Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society, with the president, Mrs. Russell Raymont, in charge of the meeting and conducting the worship period, assisted by Mrs. George Raymont, Mrs. Roy Douglas, Mrs. Gladys Raymont, and Mrs. Joseph Fox, the theme of the meeting being "The Home Mission Work of the Women's Missionary Society."

Mrs. Stanley Noble, presenting the supply report, announced that the sale had been shipped containing new goods, including a layette, valued at $55, as well as numerous articles of used clothing and quilts.

Plans were made to hold an ice cream social on the church grounds, June 28th. Miss Ethel Ede, Mrs. Russell Raymont and Mrs. Andrew Cowan were appointed as a program committee, and Mrs. Glenn McCreery, Mrs. Roy Douglas, Mrs. Joseph Fox and Mrs. Gladys Raymont, as the refreshment committee.

Mrs. Gladys Raymont will entertain the Auxiliary at the next meeting on July 8th.

Cherry Prices Remain Same as Last Year.

Cherry prices will be the same this year as last, according to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The ceiling is a general one for all Canada and covers sweet and sour fresh cherries whether home-grown or imported. Announcement is made in board order of notice June 17th.

Producer ceilings on sales to the consumer are $1.00 for a six-quart flat basket, $2.11 for a 4-quart flat basket, $2.26 for an 11-quart flat basket, $4.01 for a 15-pound box, $6.18 for a 25-pound box, and 75¢ for a 35-pound crate.

Wartime Prices and Trade Board officers report that a satisfactory quantity of imported cherries is already on the market and it is expected that the Canadian crop will be equal to that of last year.

Growers' ceiling prices for Ontario, British Columbia or imported cherries are the same for all parts of Canada but vary according to class of customer.

Air Conditioning for Chemical Workers.

A new air conditioning system which gives workers in the most highly polluted atmospheres, for example in chemical factories, air as fresh and pure as in the country, was recently put into production in Britain. This system keeps the atmosphere absolutely free from injurious fumes even when the windows are tightly closed. Besides eliminating smoke and dust and gases such as carbon monoxide from the air, it also acts as a deodorizer and germicide. The system is operated by means of units which are fixed to the wall or ceiling and are plugged into an electrical point by means of a bayonet or plug fitting. The air is drawn through a centre grille by means of an electric fan and, after passing through a special chemical filter, it is passed out of the unit through the side louvers which are so arranged as to prevent the creation of draughts. The dimensions of the unit are small: 10 1/2 inches (265 mm.) in diameter and 5 inches (127 mm.) deep. The current consumption is small, being comparable with that of a 40 watt lamp.

NOW...You Can Block Beets By Machine

The knives and discs of an ordinary cultivator can be set to block sugar beets successfully when driven across the rows. The machine cuts out 11 inches in every 14 of the row and leaves 3 inches standing. In most cases, this 3-inch space contains the desired single sugar beet plant. The finished field looks like a perfect checkerboard of plants.

Howard Richardson Writes From Bogota, Colombia.

The following letter, from Howard Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Richardson, and dated Bogota, Colombia, June 28, will be of interest to his many friends in Essex:

Dear mother: We have been here exactly one week this evening so it's high time I brought you up to date from my last letter, written in Colombia, at Cartagena. Our first week in Bogota certainly flew by while our hearts and lungs and heads got used to this 8,600 feet altitude. We are now feeling quite normal again fortunately.

Cartagena was a beautiful sight as we approached from the Caribbean Sea, nestling there on several small islands in front of a backdrop of low green mountains. Old Spanish forts guarded the harbour entrance where we took on board our black Colombian pilot, in fancy white uniform. He did the quaint trick of staying on the ship for all his meals and sleeping on a cot in the wheelhouse for the 24 days that we were in port discharging cargo.

The rainy season there was just starting that very day so we had terrific humidity, with several heavy rainstorms, including one tremendous tropical electric storm, with one terrific bolt hitting the far end of the very pier we were tied up to. But it apparently caused no damage. It reminded me so much of a heavy bombing raid in London, with that one heavy crash just like a bomb landing nearby. That was at 1 a.m., just as I finished a cold shower, before getting to bed to perspire more gallons.

We went up into the town, smelling all the smells and being curiously followed by various hangers-on furiously talking Spanish. There are a great many Negro people in this hot country and it sounds strange to hear them all talking Spanish. We invited Mrs. Davenport to come with us and she was so thrilled and pleased. We got a letter from her today, from Caracas, where she was enjoying her visit with her son and future daughter-in-law (a Venezuelan girl). We all got a taxi out to the Hotel del Caribe, a large new hotel, on the seashore, 2 miles out of town, where we enjoyed walking around its delightful, airy, modern rooms and enjoyed a cooling drink outside.

A few minutes after the ship docked the British vice-consul, Mr. Bentley came aboard looking for us. Mr. Stewart had written him about us. The following evening he arranged a delightful dinner party for us at the same hotel, after going to his interesting Spanish type open air home, where we were joined by his brother-in-law (and senora) Pedro Bossio, acting manager of the Royal Bank of Canada branch there. Mr. Bentley's wife is a pretty Colombian, who speaks very little English, so we had an interesting mixture of Spanish and English at our delightful dinner party. The next day we spent some time looking around the shops and then went out to the hotel for a short swim in the surf. We came back to town, going to the Fishing Club, where we had arranged to meet a Colombian couple we had liked on board ship, and their cousin, who lived in Cartagena. Mrs. Davenport had left us the day before to get a plane for Caracas and we were so sorry to say goodbye to such a nice lady. The Fishing Club was a quaint old place but we enjoyed some unusual food there, although it wasn't as good as the hotel. About midnight that night the ship began to move again and I went down into the engine room with the chief engineer while all the signals were being sent down by the captain. There were two big Diesel engines nicely painted.

The following morning we entered the mouth of the muddy Magdalena river at breakfast time, and soon were tied up at our dock at Barranquilla, in more stifling heat even than at Cartagena. It was ever a mile from the city proper and about 3 miles from the big hotel where we finally checked in late in the afternoon. The British Vice-Consul there had one of his men waiting to meet us, and I went to the town with him, arranging for our plane passage to Bogota, and for forwarding our trunks up the river by paddle-steamer. I came back to the ship for lunch, got packed and then had to help the crew locate our trunks down in a hold and finally managed to get the stevedores to unload them, where they went to the customs house. After another cold shower and a change of clothing, we left the ship with our nine pieces of hand baggage and took them to the customs house also, where we got everything cleared without trouble, at the small cost of $2.00.

Finally, we arrived at the lovely El Prado Hotel, in a much cooler part of the town, away from the river. It had a beautiful swimming pool and outdoor dancing, which we enjoyed on the Saturday night, after a few hours rest in bed, since we were completely exhausted by that time from the heat. Even at 1 a.m. it was too hot to dance much outside. Of course, there were plenty of various types of palms in both Cartagena and Barranquilla. Even here, in cool Bogota, there are a few of the harder types since it does not freeze here. Sunday we lounged around the pool, kept cool and then repacked in the evening after having had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Bateman, the British Vice-Consul. The following morning we checked out of the hotel and took a taxi to the airline office, where our excess baggage was weighed and checked, and we then bumped out to the airport, 10 miles away, in a bus. By this time we were cooked again and then something was wrong with one of the propellers on the plane, so we didn't leave till two instead of 10.45 — my first ride on a commercial airplane. The three hour flight over jungles and then hundreds of great mountains passed too quickly just after we climbed up over a terrifically high cliff that marked the beginning of the great long flat plain called "The Sabana," at the far end of which Bogota lies, surrounded on three sides by mountains 1,000 to 2,000 feet above the city. It was a perfect day for the flight and the cloud effects were amazing. We checked in to the hotel in the center of the city five minutes walk from the office, feeling tired but more groggy from the high altitude. We moved from the hotel Saturday night to this nice furnished apartment temporarily, at $15 per day, all expenses paid. Please write soon.

HOWARD.

The Sights and Sounds of London.

By Lewis Milligan.

I arrived in London last night, and before retiring I took a walk down the Strand toward Trafalgar Square. The street was half-lighted and the shop windows were in darkness, and my first impression was one of fearfulness. But to the throngs of people, who all seemed to be going in the one direction that half-light must have been broad daylight compared with the blackouts they had walked through for six long years of war. I had not gone more than fifty yards when I met my first London "character," of which the city has a great variety. He was an elderly man of about six foot six, and at first I thought he was a police inspector for he was dressed in a dark uniform and had a row of medals on his breast. He was talking aloud, apparently to himself, and looking down on the throng around him. The only words I could make out as I passed him by were, "Every country in the world." I presumed that he was soliloquizing upon the cosmopolitan nature of the throng.

That is a good description of a London throng in daylight, for, although the great majority are English, Negroes, Hindus, Chinese sailors, soldiers and civilians of every cast and color mingle with the crowds. Another character was a little thin man with a short, nearly white apron. He stood at the entrance to Charing Cross Station with a basket in front of him containing boiled crabs which he was offering for sale to the passers-by. Buses, double-deckers, and brightly lit, swept swiftly past and seemed in imminent danger of toppling over as they swung around intersections. Trafalgar Square, with Nelson in lonely meditation on the top of his column, and the lions on guard at the base, was deserted.

The following morning was cool and sunny, and the Strand began to wake up about 7.30, with garbage men and street cleaners and a few stragglers hurrying to work. Gradually the number increased and about 8.45, when the buses and the underground began to unload their human freight, the sidewalks were suddenly thronged with city toilers. A London Bobby stood at the corner opposite my hotel, with his feet apart and arms folded, placidly surveying the eager throng. Along the upper sides of the buses were large signs advertising such commodities as "Borwick's Baking Powder," "Gilbey's Gin," and "Jey's Fluid." A van passes inscribed with the legend: "City of Westminster Salvage. We collect paper." Directly opposite the old "Café de Paris," once the home of nightly gaiety, but now closed and looking anything but gay.

Beggars are not as much in evidence on the streets as they used to be in the old days. The first I came across were three men standing in the gutter; one middle-aged, played "Guns, Night at (noonday)" on a cornet; the second bore a sign on his breast, "Money Blind," while a third, an old man with his eyes closed, held out a box to the passers-by. A little further on was a man of about sixty with one eye. He looked strong and healthy enough, and his only appeal for charity seemed to be that one eye and a veteran's ribbon on his breast. Later on, down a side street, I came across two men in the middle of the road, one playing an accordion and the other a clarinet, while two youngsters stood on the sidewalks holding out their hats.

This evening I saw two young men standing in the middle of the road entertaining a line of people waiting outside of a theatre. One, a thick-set, snub-nosed chap with long hair, was reciting lines from Shakespeare's plays; while the other, dark and Jewish-looking, was vigorously drawing a picture on a square piece of cloth on one's knees. When the reciter had finished his piece he held up the picture to the crowd and said: "My friend here has drawn this picture, as you have seen, under difficulties. I thank you for your kind attention, and while my friend is waiting upon you for your contributions I will give you a scene from the Merchant of Venice." As I walked away, I could hear him rolling out in dramatic tones the measured Boys and Girls Active Victory Gardeners.

A quarter of a million Victory gardens are needed in Canada this year to help meet the urgent wants of the world's hungry, say officials of the Canadian Food Information Committee. In other words, 25,000 more backyards and vacant lots should be cultivated this summer than in 1945. Not all the Victory gardeners across the Dominion are grown-ups. Many public school boys and girls, too young to go fruit picking and helping on the farm with their older brothers and sisters are already busy with spade and hoe.

In many Canadian cities sturdy youngsters work every day in school gardens, doing all but the heaviest work themselves, planting and cultivating the vegetables which will release more wheat, meat, cheese and eggs for hungry children in war-torn countries. Grade V and VI pupils in one large Ontario city where school gardens have been flourishing ever since the first world war do practically all the work on their community plots, preparing the ground each fall, seeding and fertilizing in the spring, weeding and hoeing during the summer holidays. Last year they had a record crop of kitchen garden vegetables of all kinds, including 1,000 cabbages and 500 cauliflowers. This year they are hoping for an even greater yield.

Juvenile Victory gardeners can share with the hungry through the gardens in their own backyards, too, the Food Information Committee points out. Already hundreds of them have planted their small plots, but hundreds more of those plots are needed if Canadians are to score a bull's eye on that 250,000 home garden target for 1946.

periods of the Immortal Bard. Almost within earshot of this performance stands the statue of Shakespeare, in Leicester Square, leaning on a pillar and pointing with one hand at a scroll inscribed with his words, "There is no darkness but ignorance." The forearm however was missing, apparently knocked off by the blast from one of the German bombs which demolished several of the buildings in the Square. It is a remarkable thing that very few of the numerous statues and memorials in London were damaged by the blitz, although around about them buildings were shattered.

Resuscitation

Pointing out that a knowledge of resuscitation can be of great aid in preventing drowning, gas poisoning and electric shock fatalities, the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations offer a large illustrated poster dealing with artificial respiration by the prone pressure method.

The three simple preliminary rules of resuscitation are easy to remember and administer. They are:

Drowning.
Quickly remove victim from water and place on ground or other hard surface. If possible have head slightly lower than rest of body, so that water and other liquids will drain away from victim.

Electric Shock.
The victim must be freed from the contact as promptly as possible. Use a dry stick, dry rope, dry coat or other nonconductor. The use of your own hands is dangerous and may add another victim to the accident.

Gas Asphyxiation.
The first thing to do is to get the patient into fresh air quickly. Fresh air does not mean out of doors in cold weather. Do not breathe gas yourself, even for a short time. If it does not overcome you, it will cut down your strength.

Ontario production plants may obtain copies of the timely poster on application at the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, 600 Bay Street, Toronto 2.

Eat Less for Health.

Fortunately for Canadians, say national nutrition experts, they can safely cut down on some foods and still support the work of feeding the world's starving peoples. Whole wheat and Canada Approved breads are not only more nutritious, but are also more economical, according to officers of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa.

The thing most important is what we do, not what we say. God's open secret is seen through grace, truth and love. Mary Baker Eddy. Sweeter than the halms of Gilead, richer than the diamonds of Golconda, dear as the friendship of those we love, are justice, fraternity, and Christian charity.—Mary Baker Eddy.

MOVIE STARDOM GOES TO JASPER

One of Paramount's forthcoming pictures, "The Emperor Waltz," is in process of production and Jasper National Park has been chosen as the "shooting ground" for important parts of this spectacular picture. Above are seen four of the key people in its production — (1) Joan Fontaine, (2) Bing Crosby, (3) Charles Brackett, (4) Billy Wilder. The centre is pictured Mount Edith Cavell opposite Jasper Park Lodge. The Jasper mountains and scenery fit the director's requirements perfectly. A special train brought the stars and a large cast to Jasper to do a three-week job in the Canadian Rockies. Bing Crosby is looking forward to testing his great golfing skill on the famous Jasper Park Lodge championship course.

A MESSAGE FOR THOSE WHO NEED TRAINED WORKERS

I recommend to you CANADA'S VETERANS...

To take full advantage of the great future possible for Canada, Canadian business will need men of courage and initiative — purposeful men of sound judgment. I know where such men may be found for I have worked with them, lived with them and fought with them. They are Canada's veterans and I am confident that the loyalty, initiative and unflagging determination which made them the best troops in the world, will also be the qualities so essential in Canada's business life.

Many are already skilled tradesmen, and many have a sound foundation of skills on which wise employers may build. I know of no better man-power supply in the world than the men and women from Canada's armed forces.

H. D. G. Crerar,
General

CONSIDER THESE SERVICE SKILLS

ARMY TRADE FITTER

Only one of 216 army trades, the trade fitter was trained to make and re-work or reworked parts of guns, power trains, gearing units, valves and machine tools. He had to follow simple sketches and blueprints, and among other duties, make parts from metal castings, forgings and stock. A knowledge of the working properties of steel and non-ferrous metals was essential. He typifies thousands of veterans available to industry today.

ELECTRICAL ARTIFICEER

In the navy, this man maintained electrical navigation equipment, lighting systems, telephone switches and was a specialist in many naval electrical installations. He was a skilled machinist, qualified for general machine work and for manufacturing and repairing electrical equipment. With on-the-job training he would be capable of house and industrial wiring.

STATIONARY ENGINEER — R.C.A.F.

His duties were the installation, operation, overhaul and repair of all heating equipment used by the R.C.A.F. He had a knowledge of steam fitting, valves, pumps of all types and underground and overhead distribution systems. He holds a current provincial first, second or third class certificate. This is only one of the many specialized trades in the R.C.A.F.

Farm Forum Goes Rolling Along.

By Ralph S. Staples.

If you saw one of your farmer neighbours starting his car or hitching his team to the sleigh on a snowy Monday evening and if you asked him where he was going he would probably tell you that he was going to attend the Farm Radio Forum meeting. He would probably invite you to go along. Certain it is that a large number of Farm Radio Forum meetings were held in Canada during this season, in fact, a much larger number than in any previous year. The total of Farm Forum meetings held and reported in all Canada is 11,326 this year as compared with 10,449 last year and 9,496 the year before. Increases in the number of Forums were registered in British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec with Prince Edward Island holding its own.

If you are not familiar with Farm Forum, you should attend a meeting at the earliest opportunity. This will be when the meetings begin next November. Essentially a Farm Forum is a small group of people who meet Monday evening in a home or a school to discuss some vital problem related to agriculture and rural living. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation produces a broadcast especially for these groups. After the broadcast the group leader starts a discussion based on material provided by the National Farm Forum Findings are written and mailed to Provincial Farm Radio Forum Findings office for tabulation and summary. The following Monday night the Provincial Secretary has four minutes of the broadcast time to report the general consensus of Forum opinion to the groups.

Farm Forum is unique in that it combines a radio broadcast, printed material, group discussion and written reports from the groups. The more enterprising Forums see that their local weekly newspapers receive a report of the discussions. By carrying the discussion to its wider circle, the weekly newspaper makes the Forums a much more useful institution. The result is a thoroughly democratic and Dominion-wide adult education project. The members of Farm Radio Forum become most enthusiastic about the Forum method of discussion. "Farm Radio Forum makes the community a better place to live," says a Forum in Prince Edward Island. "It broadens our outlook on many different subjects," writes one in Quebec. And from one in Alberta comes, "It creates a sense of unity among farmers." Radio does provide an opportunity for consolidation of farm opinion that never existed in previous generations. National Farm Radio Forum is really a neighbourhood meeting but a neighbourhood meeting on a national scale. It is so conducted that every person in every Forum has the opportunity to make his or her opinions known and to exert a real influence on the conclusions reached.

Nor should it be thought that Farm Forums are just talk and nothing more. Forums are action groups. They are active when they think something should be done and they are not slow about taking action themselves when there is something they can do. Over a hundred different types of action projects are being carried on in Forum communities across Canada. At any one moment almost half of the Forums in the country are actively engaged in some type of project which is of considerable importance. Projects range from the way from a campaign for the removal of the warble fly or clearing away of the road to the organization of a local union or a larger area of social administration. The plan of action is to have a series of Forums in operation in parts of Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan and Northern Ontario as well as in parts of the other provinces. This year National Farm Radio Forum will begin on November 17th and will continue for five months as usual. Subject matter of some of the series will be Scientific Advances in Agriculture, Farm and Industrial Labour Relations, Rural Living Standards, and the National Farm Radio Forum is sponsored by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the Canadian Association of Agricultural Extension Workers and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Canadian Legion Educational Services.

It has recently been announced by the Department of Veterans Affairs that the services now being rendered by the Canadian Legion Educational Services have been extended for a period of one year and are now available to veterans as well as members of the Armed Forces. The services available include both academic and vocational correspondence courses, practical training courses, as well as use of the C.I.L. reference library and of occasional bulletins and manuals.

Members of the armed forces will still apply for these courses through the Unit Educational Officer. Veterans, however, will apply to the Department of Veterans Affairs, 327 Queen's Avenue, Windsor, the Veterans Affairs travelling consoliators who cover the district at regular intervals.

There is no charge whatsoever for any of these courses and they in no way affect the Veterans' entitlement to training under the Veterans' Rehabilitation Act, or the use of his credit under the War Service Grant Act, or his eligibility under the Veterans' Land Act. They should be regarded as supplementary to training under the Veterans' Rehabilitation Act, rather than as an alternative to it.

The course and reading materials available should prove of value to the veterans who wish to take a refresher course in matriculation subjects while awaiting admission to university or training re-establishment institute. They also provide an excellent means of completing matriculation, for men and women who do not wish to take full time training. Some of the courses will assist veterans on small holdings to become better versed in such matters as poultry raising, market gardening, and bee keeping. It is hoped that discharged men and women will take full advantage of this opportunity to take useful training in their spare time and without affecting in any way their entitlements to any benefits.

Medicine Labels.

Importance of labels on medicine containers is stressed by the Department of National Health and Welfare, which warns against the indiscriminate use of drugs and pharmaceuticals without precise medical direction. The Food and Drug Act requires a label on all drugs sold in packaged form and that it shall truly reveal the nature of the contents. Take the trouble to read the label.

Food for Outings.

Organizers of girls' and boys' summer camps are invited by the Department of National Health and Welfare to apply to its Nutrition Division at Ottawa, or to the provincial health department, for a copy of "Camp Feeding," a little booklet on camp diet. They remind camp organizers of the importance of food for growing youngsters, and of the leading place food occupies on picnic or outing.

Peace is the healing and elevating influence of the world.—Woodrow Wilson.

Just like a mother senses her child is ill by the pallor of its cheeks, farmers are able to spot an unhealthy plant by the appearance of its leaves and stems. An early recognition and study of these symptoms enables the grower to prescribe a treatment to correct the difficulty. Oddly enough, all of these treatments were not discovered by science, some came about being sprayed with iron sulphate to stop a disease which caused rosetting of the leaves. The hired man spraying one-half the orchard with solution mixed in a wooden pail and the other half from a zinc pail. The portion of the orchard sprayed from the zinc container was cured and the other half was not. This led to the belief that the zinc from the pail contributed to the remedy, which fact was confirmed later. The third man in this case didn't achieve the fame of a scientist but nevertheless his cure, discovered by accident, is now accepted by science.

Government Loans Helping to Improve Farms.

Loans exceeding one million dollars were made by the branches of the chartered banks in Canada for the month of April, 1946, under the Farm Improvement Loans Act. A large percentage of these loans were intermediate term loans for periods up to ten years for the construction, alteration and repair of farm buildings. In view of the fact that the 1941 census figures disclose that 39 per cent of rural farm dwellings in Canada are in need of repairs, it is evident that the field for this type of loaning is extensive. It is estimated by the Administration of the Act that improvements will be made to over five thousand farms in Canada in the next year under the Act. Seven thousand five hundred farmers have taken advantage of the Act in the first thirteen months of its operation.

Farmers desiring loans under the Act can get full information from any chartered bank or from the Supervisor, Farm Improvement Loans Act, Department of Finance, Ottawa. Loans are made, under Dominion Government auspices, at 5 per cent simple interest.

Importance of Paint on Farm Buildings.

The importance of paint as a means of protecting farm buildings and equipment in order to provide longer life and better service is emphasized in a statement from the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

"There are a multitude of needs for paint around the farm, and the wise farmer does not overlook these needs," says the Department. "He knows that the cost of the paint and the labor involved is mighty small compared with the cost of repairs and making good which is the price of neglecting to provide proper paint maintenance."

"Good paint maintenance keeps buildings looking well, keeps surfaces protected and retards warping and checking of lumber. It improves the general tidiness of the premises, and gives the owner a well earned feeling of pride in his property."

The Department notes that a warm dry spell in the spring provides a good time to do outside painting, adding that "there is usually a good opportunity between the completion of seedling and the beginning of haying."

"The surface to be painted should be dry. Paint should not be applied when it is raining or foggy and the surface should be given time to dry after rain, fog, or dew before continuing to paint. During cold, damp weather, paints harden more slowly than in warm dry weather. Thus good weather in early summer or in the fall provides an excellent time to paint and satisfactory results can be obtained in the spring if care is taken to avoid painting over damp wood."

The Department gives directions to those farmers who prefer to mix their own paints, but notes that good ready-mixed paints are available and that they are simpler to use and make preparation of the job much easier than that of mixing the various ingredients by hand.

"Spray painting may be carried out with a much lower cost of labor than brush painting work," says the statement. "Some farmers who are also good mechanics have built their own paint spray outfits from old and new parts, complete with compressor paint tank, air tank and spray gun. However, if there is a painting contractor in the district with spray equipment, it is usually most satisfactory and economical to employ him."

"It should be pointed out," the Department adds, "that paint will not cure all ills, and that decay of woodwork is largely caused by poor design or faulty construction. However, after proper design, good water drainage, drips, flashings, ventilation, etc., are provided, further protection of the surface by painting is most important."

Controlling Inflation in Australia.

Australia has done a better job of controlling inflation than any other country in the world, according to A. C. Cameron, vice-president and general manager of The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Export Company, Akron, Ohio, who recently returned from a visit to the island continent.

Mr. Cameron has made three trips to Australia during periods of social and economic readjustments and is well informed on current business and political trends.

"You cannot possibly pay more than six shillings (30 cents) for a meal anywhere in Australia," The Goodyear executive stated, "and although they are short many items of food, they are making a heavy contribution to the European food supply."

The export official was high in his praise of competency in Australian government and the "wisdom of their fiscal policy." "The latter," he stated "is demonstrated by their high tax rate and their determination to pay as they go rather than finance their operations by means of foreign loans."

He pointed out that the high tax rate means 55 per cent on average incomes and as much as 95 per cent in the higher income bracket. "A 30 per cent reduction is promised by one of the political parties, to be effective after election," he observed.

Mr. Cameron said Goodyear had never regretted the substantial investment made in Australia in 1927 and concluded by predicting a long period of prosperity for the Australian people.

parts, complete with compressor paint tank, air tank and spray gun. However, if there is a painting contractor in the district with spray equipment, it is usually most satisfactory and economical to employ him."

"It should be pointed out," the Department adds, "that paint will not cure all ills, and that decay of woodwork is largely caused by poor design or faulty construction. However, after proper design, good water drainage, drips, flashings, ventilation, etc., are provided, further protection of the surface by painting is most important."

"SO LONG, MR. WHISKERS!"

JOHNNY USED TO HAVE FUN blowing dandelions, but the pay-off came later when he had to dig out Mr. Whiskers' offspring from the lawn. Now, thanks to C-I-L and chemistry, he has his fun without work. His dad simply eliminates the new dandelions with a new hormone spray called "Herbate" 2, 4-D.

YES, DANDELIONS, plantain and many other weeds can be made to disappear, leaving the grass to take over unmolested. "Herbate" is one of the newest of new chemical products that make life more enjoyable... for grown-ups as well as small boys.

SERVING CANADIANS THROUGH CHEMISTRY

Looking Ahead

Man-made bristles... Satisfying meat on the hoof... Weatherproof duds... Better fruit...

Here's a new brush that looks something like a question mark. But there's no question about it—nylon bristles will outlast by many times the bristle of the Chinese Hog. This particular brush is for cleaning coffee makers. It is only one of hundreds of new-type nylon brushes now coming on the market.

"All that they want" is the modern farmer's principle when it comes to providing salt for his livestock. With salt blocks or salt boxes in stables, fields and pastures, animals now help themselves, free choice, and grow faster, sturdier because of it. It's just another of the advances in animal nutrition that mark our times.

Durable water repellents that won't come out in washing or dry cleaning will soon be common in many outer garments. Not only will these give protection against showers, but clothes won't spot as easily. These products, such as "Velan" from England and "Zelan" from the United States, are becoming well known to the people who are making clothes for your new clothes.

Fruit that falls prematurely means waste to the orchardist. But chemistry knows a way to keep fruit on the tree until it's ready to be picked. With a hormone spray called "Parnox" which strengthens the stem of the fruit, "windfalls" can be almost eliminated.

Further information on any of these products is obtainable by writing: "Looking Ahead," C-I-L, P.O. Box 10, Montreal, P.Q.

Miss Miller Night.

Pictured above is Miss Miller and Principal J. A. Downswell, of the Essex Public School, taken by a Star photographer, on Friday evening of last week.

The "open house" at the Essex public school, on Friday, June 21st, in honour of Miss Minnie Miller, was a worthy tribute to one who has spent over a score of years' service in one classroom. Three hundred citizens and friends from Essex, Kingsville, Windsor, and from Birmingham and Vassar, Mich., were in attendance.

Most of whom registered their names in the guest book. Not a few expressed their amazement in the improvements made in the school building in recent years, special mention being made of the fluorescent lighting and fine quality of tone from the public address system over which came a ninety-minute program, as prepared and announced by Alex Dubs, with Mr. Kasurak, of the Radio Electric Co. at the controls.

Words of welcome were given by H. Harrow, chairman of the School Board and by Principal J. A. Downswell.

A varied program was presented, consisting of radio numbers, phonographic recordings, piano numbers by Lilla Garrod, Helen Allen, Rhoda Levi, and others.

Lilla Garrod presented the gift, a Stewart-Warner portable radio. Miss Miller expressed her gratitude to the teachers, pupils and to the assembled guests, over the microphone, which was heard in all parts of the building over the public address system.

The School Board provided refreshments. An evening of good fellowship came to an end by "God Save the King."

Controlling Inflation in Australia.

Australia has done a better job of controlling inflation than any other country in the world, according to A. G. Cameron, vice-president and general manager of The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Export Company, Akron, Ohio, who recently returned from a visit to the island continent.

Mr. Cameron has made three trips to Australia during periods of social and economic readjustments and is well informed on current business and political trends.

"You cannot possibly pay more than six shillings (80cents) for a meal anywhere in Australia," The Goodyear executive stated, "and although they are short many items of food, they are making a heavy contribution to the European food supply."

The export outlook was high in his praise of competency in Australian government and the "wisdom of their fiscal policy." "The latter," he stated, "is demonstrated by their high tax rate and their determination to pay for the goods they go rather than finance their operations by means of foreign loans."

He pointed out that the high tax rate means 55 per cent on average incomes and as much as 95 per cent in the higher income bracket. "A 30 per cent reduction is promised by one of the political parties to be effective after election," he observed.

Mr. Cameron said Goodyear had never regretted the substantial investment made in Australia in 1927 and concluded by predicting a long period of prosperity for the Australian people.

arts, complete with compressor paint tank, air tank and spray gun. However, if there is a painting contractor in the district with spray equipment, it is usually most satisfactory and economical to employ him."

It should be pointed out, the Department adds, "that paint will not cover all ills, and that decay of woodwork is largely caused by poor design and faulty construction. However, after proper detail, good water drainage, coppers, flashings, ventilation, etc., are provided, further protection of the surface by painting is most important."

Man-made bristles... Safer than the hoof... Weatherproof... Better fruit...

Here's a new brush that looks something like a question mark. But there's no question about it—its nylon bristles will outlast by many times the bristles of the Chinese Hog. This particular brush is for cleaning coffee beans. It is only one of a hundred of new-type nylon brushes now coming on the market.

ALL that they want" is the modern farmer's principle when it comes to providing it for his livestock. With the black or salt boxes in the fields and pastures, animals now help themselves, free choice, and grow faster, sturdier because of it. It is just another of the advances in animal nutrition at mark our times.

Variable water repellents won't come out in wash or dry cleaning will soon be common in many outer garments. Not only will they give protection against stains, but clothes won't be as easily soiled. These products, such as "Yelan" from England and "Zelan" from the United States, are becoming known to the people who are making time for their new clothes.

FRIDAY, JULY 5, 1946.

A Tour of Blitzed London.

By Lewis Milligan.
I started out this morning on a tour of inspection of the blitzed parts of London. Hitherto I had confined my walks to the main thoroughfares from Leicester Square, Trafalgar Square, The Strand, to the foot of Fleet Street, with little excursions down the narrow side streets and alleys. Except for St. Bride's Church in the middle of Fleet Street, which is entirely gutted, and a few buildings at the rear of the street, I found little evidence of bombing. Looking down Fleet Street, the lower part of Ludgate Hill is hid by Holborn Viaduct, and St. Paul's, rising on its crest, stands serene and triumphant in the midst of a scene of desolation. There is scarcely a building left standing around the great white cathedral. Whole blocks of historic business premises and several churches were destroyed, leaving wide open spaces.

I jumped on the first bus that stopped and, after traversing several streets beyond St. Paul's, it carried me over London Bridge, which is still not "fallen down". One the other side of the bridge, however, there was everywhere evidence of the destructive power of German bombs. Entire streets were demolished and nothing was left but the cleared foundations, in which grass and weeds were sprouting. One fine old church had apparently suffered a near miss; the tower and the walls still stood, but the windows were boarded up and the old trees around it were like living skeletons, stripped of all their smaller branches and twigs, and yet they were trying to put forth green shoots here and there on their trunks and bare branches, but making a poor job of it. Many of the new buildings in the vicinity were untouched, while scores of dwellings of the poorer type were swept away.

Leaving the bus at London Bridge Station, where there was considerable damage, I strolled about the quiet and rather dingy streets in the vicinity and finally came across a street car resting at the end of a line. I boarded this and found the driver and conductor sitting inside resting. The conductor had recently returned to civil life, but the driver, a typical Sam Weller character, had driven that car through all the blitzes. He told of all his experiences in a matter-of-fact way. He said the worst blitz was in 1941. At that time the car line had been closed for three weeks, owing to craters in roadway and delayed action bombs which shut off adjacent areas. Referring to one raid he said, "That was an uncomfortable night, that was." His use of the word "uncomfortable" struck me as a typical example of Londoners' understatement of what they had been through—and perhaps there was a touch of grim humour in the use of such a mild term. I remarked upon the complete absence of rubble on the sites of the bombed buildings, and I asked the driver what they had done with it. "We just carted it away," he remarked. "Where did you dump it?" I asked. "A lot of it was used in building American airfields; it came in 'andy, it did, for that purpose," he said, as if he was wondering what they would have done without it.

Crossing Westminster Bridge I had my first close-up view of the Houses of Parliament and Westminster Abbey since my arrival in the city. From a distance there is no sign of destruction, and even at close quarters the stranger has to look for any sign of wreckage. The House of Commons Chamber is said to have been badly damaged, but all that I could see in the way of damage were a few nudes and enrichments knocked off at one end of the buildings, while pinnacles and enrichments knocked off at one end of the building, while Westminster Abbey from the outside appeared to be untouched. It is truly remarkable how so many of the most important of the ancient and new buildings and monuments escaped, while other less important structures in their immediate vicinity were destroyed. Buckingham Palace shows little or no exterior injury, except that of time; and No. 10 Downing street looks as though it had never known anything but suburban quietude. Yet at the rear of the Palace and Downing Street there is a great open space which must have contained some buildings. If so, they were completely wiped out by exploding bombs which scattered the masonry about the bronze statues of Lord Robert and Kitchener. This scattered effect is seen on the front of government buildings along Whitehall, where it would appear bombs had dropped in the middle of the wide roadway.

London not only made good use of the rubble, but also utilized many of the basements, building low walls around them, and filling them with water as emergency reservoirs in case the water mains were blown up. In one of these basement reservoirs I saw a pair of wild ducks swimming around and exploring the depth as though they were in the heart of the lake district and not that of roaring London. In another bricked-in basement of Fleet Street I saw several young men playing cricket, stump and all, during the lunch hour. It's no use, Jerry, you can't down these people. You merely served as demolition squads to provide a material for air-rafts, and space for duck ponds and cricket grounds in an over-congested city.

It is a motive alone that gives character to the actions of men—Bruyere.

Cook Them First — Then Freeze Them.

All frozen vegetables require some cooking whether they are to be served hot or cold as in salad. Cooking methods are the same for frozen vegetables as for fresh vegetables except that frozen require a much shorter cooking period — about one-third to one-half of the time. Because frozen vegetables have been partially pre-cooked in the blanching process, and freezing softens the tissue still further, care must be taken not to overcook them.

If more than one package of frozen vegetables are to be cooked at one time, the saucepan used should be large enough in diameter to allow them to rest on the bottom of the pan, that is, one frozen block should not be placed on another. Frozen vegetables should be put on to cook while still frozen. Thawing the vegetables, except corn on the cob, is not recommended. Corn on the cob should be thawed before cooking, otherwise the kernels will be overcooked before the cob is hot.

In the methods of cooking, as recommended by the Consumer Section, Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, there are five main considerations: (1) Use a tightly covered saucepan; (2) With dry pack vegetables — use one-half cup of boiling water and one-third teaspoon salt to one pint container of vegetables (four servings). This is sufficient for most vegetables, but for cauliflower three-quarters of a cup of water is required. Corn on the cob should be covered with water. With brine pack vegetables — use only one or two tablespoons of boiling water to prevent vegetables from scorching as they begin to thaw. No additional salt is required; (3) To hasten thawing and to get uniform cooking, break the melting mass apart with a fork. This applies particularly to asparagus, broccoli, and spinach; (4) Bring water or brine to boiling point as quickly as possible after adding the vegetable, and (5) when the water or brine begins to boil, reduce the heat so that the liquid boils gently for the rest of the period. An important point is — count the time of cooking from the moment the water reaches boiling point.

Full detail of how to freeze vegetables and how to cook them are given in Household Bulletin No. 21, "Freezing Fruits and Vegetables," prepared by the Consumer Section. A copy may be obtained by writing to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Fresh Air for Health.

Advantages of exercise in the fresh air are the subject of an announcement from the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. It quickens the flow of blood, stimulates deep breathing, and cultivates a healthy appetite. It is pointed out. The Department urges parents to get their children out into the fresh air whenever possible, to help build them up. Then, too, says the announcement, all who can avoid doing so should walk rather than take public conveyances, to school or work. Crowded conditions of trams, buses, and trains, favor spread of disease germs.

Valuable Crops.

Forage crops increase the fertility of the soil on which they grow. They make profitable use of lands unsuited for other crops, they ensure a more stabilized agriculture, and they provide a substantial increase in the national revenue. — Agricultural Institute Review.

Substantial Salads.

Summer seemed to be just around the corner for some time but it is here now with fine warm weather. Besides bringing hot weather, summer also means longer days to work and play out-of-doors. In many cases outdoor activities may take place some distance from the home and it may be necessary to carry lunches.

Since a hot meal is often out of the question the homemaker must prepare something that will be sufficiently substantial to satisfy keen appetites. In many instances, a substantial salad is the logical answer since a salad may include meat or fish, eggs, cheese and vegetables, raw or cooked. Care should be taken when a salad is to be carried, to have all ingredients thoroughly drained before being mixed; otherwise the texture and appearance of the salad would be mushy and unappetizing. Glass jars with a good lid make good containers for salads. Lettuce should be carried in a separate container or wrapped in waxed paper in a paper bag or tea towel.

The same salads may be prepared to serve for the family lunch or supper at home. The home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture are suggesting recipes for salads such as these.

Lima Beans Salad.
4 cups cooked lima beans
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon curry powder
1 teaspoon chili powder

Combine lima beans and parsley. To mayonnaise add the curry and chili powders, blend well. Add to beans and mix together lightly or carry in separate container to be added just before serving on lettuce leaves. Hard cooked eggs and radishes may also be served with this salad. Six servings.

Vegetable Meat Salad.
2 cups chopped cooked meat
2 tomatoes, chopped coarsely
2 or 3 radishes, chopped
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 cup chopped parsley
1 cup chopped cucumber
1/4 cup chopped green onion
1/2 teaspoon vinegar

Pickles or a small amount of grated cheese (mild) may be added or substituted as wished. This salad serves any number of variations, according to what is used or omitted. Mix with mayonnaise or carry the latter in a separate container and serve on lettuce.

Macaroni Spring Salad.
2 cups cooked elbow macaroni
1/2 cup chopped green onions
1 cup sliced or shredded raw carrots
1 bunch radishes, about 3/4 sliced
2 cups lettuce cut in pieces
1/2 cup boiled dressing

To cook macaroni add green onions and boiled dressing and mix thoroughly. Cool and chill for at least 1/2 hour. Add carrots, radishes and lettuce. Toss lightly but thoroughly. Serve on whole lettuce leaves. Six servings.

Basic Boiled Dressing.
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon mustard
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons sugar few grains of cayenne
2 eggs
1/2 cup vinegar

Heat milk in double boiler. Beat eggs until very light and add dry ingredients. Add hot milk and return to double boiler. Cook, stirring until thickened; then stir in vinegar very slowly. Cook 2 minutes longer. Yield: 1 1/2 cups.

Food Conservation at Church Teas Urged.

Women in all parts of Canada are fully alive to the urgency of the Dominion's "Save Food" campaign. This is apparent from the many and varied queries received in the daily mail of the Food Information Committee at Ottawa.

Among recent letters addressed to the committee was one from a member of a women's Church association, who wrote in part: "Our group of women still insist on serving sandwiches, cookies and iced cakes at bi-monthly meetings. The monthly fee of fifty cents, I am sure, would just as willingly be paid and the social spirit preserved if one piece of bread, a cookie or one piece of cake were served. Our women say, 'Well, all the other churches do it. If the rest stopped, so would we.' Perhaps you can do something to appeal to these women — reaching across the Dominion it would be well worth while!"

This is only one of numerous letters from women who feel that there should be greater food conservation at teas and club meetings — women who, whenever they eat and wherever they eat, wish to share with the hungry. "Many women have, probably never thought of the refreshments served at their meetings in terms of the wheat which is so desperately needed to feed the famine areas; or they would willingly reduce those refreshments," says the Food Information Committee. "Those two or three sandwiches and those two small pieces of cake usually eaten by each one of a group of fifty people represents approxi-

Which Way?

A Story on the Best Way of Spending Two Billion Dollars.

By R. J. Deachman.
A proposal has been made to give every person over 70 years of age, a pension of $30 a month, without a means test. If we are willing to undertake this task that's the way to do it. The means test involves a lot of people running around making investigations into the lives and conduct of men who are about to receive a small pension from the state in order to discover whether they are trying to receive it while still keeping their means. But I want to bring up an entirely different aspect of the question. The payment of these pensions would involve $200 million a year. First then this question ought to be answered: Is this the best possible use that could be made of an annual expenditure of $200 million, $2,000 million every ten years or is there a better way and, if so, what is it?

Two Billion Dollars.
If we are going to employ more people in the Dominion of Canada at the present time we must have increased capital investment. If we are to have higher capital investment then we must do something to stimulate it. There are too many people in Canada now who seem to feel that the only way to get prosperity is to buy it with more taxes, higher pay and less work. The most effective way is to develop a country in which there is stability and efficiency and in which we have done something to overcome the natural obstacles which stand in our way so as to make further investment profitable.

What could be done with an expenditure of $200 million a year? There are some things which are a proper function of government. For instance, there is the broad field of basic research. Individuals or private enterprise will devote their effort along their own particular line, but more can be accomplished if the background is cleared. The war has shown us new possibilities. The boundaries of the impossible have been moved farther back. There seems no limit to our power of achievement if we put out mind and effort into our tasks.

Then let us broaden this out. There is in Canada a field for exploration. Careful studies of the mineral possibilities of the Dominion of Canada should be made. We have large areas which are practically unexplored. Examination by experts would eliminate the areas in which prospects are rather indifferent, concentrate effort on the more important fields. We link science with this by seeking to improve the means of detection and speeding up the means of producing effective results.

Farms and Forests.
Then there are two great problems which are of particular importance to the Canadian people. One would be the expansion throughout Canada of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act. The value of this work has been very clearly demonstrated but it has been confined entirely to the prairie areas. The problem is different in other sections but the principles are the same. It involves doing the things which bring land into more effective use, thus encouraging the individual by giving him a larger opportunity for success.

The next in line, and I am not trying to put them in order of merit, is reforestation. This means conservation of existing forests — making more effective use of them — going on from there, using land not fit for agriculture, planting new trees when we market the matured ones. We are farming lands which should be in trees and we are farming whole areas which should be in permanent pasture. If we could bring our intelligence to bear upon the question of agricultural production we could vastly increase the wealth of the Dominion. It is not that we lack the resources, we do not make sufficient use of them.

Face the Problem.
I have outlined a few, a very few, of the things which might be accomplished with an investment of $200 million a year. The answer will be made that this doesn't solve the problem of the man who needs $30 a month. It doesn't, but perhaps it makes possible the establishment of conditions in which this would not be needed. It goes further than that, it makes possible the building of a nation in which the cost of taking care of the poor and unfortunate would constitute an insignificant burden. It is just possible too that the direct burden of $200 million a year for the purpose proposed might result in increasing the burden. It will render more difficult the problem which faces the individual, that of providing for his own future when the age of retirement is reached. The question remains, I have only touched the fringe: What in your opinion is the best way of spending $2,000,000,000 in the next ten years? It's a stupendous sum. How can we use it so that it will do the most good? Think it over, give us your answer.

Meditation is the nurse of thought, and thought the food for meditation. C. Simmons.
mately four and a half pounds of flour, and those four-and-a-half pounds of flour could provide the daily bread ration of twelve hungry Greeks."

Women's organizations across Canada can make a worthwhile contribution to this country's "Save Food" campaign, the committee points out, and gatherings should gain, rather than lose, in friendliness, by this sharing with the hungry.

Causes of Shortage of Farm Machinery.

In order to obtain more concrete information on the problems concerning farm machinery, the National Committee on Agricultural Engineering requested the Dominion Department of Agriculture to undertake a survey of the situation. The work developed on the Economics Division and its findings have been published under the title "The Farm Machinery Outlook in the Prairie Provinces." In a forward dealing with the causes of the machinery shortage, H. L. Patterson, of the Economics Division, says the ability of farm operators to obtain farm machinery of the best adapted types and sizes has become a necessity. If production is to be maintained at a high level in western Canadian agriculture.

This necessity has been given special significance by the apparent shortage of machinery, explains Mr. Patterson. The demand seems to have increased much more than the supply. The demand has declined. The situation developed, first, by reason of the combined effect of drought and depression in the 30's. These conditions rendered the farm operators financially unable to replace machines when needed, and because drought curtailed the amount to be harvested, there was less need for harvesting machinery. When crop yields improved and prices became more favourable, it was inevitable that more machines would be needed.

A second factor in the situation was the manpower shortage during the war. This shortage made it imperative that each man on a farm use his time and efforts most effectively in producing food, requiring the use of additional machines. A third factor is the accelerated trend towards the use of improved types of machines recently developed. Any increase in the efficiency of operation may lower the cost of production sufficiently to more than offset the price of the new machine. For this reason many farmers feel that they cannot afford to use their older type machines until worn out. All these factors, plus the greatly increased purchasing power, has created a large demand for certain types of farm machinery in excess of the quantity that manufacturers can at present supply.

There was very little in past experience that could serve as a guide to requirements, and many leaders in the desirability of obtaining more concrete information concerning the farm machinery situation — hence the survey.

Poisoned Bran for Cutworm Control.

In cutworm control, it is important to be prepared for their attack at the first of the season, because cutworms are usually active and feeding before most crops are even in the ground, says Alan G. Duxan, Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Poisoned bran bait has given the most effective control for many years. This bait is made up of bran, 25 lb.; Paris green, one pound, and water about two and a half gallons.

In making the bait, the dry ingredients should be mixed thoroughly first. The water is then added to the bran and Paris green. In mixing the bait, add only enough water to make the material the consistency of wet sawdust. Do not make it sloppy but have it so that it will crumble in the hands and slip through the fingers easily.

Land that was heavily infested last year should be treated before the plants are set out. This is done by broadcasting the bait at the rate of 15-20 pounds per acre a few nights before transplanting. One application should be sufficient but, if the cutworms are very numerous, a second should be made two or three days after the first. Always spread bait in the evening, just before dusk and choose a warm still night for this work.

If the attack is unexpected and the plants are already in the field, the bait should be applied around the base of each plant, using about half a teaspoonful per plant. Should one application not kill all the cutworms, a second treatment should be made two or three nights later.

Molasses, which was formerly used in cutworm baits, is no longer available. Experiments have proved that a sweetener is not necessary and may well be omitted.

The Precision Fishing Reel.

A dual purpose fishing reel which represents a considerable advance on previous types is now being manufactured by a London firm. One outstanding feature of this reel (known as the "Loncast") is that it is a precision article, modern in conception and using experience gained in the production of precision parts during the war. It is made from duralumin and has an anodic finish which renders it corrosion-proof against fresh and salt water. Its other advantages are: a well designed slipping clutch which permits the use of fine lines without fear of breakage; a large diameter spool which gives a rapid recovery of line without complication of gearing. The spool is so designed as to prevent the line "piling" and being badly laid on. Added to this is the simple design, which permits all components to be readily dismantled and adjusted with no more tools than a screwdriver or coin.

Leafs Again Play Poor Ball.

The Maple Leafs lost another ball game when they went down to a 6-3 defeat, at the hands of Joe Gentile's CKLW team, of Detroit, leaders of their league in that city, with a perfect record. All players on this team are 19 years of age or younger.

The local team appeared to have the game won, when they scored two runs in the sixth, to go ahead 3 to 2, after donating the visitors a run in the first and another in the second, on four errors. In the eighth they made another costly error, but their errors in this inning were mostly of omission.

After Saunders, first man up in the eighth inning, had singled, and with the visitors one run behind, the Essex infield, instead of playing for a sacrifice bunt, played their usual positions and Sordini's bunt went for a base hit, the next batter, Costa hit one to Jessop, which he blocked, but no one on base and nobody out, when there should have been one man on and two out. The Detroit team went on to score four runs and win the game. Queen was leading Leaf batter, while Brackell, in center, who threw two men out trying to score, and A. Loebach, started in the field. Fleming struck out on the side in the ninth.

Harrow finally pulled through with two runs in the top of the eighth to win a nip-and-tuck game from Amherstburg by a 5 to 3 count.

Amherstburg had gone ahead with one run in the first and Harrow tied it in the third, going one up in the top of the fourth. The bottom of that frame saw the homesters go one up with a two-run rally, but Harrow tied the count again in the top of the fifth.

The big eighth saw Bob Wright lead off with a single, Butler doubled to off Wright on third and when Jack Wright was safe on a fielder's choice, Bob Wright scored and Butler took third, from where he scored on an error by Boussey.

MAIDSTONE

The June meeting of the Maidstone Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Garnet Wilson, with the president, Mrs. Walter Simpson, in the chair. A large attendance helped to make the afternoon a very pleasant one. It was decided that our meetings for the next three months would be discontinued as they are very busy ones for the housewife, so our next regular meeting will not be held until October. A picnic will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Taylor, on Wednesday, July 10th, starting at 2 p.m. Mrs. Taylor's residence is on Talbot Road.

just five houses past Doan's gas station. We hope to have another good attendance, for we are sure all who go will enjoy themselves. There will be races for children, also contests for the older people. Let us all do our part to make this a gala day. Bring along your picnic basket and enjoy a good time. Remember the date, July 10th. All welcome.

Tecumseh Still on Top.

Tecumseh Indians retained their hold on first place in the Essex County Baseball League, on Sunday, whipping Tilbury 8-3, while Leamington held onto second place, a half-game behind, by trouncing Kingsville 9-1. Essex dropped down to a tie for fourth place with Amherstburg by dropping a 9-8 decision to Belle River. Harrow crept up into third place with a 5-3 victory over the Burg.

The Tecumseh-Tilbury game was a close one for six innings but then the Indians scored four big runs for the victory. Four bingles, two walks and a sacrifice counted in the big seventh as Cantor drew a base on balls, Cecil sacrificed. Robinet reached first on an infield hit, Cantor taking third. Sawyer hit a long double to right, scoring Cantor, Robinet taking third. Craig then singled to center, scoring Robinet. Sawyer taking third and Craig going to second on the throw to the plate. Rankin replaced King and walked Brunneau. Dunning then singled to right to score Sawyer and Craig.

Father Marries Son at All-White Wedding.

Regal lilies, palms, ferns and burning tapers formed the setting, in Cottam United Church, on Wednesday, July 3rd, at 3 p.m., for the marriage of Miss Eula Roberta Haggins, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Haggins, and Lawrence Arthur, only son of Rev. and Mrs. Stanley R. Johnston, all of Cottam. The father of the groom performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor-length gown of white double net and lace. The fitted bodice featuring a low round neck, was of lace edged with net points and fastened with tiny satin covered buttons down the back. The puffed sleeves were also edged in net points. Her two-tiered veil of illusion was caught to her head with a heart-shaped headress decorated with white carnations and extended to the hem of her full circular skirt. Her lace mittens ended in points over her hands and she wore a necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom, and carried a shower bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Janet Polster, as maid-of-honour, was in a floor-length white gown featuring a lace fitted bodice with heart-shaped neckline and cap sleeves and a full net skirt over white satin. Her blue shoulder-length veil was caught to her head with matching flowers. Miss Ruth Haggins, sister of the bride, and Miss Mary Johnston, sister of the groom, as bridesmaids, wore white dresses fashioned on lines identical to that of the maid of honour, with pink veils caught to the head with pink rosebuds and matching net gloves. All carried bouquets of pink carnations and maiden hair fern.

Neville Haggins, cousin of the bride, acted as best man, and Arthur Haggins, the bride's brother, and John Finley were the ushers.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Harvey Shaw and before the ceremony Miss Mary Lewis sang "I'll Walk Beside You" and during the signing of the register "God Save Me You."

A reception followed in the church parlours for 90 guests, the bride's table being centred with a three-tiered wedding cake bedded in white tulle and topped with pink rosebuds, and flanked by burning white tapers and silver baskets of pink roses. Mrs. Wilfred Secord and Mrs. Grant Carruthers presided at the tea table.

Mrs. Jack Lewis, Mrs. Blanche Ludlam, Miss Helen Ludlam, Miss Minnie McLean, and Miss Dorothy Ballantine acted as waitresses, and the members of the Evening Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society, of which the bride is president, assisted.

Mrs. Haggins chose for her daughter's wedding, a dress of pale blue crepe featuring lace cap, sleeves and peplum, white hat and accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Johnston wore a gemstone jersey navy dress, brown hat and accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left on a motor trip to Bruce Beach, the bride travelling in a wedgewood blue crepe dress trimmed with navy embroidery on the sleeves and peplum, a navy and blue hat and accessories, and a corsage of red roses. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will reside in Essex.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. James Brown, of Delburne, Alta.; Mrs. Sarah Carley, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Latam, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Latam, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Latam, of Wyoming; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Children's Holidays.

Attendance of children at summer camps is endorsed on health grounds by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa.

In a message to Canadian parents, the department draws attention to the value of fresh air and sunshine, which will help build up youngsters for the winter months, and suggests that some of the Family Allowance cheque be used for purchase of sports equipment to keep the children healthy and happy.

While it is a peacetime budget, yet it is interpreted on Parliament Hill that it contains "hints" of unsettled conditions both at home and abroad so that some of the costs may not recur on a similar scale in subsequent years, though Canada is now more prosperous and more further along the road of re-employment and reconstruction than was anticipated last Autumn when previous budget presented.

With ordinary expenditures and others chargeable to demobilization and reconversion involving an expected outlay of $2,700 million, total revenue of $2,510 million, and a reduction of revenues from taxes by about $254 million in a full year under economic conditions similar to those at present, the forecast of a budget deficit for current year of roughly $260 million is significant, especially since it is likely that the deficit may be about $300 million for the current year.

However, it is most significant that nearly 50 per cent of expenditures will be covered from revenues and this means a more rapid approach to the balancing of the budget than it had been expected to be possible only some months ago in the best informed sources in Ottawa.

A rather gloomy note in the budget is envisaged along Parliament Hill in the fact that the budget obviously indicates that it cannot be based on the assumption of a general Dominion-Provincial agreement still being reached, so because there is a strong opinion here that the differences are far too great not only between some provinces and other provinces "to permit of reconciliation at an early date", indeed, it is emphasized the budget was prepared on assumption that no new general tax agreement could be made shortly.

A number of important considerations have now arisen which must become a matter of reference to the Canadian Government and the United Kingdom Government," said in part Canada's Minister of Trade and Commerce, Hon. James A. MacKinnon, in telling the House of Commons about the delay in British-Canadian wheat contracts being signed.

"As soon as these matters have been dealt with by the respective governments, negotiations will be resumed in respect of terms of the proposed contract," he revealed that "substantial" progress had been made on the terms of the agreement in face of the difficulties involved in placing the sale of a large quantity of wheat on a contract basis for an extended period.

Meanwhile, it can be reported that talks between officials of the Canadian Government and a British delegation, held in Ottawa for the purpose it is said, of entering into a long-term contract for wheat, while these did not end in actual signing of the contract, yet the story heard on Parliament Hill that one would be signed seemed to be backed up by an assertion of a British spokesman when he said, "for it would be suicide for both of us if we didn't". This same spokesman flatly contradicted rumor that the United Kingdom would act as Canada's broker on the foreign market selling wheat from Canada and the world price is better than $2.00. Before the war Britain's wheat imports were over 200,000,000 bushels, including about 55,000,000 bushels from Canada, but during the war British imports of wheat from Canada were about 205,000,000 bushels, with estimates being that the same would continue in post-war years. He also hinted that the agreement with Canada may not be "an exclusive" contract so that Britain may continue to buy wherever supplies could be obtained.

The charge was made by Hon. Alexandre Tache, Speaker of the Quebec Legislature, that "there is not a single French-Canadian out of 25 Deputy Ministers in Ottawa" "may be a correct 'technical' statement, yet it is emphasized in this capital that, at least six French-Canadians occupy posts as high as Deputy Ministers, such as Gustave Lanctot, Dominion Archivist; Edmond Cloutier, King's Printer; Felix Desrochers, Librarian of Parliament; Jules Castonguay, Chief Electoral Officer of Canada; Paul Leduc, Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada, and Arthur Thivierge, Civil Service Commissioner. In other words, at least six French-Canadians do hold posts as high as Deputy Ministers or equivalent to same.

"It is to be the last of the contention that the constitution of this nation cannot be amended in respect of national affairs unless the proposal be subjected to the veto of the great powers who sit in the Provincial capitals, then I think this is a happy day for Canada," said in part in Parliament Hon. Louis St. Laurent in discussing the measure to amend the British North America Act with respect to readjustment of the representation in the House of Commons. "This veto business is something which is proving very difficult in the assembly of the United Nations, and if this assembly of the representatives of the Canadian people can down it forever we shall be performing a service to the Canadian nation."

It is reported in Ottawa that the average wage of male farm help per day as at May 15, 1946, with board was $2.73 in 1944, $3.04 in 1945, and $3.25 in 1946, and such average wages per month was $61.88 and $71.36 in 1944, 1945 and 1946 respectively.

In reply to the request for information as to how many Alberta coal mine operators have sought financial aid from the Federal Government agencies in order to increase production, Reconstruction Minister Howe has disclosed in Ottawa that the number of coal mine operators in Alberta who have or still are receiving financial aid is 71 and there are nine in British Columbia. "No financial assistance has been refused to any coal mine operators where in the opinion of the emergency coal production board of coal control such assistance would have aided the overall situation," he said.

"My family and I planned so happily to make our first visit to Canada immediately after the war, and when the word came to us last July that we were being sent to Canada, our excitement was intense," said in an address in Ottawa Viscountess Alexander, wife of Canada's Governor-General. "It seems to me a matter of personal interest that there should be more than just learning a few words of the other's language, whether it is French or English," declared Chief Justice Thibault in the course of a talk in this capital. "I must say it is a deplorable thing that there should be among us a lack of unity when all admit that it is of the highest importance."

"A thorough medical check-up is essential because criminality is a disease of the mind which must be treated separately," explained in Ottawa Hon. Mr. Justice J. Archambault in an address on the Borsari system for delinquents among boys and girls.

"The approach of the church to the question of beverage alcohol has been too emotional and fanatical," said in this capital Rev. Albert Johnson, educational secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation. "It must be scientific."

In regard to the widespread claims about nail shortages in Canada, it is stated in Ottawa that this is not due to production faults since it is now at the highest peak with between 102,000 and 105,000 100-pound kegs rolling off production lines every month. The shortages are blamed here on the high price being charged by the United States public relations manager of the C. P. R. told the Senate Tourist Committee that this railway intends to continue its long-range programme in tourist advertising by trying to diffuse the tourist traffic over the widest possible area throughout the year.

Plans to give veterans top priority in purchasing farm machinery and surplus war assets through regular retail channels have been placed before the Veterans' Committee of Parliament by J. S. Crawford, farm equipment chief of the Veterans' Land Act. A member of Parliament has protested in the House of Commons against a "generous" allotment of staff employees of the House on office space and quarters originally occupied and destined for members of Parliament. The vote in parliament in favour of the plan of the Government for increasing membership of the House of Commons from 245 to 255 was 107-22, though the vote only came after four amendments to the proposal were rejected. Under this new plan of representation, which will be in effect before the next general election in Canada, Quebec would get 8 more seats, British Columbia 2 more, and Ontario and Nova Scotia one each, with Prince Edward Island, Yukon, Alberta and New Brunswick remaining unchanged, and Manitoba as well as Saskatchewan losing a seat. There were 4,964 army court martial convictions for desertion in Canada from January 1st, 1945 to May 1st, 1946, this being revealed in Ottawa by Defence Minister Douglas Abbott.

O. P. A. to Boost U. S. Sugar Prices Again.

Will Partially Offset Refiners' Increased Cost of Production.

An increase in the price of refined sugar, the second this year, is expected soon in the United States. This increase to be authorized by the OPA, according to informed sources, is expected to be one cent for five pounds on the retail price and ten cents per hundred pounds at refinery level.

The boost is designed to help compensate refiners for greatly increased operating costs. It will follow a larger increase granted earlier this year of one-half cent per pound, which was for the express purpose of increasing sugar production in the United States and easing the burden of subsidy costs on the part of the Government.

While word of this price advance follows closely the settlement of several eastern refinery strikes with higher wage grants, it was predicted even before the strikes that refiners would have to be given some relief from rising costs. This reflects a general trend of many nations to make upward

Minerals vs Organic Matter

Bacterial activity in the soil, which reduces plant residue into forms available for plant growth, has a definite connection with the amount of mineral element present. Recent studies show that this necessary decomposition depends in some degrees on the amount of such elements as calcium, magnesium, potassium, phosphorus, and others in the soil.

Virgin soils have proven to be rich both in organic matter and mineral elements; and as the organic matter is exhausted a similar decline is noted in available minerals.

Value of calcium
It is a well known fact that calcium has a decided influence on growing crops. Indirectly, calcium has a further effect upon the soil. The restoration of exhausted calcium (lime supplies) for example, increases the root size of the legumes. These larger roots supply an increased amount of organic material. It follows that more calcium means more organic matter in the soil. Further these plants are found to use other mineral elements more effectively when good supplies of calcium are present.

Maintaining Minerals
The best method of maintaining mineral elements in heavy soil is by broadcast use of 20 to 40 pounds of calcium oxyamide per acre and the same quantity of a mixed fertilizer, plus plowing under cereal grain, straw, etc. The fertilizer compound supplies much-needed nitrogen and other elements. This brings about the proper conditions to feed the bacteria which are responsible for the decay of plowed-under plant residues.

Potato Insect Control With DDT.

In experimental work and in actual field practice, DDT has proved so effective against potato insects that growers are advised to use this insecticide on their potato crop in preference to any other, states W. G. Matthews, Division of Entomology, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

DDT has given excellent control of the Colorado potato beetle, the potato flea beetle and the potato leafhopper, while, particularly in spray form, it has given good results against potato aphids.

DDT should be mixed with a fungicide to control potato blight. As a spray, DDT may be combined with Bordeaux mixture, with any of the fixed copper, or with the newer organic fungicides at the rate of one pound of actual DDT to each ten gallons of liquid. As a dust, DDT is used in three per cent strength, combined with a fixed copper and a suitable filler.

DDT should not be used in the early spring because the time in this combination greatly reduces the toxicity of the poison.

DDT is available on the market in dust form, with or without fixed copper, completely mixed and ready for use. It may be obtained also in spray form, either as a spray powder or as an emulsified liquid, the latter of the insecticide being indicated on the container.

With DDT preparations, follow the same directions as for calcium arsenate, applying the insecticide as soon as the yellow egg masses of the Colorado potato beetle start hatching. Three applications probably will be sufficient for the Colorado beetle, but to control leafhoppers, flea beetles, and blight the plants should be sprayed or dusted with DDT and a fungicide throughout the summer until the tops die naturally. This will require six to eight applications at 10-day intervals. Best results will be secured only if a determined effort is made to cover the lower as well as the upper surface of the leaves.

Clover Hay Good for Poultry Feed.

Part of the nutrients and part of the cost of feeding poultry may be met by using clover hay, according to poultry authorities of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Hay, like grass, is a good conditioner and helps keep poultry in good health and plumage.

Coarse, tough, over-matured hay is of no use for poultry. They cannot eat much fibre.

To be suitable for poultry clover hay must be cut early and specially prepared. The hay should be cut when buds appear and before blossoms show, about four weeks before normal cutting time. The procedure is: Cut in the morning and leave in swath until three-quarter dry; bring in and spread over dry hay in mow to the depth of one foot; stow when dry but reduce handling to a minimum because the leaves tend to fall off.

Some farmers cut the hay in the morning, put it up in much cocks; open them up the next morning, and in the afternoon take in the hay. Others use tripods, and the extra labor entailed is justified by the special quality of hay obtained.

For poultry, all free tendrils and leaves should be retained and coarse adjustments in sugar prices.

So far, there are indications that Canada intends to follow suit, though many observers consider a one-cent per pound increase in sugar prices the real solution to greater sugar production in Canada.

C.P.R. Tailors Chairs for Comfort

FTT THE BODY: Scientifically recorded measurements of 2,507 persons in seated posture was the basis of the Sleepy Hollow chair, best ever devised for comfort, which the Canadian Pacific Railway is installing in its new air-conditioned passenger equipment on which delivery is expected early in 1947. It is better with body curves and distributes weight properly. The new chair is much more comfortable than the Boston chair, because of its design. In the illustration, the Canadian Pacific is the first railway in the Dominion to apply the new chairs and it will further increase in the 25 new coaches with the installation of the first electrically refrigerated water coolers on a Canadian road.

provided, (inset), it having been determined that women like to ride in stocking feet as they travel. Cost of the new chairs alone will be more than $300,000, with this figure being part of a four million dollar appropriation, the first large passenger equipment order it has been possible to make since 1919, with double bottom-remountable cars and express-luggage cars, as well as passenger coaches included in the appropriation. The Canadian Pacific is the first railway in the Dominion to apply the new chairs and it will further increase in the 25 new coaches with the installation of the first electrically refrigerated water coolers on a Canadian road.

Clean Up Garbage.

Later harbours some particularly in hot weather. Scraps of food and feedings around houses, yards, and streets, attract flies and other insects, which are noxious and spread disease.

The commandments of God are the bread of life for the nations. Russell D. Hitchcock.

A timely warning to keep environment clean and sanitary is issued by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. The department also frowns on the indiscriminate disposal of sandwich paper and other refuse. These attract rats, which are notorious disease spreaders.

AN INDUSTRY Pledged TO THE FURTHERANCE OF AGRICULTURE

Founded and developed on the basis of helpfulness to the farmer, the implement industry is entirely dependent on the prosperity of agriculture for its own success.

Through the years, the implement maker has, with quality of product and genuinely helpful service, won the high regard and goodwill of the users of his product. There are few farmers who do not value sincerely the service of the implement company.

The farmer and the implement maker have mutual interests in the welfare of agriculture and its progress towards higher standards and improved methods. Working for the common cause both have contributed much to the betterment of farming in general.

In the past, new developments in equipment enabled the farmer to do his work in less time and at less cost. Such equipment has helped the farmer offset adverse conditions such as drought and soil drifting, to combat insect pests and other types of crop destroyers, and to replace manpower in times of labour shortage. The self-binder, the tractor and power farming machines, the one-way disc and the pull-type combine, each in its time has helped the farmer in making his efforts successful and profitable.

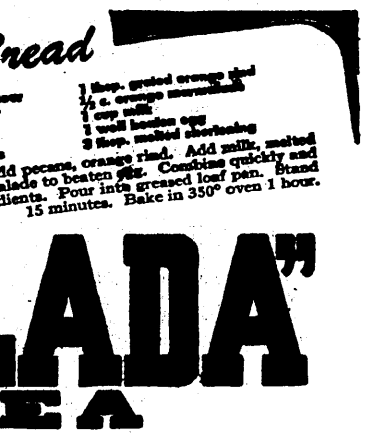

Achievements in the past have been notable and fruitful. Setbacks from time to time delayed but did not prevent the onward march of agriculture. And the future will bring advances in farming, too.

The self-propelled combine, perfected by Massey-Harris prior to the war, has opened up new fields of possibilities in implement engineering, and other new machine developments assure that, in his efforts to further improve agriculture, there will be available to the farmer equipment that will offer greater advantages in saving time, labour and expense. Massey-Harris is proud of its long association with the farmers of Canada in promoting the welfare of agriculture.

Health Examinations.

Summer holiday time gives parents an ideal opportunity for having essential medical and dental check-ups of children, points out an announcement by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. At this season appointments may be made with least inconvenience to all concerned. This would, of course, be only one of the seasonal checks which the Department suggests should be as frequent as the family physician feels is necessary, consistent with the age and condition of the child.

restricted to the status of manhood. The status is reached at the age of 21, which is generally regarded as the "age of discretion," and for which the teenage is a period of preparation. If we are going to reduce the voting age to 18, why not to 16? It would make little or no difference. We would have another million voters, and everyone of them would use the vote merely because of the novelty of the thing. They would also naturally vote for candidates of their own age, and then what a political mess we would be in. We might wake up some morning and find that we were being governed by a Boy Parliament.

First Trans-Canada

R. A. Macfarlane

"Canada's Main Street" — the Trans-Canada Highway — from coast to coast, Brigadier Macfarlane, D.S.O., at the wheel of a new Chevrolet Sedan, has just completed the first trans-Canada automobile trip without leaving his car.

A. E. Todd Gold Medal — offered in honor of the Mayor of Victoria — Brig. Macfarlane, of Nova Scotia, with the salt of the sea on his face, and after nine days of driving in Victoria, Vancouver Island, and the coast of British Columbia, arrived at his front wheels in the Pacific, having covered 4,743 miles.

Let used was a stock 1946 model powered by a six-cylinder valve-in-head engine. It was driven by Brig. Macfarlane — who held the responsible posts of Director of Mechanization and Deputy Master-General of Ordnance, at Defence Headquarters, Ottawa — because he is convinced that a "sturdy, light, economical passenger car is ideal for the average Canadian citizen." With his extensive experience of army vehicles, on the testing grounds and on active service in two wars, Brig. Macfarlane made the new Chevrolet his choice for his history-making trip — another "first" for Chevrolet!

Band Concert.

The Associated Boys' Band of Essex County, will present a concert in the Band Shell, Town Park, this Sunday evening, starting at 8.30. W. E. Beaman will be chairman. The boys will play, as feature numbers, the pieces they played at the recent tattoos in Waterloo and Chatham.

This band, of which the townspeople of Essex, Kingsville, Harrow and Amherstburg should be proud of, as they are getting a province-wide reputation, recently won second prize in the junior division, while the seniors placed third at Waterloo tattoo. On May 25th they placed first in competition with eight other bands, at the Chatham tattoo.

The boys are having a tattoo at the Harrow Fair Grounds this coming Friday, July 19th.

South Essex Youth For Christ

The second South Essex Youth for Christ Rally will be held in the Harrow Town Hall, this Saturday evening, July 13th. The meeting to start at 8 o'clock. The first rally was held in the Kingsville town hall, June 15th, at which time some 500 young people gathered for a great Youth Rally. There they had the privilege of hearing some of the best musical and speaking talent from Detroit and Port Huron.

At this next rally, on Saturday evening, some 600 young people are expected to attend. The program will be limited to one and a half hours, but packed with the best in spiritual help for young people. The Youth Council, representing many denominations from most South Essex towns, have spared no effort to secure the best of talent for Harrow. Those gathered will have the privilege of hearing the "Northwestern Girls' Gospel Trio" from Detroit. These girls are rated as among the best of talent in the great American Youth Rallies, where sometimes 5,000 young people will gather together.

There will also be other good musical numbers, such as trombone duets and vocal duets by some of the best talent in Essex County. The speaker will be Bill Green, of London. These will leave most South Essex towns especially chartered for this rally. Other hundreds of people will travel by car from many points. All roads will lead to Harrow this Saturday evening. The third South Essex Youth for Christ rally will be held in Leamington August 17th. Details will be given to the press later.

Dresser-Osborne Nuptials.

At the United Church parsonage in Cottam, on Saturday afternoon, the Rev. Stanley R. Johnston united in marriage Miss Eileen May Osborne, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Osborne, of May avenue, Windsor, and Melvin Macdonald Dresser, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dresser, of the 9th Concession, Gosfield North.

The bride was charming in a floor-length gown of white crepe fashioned with a long, fitted bodice, featuring a V neck, and three-quarter-length sleeves. She wore in lace mitts and double string of pearls, and her long veil, edged in lace, was caught to her head in a heart-shaped headpiece. Her bouquet was of red roses.

Her attendant, Miss Agnes V. Robinson, of Maidstone, chose a gown of ice blue jersey, fashioned on identical lines to the bride's. Her shoulder-length veil was caught to her head in a matching heart-shaped headpiece, and her corsage was of pink roses.

Brother Best Man.

Keith Dresser, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

A reception followed the wedding at the home of the bride, and dinner was served in Giles United Church for 50 guests, where the bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake set in a bed of red roses and flanked by burning white tapers. Mrs. Osborne wore a reseda green crepe dress, black hat and accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Dresser chose a light blue two-piece dress, a black hat and accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Dresser left by motor for a short trip and on their return they will take up residence in Windsor.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Edward Osborne, Miss Nettie Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. William Dresser, Miss Beth Dresser, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Dresser, of Cottam; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Griffin, and Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Hepworth, of Essex; Doctor Shirley and Dr. Allen Johnson, of Toronto; Mrs. Leah Robinson, of Maidstone; Miss Kathleen Hall, of Leamington, and Miss Marion Malott, of Kingsville.

Mrs. George Motley Passes.

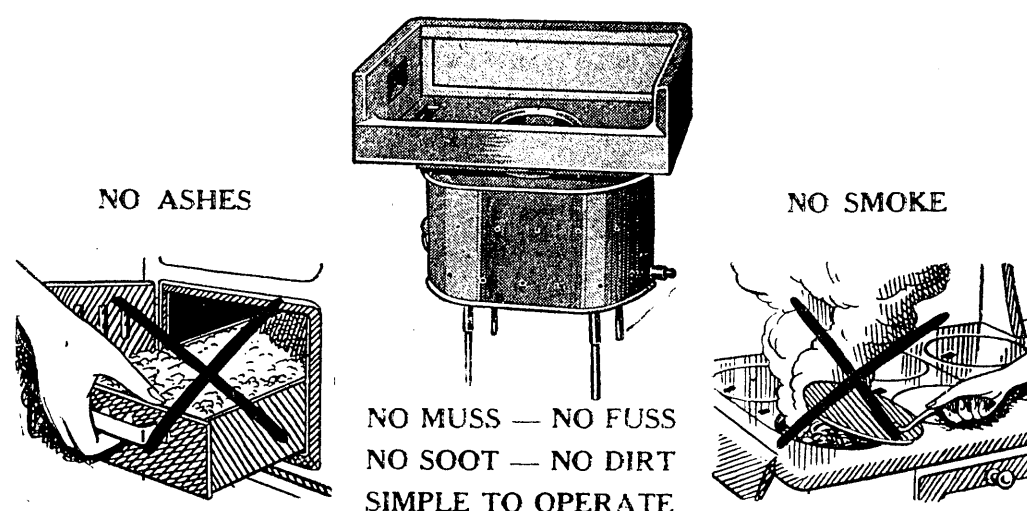

After an illness of seven years, Mrs. George Motley, aged 72, passed away at her home, 32 West Brooklyn avenue, Pontiac, Mich., at 11.15 a.m. on Friday, June 21st.

She was born in Kingsville, on May 29th, 1874, the daughter of James and Alvida Merritt. She attended Cottam schools and was married to George Motley, at Ruthven, on January 17th, 1900, where they made their home until 1923, when they moved to Michigan. She had resided at her present home in Pontiac, for ten years.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a daughter, Mrs. Mildred Mapley, of Pontiac, Mich.; a son Delbert, of Drayton Plains, Mich.; two sisters, Mrs. Jennie Groves, of Detroit; Mrs. Hilda Cameron, of Windsor, two brothers, James and John Merritt, of Cottam.

Funeral services were held at the Huntton Funeral Home, with the Rev. Andrew Creswell, of the Presbyterian church officiating. Burial was in Rose and Oak cemetery, Royal Oak, Mich. The pallbearers were six nephews, Alvin Motley, Lewis Upcott, Alonzo Fleming, Roger Wilbert and Leslie Merritt.

See The New Queen Range Burner In Action!

Here it is at last — the QUEEN Range Burner, bringing new convenience, safety and economy for every home now using a coal or wood range. No dirt or work, no smoke, no soot, no ashes, no need to worry about the supply of coal or wood, no wicks to clean or adjust.

The QUEEN Range Burner is a pot type burner which should not be confused with cut-of-date ring type burners in any way. In the QUEEN burner, the oil vaporizes from a cool pool of oil around the oil inlet in the combustion chamber. It will produce 50% more heat on 1/3 less oil — a burner with a six-year reputation in the United States. A 1/2 saving in operation cost under either manufactured bottled gas, or electricity. The remarkable economy offered by the QUEEN Range Burner is a result of the tremendous volume of air used in the heating flame. This burner actually burns 90% air, and will heat the oven to 400 degrees for over seven hours on one gallon of fuel oil (No. 1 Distillate). This great economy of operation is made possible by special features of construction that generate the greatest amount of heat from the amount of oil used. The QUEEN Range Burner is PERFECTLY SAFE — there is no danger whatsoever of the oil flooding the burner in case the flame goes out, since the special carburetor shuts off automatically.

Come in now and see this wonderful burner in operation in the store. Don't wait until fall to have the QUEEN Range Burner installed in your stove. We have been able so far to keep fairly well up with our orders. We will install the QUEEN Range Burner in your stove for only $79.50, complete.

Petition from ratepayers in Gosfield South and Gosfield North residing along the 6th concession road, asking that the earth excavated in the repair of the drain on the south side of the road from the McCain side-road to the Division road, be put over the road, to widen it instead of being put in the fields.

Moved by Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, that the Reeve be the Commissioner, with the engineer, for the repair of the west township drain.—Car.

The village trustees met with the Council to consider some arrangement for better fire protection including both township and village, the equipment there would answer for the village but was not sufficient for long drives in the township, and often when they arrive there is no water available, they should have a truck long enough to carry the equipment they have, and a tank of water also there was the question of housing the equipment, one of the suggestions made was to have a public meeting to discuss the whole matter and have Mr. Drury of the Kent & Essex Fire Insurance mutual; address the meeting, as from his experience he has knowledge of the benefits derived by rural municipalities that have equipment for fire protection. It was left with Mr. Dewhurst to make arrangements for a public meeting of the ratepayers when Mr. Drury was available.

Court of Revision on Bylaw No. 277, providing for repair of the west township drain, all members were duly sworn and court opened.

Appeals from H. Gilboe, W. Tully and Ralph Hammer, in Gosfield North, and from five ratepayers in Colchester North. H. Gilboe and W. Tully claimed that the water from lot 276 and e ½ 277, T.R.S., all entered the west township drain from the 9th concession drain and should be assessed at the same rate as other lands using the 9th Concession drain as an outlet.

Drew's Stand.

That Ontario is not unanimously behind Premier Drew, in his refusal to cooperate with the other provinces of Canada for the general good, was shown decisively last week when Mr. Farquhar Oliver, the Ontario Liberal House Leader, condemned Mr. Drew's stand in no uncertain terms: "The Drew government must be condemned for a policy of extreme isolationism," Mr. Oliver said. "The Drew policy can only lead to double taxation for the people of Ontario without the benefits that would have accrued if agreements had been reached." Mr. Oliver was taken by Drew and Duplessis would not be allowed to stand in the way of progressive economic and social legislation.

A quick survey of public opinion in Ontario reveals strong support for the Ontario Liberal Leader on this issue.

The Iron Curtain.

Paul Winterton, correspondent for the London News Chronicle, is not a Tory reactionary but a well-known and highly respected Liberal with a world wide reputation as a fair and impartial reporter. He was in Moscow from 1942 to 1945 and in his "Report on Russia" he tells the things which he was unable to say while there.

The report is not encouraging to Canadian friends of Russia. To Russia co-operation means that, when they want something, we should give it and when they do not, we should stand out of the way. Every device was used by the Russian government to prevent the Russian people from knowing the important part played in the war by Great Britain and the United States. The Russian government continually complained to its people that it was not getting support from the Allies. The war against Hitler was made to appear as an almost wholly Russian effort.

It is a sad story and a fearful one. Canada's Capacity.

Perhaps the most interesting publication coming out of Canada's capital city is the "Commercial Intelligence Journal" issued every Saturday by the Department of Trade and Commerce. Here we find overwhelming proof that one third of every dollar spent in Canada comes from our position as a world trader. Canadian export of wood products and paper has increased from $180 million in the first five months of 1945 to $222 million in the first five months of 1946. Fibres, textiles and textile products exports are $26 million to the end of May, 1946, and were $29 million for the first five months of 1945. Agriculture and vegetable products exports are $231 million compared with $238 million for the same period last year. Last year animals and animal products exports were $164 million and $149 million in the first five months of this year. Fur exports are up to $20 million compared with $12 million for the same period last year. When it is considered that last year's exports included all goods for war purposes Canada's showing in world trade is extremely satisfactory. Iron and its products are, of course, down from $305 million which included tanks and ammunition in the first five months of last year and $92 million up to May 31st, 1946.

For the Benefit of Mankind. Political gossip in the Capital city is still interested in the significance of the Prime Minister's address—as leader of the Liberal Party—on the C.B.C. national network last week. Whether or not it had any hidden meaning, Mr. King's continued interest in the affairs of the party has stirred rank and file Liberals to new heights of enthusiasm.

Outstanding among the news reported by Mr. King was the positive statement the policy agreed to at Washington between himself, Mr. Atlee and Mr. Truman was to prevent the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes and to promote its use for the benefit of mankind.

That there were good prospects of the peace conference meeting in the near future, was good news for all the world.

That Canada has supplied 25 million pounds of clothing and 1-5 of all the food needed to help "bind up the wounds and to rescue from disease and starvation the stricken peoples of war ravaged lands" brought a glow to Canadian hearts.

The assurance that the Liberal government welcomed the world conference on trade was happily received all across Canada. The Liberal Party has re-asserted in the strongest possible terms, through its leader, its conviction that no lasting prosperity can come to Canada without a high level of world trade.

There has been widespread satisfaction on the Liberal leaders assurance.

Summer Desserts.

With fresh fruits, wild or house grown, now available in most parts of the country, desserts do not present any problem. Homemakers are glad of the opportunity to simplify menus and serve simple desserts.

For at least the first week of the season for each fruit, the whole family will want to enjoy the fruits as it comes, that is without any trimmings or cooking. After everyone has been well satisfied and fruits are a little less plentiful, it is a good idea to prepare desserts which will stretch the fruits so that a small amount will serve every member of the household. Also many an ordinary dessert will take a festive air with the addition of a little fruit or a fruit sauce.

Even in summer, cool days may be expected and then a hot dessert is certainly welcome. New recipes for either hot or cold desserts are appreciated by every homemaker specially the one who has no large file of old family recipes, and finds herself repeating the same desserts week after week.

The home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggest recipes for a cool and a warm day.

ance that the proposed separate agreements between the federal government and the provinces was only an interim arrangement pending a general agreement as soon as it can be obtained. Timely, too, was Mr. King's call to Canadians not to be too dismayed at the trouble and turmoil of the world. "A great calm will come if we but strive patiently and tirelessly to replace ill with good-will and conflict with co-operation."

Living Conditions in London.

By Lewis Milligan.

The English are a very patient and long-suffering people and while they may not at the present time be taking their sufferings cheerfully, they are certainly taking them politely. Londoners in particular seem to me to be the politest people on the face of the earth. They thank you and one another "very much" at every turn, and they will stand for hours in queues for rations and for meals at restaurants, often without avail and without complaint. One meets with queues everywhere; at the bus stops and railway ticket offices the first come is first served and there is no rush anywhere. But I cannot say that every one seems to be happy about it, for Londoners struck me from the very beginning to be nervous. I would not go so far as to say that I have never seen them smile, but I cannot say that I heard one person laugh during my week's stay in the city. This may be partly a carry-over from the tension and suppression of the war years, but it is chiefly due to the stringent conditions under which they have to live owing to the shortage of food and other commodities, and the wartime restrictions are largely still in force.

So far as the food is concerned, I found it skimpy in quantity and extremely bad in quality, even in the high-class hotels and restaurants where the charges struck me as exorbitant. There are undoubtedly black markets, and they say that you can get anything if you are willing to pay the price; but even when you pay the price for a high-class meal you feel hungry after it. Meat of any kind is very scarce, and fish, which is fairly plentiful, is served in small portions and frequently starchy. You have to ask for bread, and when you get it you wonder what it is made from, for it is of a greyish color and tastes like nothing at all. Yet the people generally do not appear to be underfed and some seem to be overfed. I should mention that almost everybody begins or finishes off the meal in the restaurants with a pint glass of beer, and one Canadian soldier told me that he had to drink beer in order to make up for the shortage of food. The waiters never put water on the table, and if you ask for it they will look at you as though you were not quite right in the head, and straightway forget about it.

All articles of clothing are rationed, with the exception of suspenders caps, hats and ladies' millinery. As an example of the increased cost of wearing apparel, a clothing merchant told me that a pair of flannel trousers which he had bought at fourteen shillings before the war now cost twenty-five shillings. This increased cost of living he said, was particularly hard on working people, for although their wages were greatly increased, the cost of everything was increased out of all proportions.

I asked this gentleman what the people thought about the Labor Government, and he replied, "The English people don't care what sort of government is in power. They just go on the same anyway. When the Germans were attacking and bombing were dropping they said, 'We'll beat 'em,' although it looked bad there for a while. He said they were not worrying over the American loan. 'If the Germans had beaten us, what good would American dollars have been to the American people?' he asked. 'The Germans would have been over there. If the Americans don't want to lend us the money — well, we'll get along without it somehow.'"

In regard to the popular opinion of Mr. Churchill, I found no general appreciation of his great leadership during the war, but no one seemed to be greatly concerned over his defeat in the election. The supporters of the Labor Government, while giving him full credit as a war leader, say: "It was not Churchill, but the British people who won the war." I was told that many leading Conservatives were quite satisfied with the result of Flour, Not Wheat.

The British Minister of Food, John Strachey, announces from Ottawa that he is getting on very nicely with his plan for making a long term contract between Britain and Canada for a supply of wheat. How this is to be arranged without it ending in the price being too high, in which case the British would be annoyed, or too low, in which case the Canadian farmer would be annoyed, it is hard to understand.

It is even more difficult to see how plans can be made now for prices in sterling to be converted into Canadian dollars for any long time to come.

It would seem that the Government at Ottawa would be wise to go slow about a long term wheat contract. Actually, there is something more important to be done by the Canadian Government at present.

The Canadian Government should tell the British that it is impossible to continue to export Canadian wheat as wheat, and that a large percentage of it will be sold to the British as flour, which would give more employment for Canadians and be very advantageous because, if Canada is to turn, as is being suggested today, from the production of food grain to the production of wheat, then the best way to provide a substitute for the food grains which will not be grown Control Cabbage and Califlower Pests.

Imported cabbage worms are the voracious green caterpillars which feed on cabbage and cauliflowers, riddling the foliage with holes of irregular shape and size. Two other caterpillars are sometimes troublesome, the cabbage looper and the larvae of the diamond-back moth, but all three species may be controlled quite easily with arsenical or derris dusts. With late cabbage, the plants should be dusted with one part of lead arsenate diluted with four parts of hydrated lime or talc, preferably in the early morning or late evening when the foliage is wet with dew. A light even coating should be applied, particular attention being paid to the centres of the plants where feeding is most prevalent. Thirty or 40 pounds of dust to the acre should be ample.

Lead arsenate is considerably more effective than calcium arsenate for the imported cabbage worm, and for this reason a home-mixed lead arsenate is to be preferred to ready-made calcium arsenate dusts. Injury to late cabbage occurring in July is usually of little importance because the plants eventually outgrow the early injury, so the first dust should be applied during the first week in August and the applications repeated at ten-day intervals. A minimum of two applications will be required.

For one thing, they point out that with a Labor Government in power there is now "no discontent left," and the influence of the extremists is curbed. They cite, for instance, the London dock strike when the Labor Government sent the soldiers to unload the ships and keep the strikers in order. When this was done there was no protest from the labor leaders, whereas, if a Conservative Government had taken such action there would have been a great outcry from the labor unions.

Of course you get various opinions about the Labor Government. Generally the feeling is that it is doing its best under the circumstances, and that it should be given a fair chance. Others say that the job is too big for a purely labor government, and they will tell you that it "won't last much longer because the people are tired off so much restrictions, which they hoped would have been removed before this." A prominent Canadian, who has lived in London throughout the war period, said to me: "You must remember that these people have suffered greatly. I have lived with them through those terrible years, and I know how much and how patiently and heroically they have endured."

quired to protect the plants where the insects are numerous, and three to four applications in outbreak years.

Early cabbage in some districts usually require no treatment for the imported cabbage worm, but in outbreak years considerable injury may occur in the heads shortly before harvest. In that case, a proprietary derris dust should be substituted for the arsenical because derris residue is not poisonous to human beings. Because of the poisonous residue, arsenical dust should definitely not be used on cauliflowers once the heads have started to form.

Force is a Two-Edged Weapon

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

We can think of very few occasions when any nation or group has changed the weapon of the ballot for the weapon of the bullet to a lasting advantage. Two World Wars in one generation have taught us that the force which momentarily may appear to achieve some end, may bring with it a whole world of uncertainties and antagonisms that more than offset the gains.

It would seem that the greatest gain that organized labor has achieved in its long struggle for more equitable conditions has been the growth in public sympathy and understanding that has made itself felt even within the ranks of capital. It would also seem that any assessment of gains in wages and working conditions resulting from the final argument of force must take into consideration if and how much public sympathy has been lost thereby.

There is a vast temptation to use a weapon as potent as the strike, and even those who do place its use would be reluctant to deny to labor a weapon that has on occasions been its only hope of justice. But potent weapons are not always effective. The atomic bomb is supposed to achieve the desired end of peace, yet it failed of the real purpose to rid the world of war. The weapon itself has become a new cause, and a new impetus. The effects of the strike may be so far-reaching as to attack the foundations of our form of civilization and in its repercussions engender new possibilities.

The recent railroad strike in the United States emphasized how desperate this threat might be; how it might strangle industry, starve our people and qualify the very form of civilized life that we have set up. No government dare refuse such a challenge, and no people can permit unlimited power to go to such lengths. The possible benefit of the relatively few cannot be secured at the wholly undesired disadvantage of the many. Such arbitrary action is not in the interests of labor. It puts a more of question into the public's growing good will toward labor. The most probable result is ill-considered legislative action, as detrimental to the orderly and equitable processes of government as it would be to organized labor itself.

We do not want arbitrary restrictions on organized labor or any other group. They are an infringement of individual rights and are dangerously far-reaching and disruptive. But, equally, we do not want our national economy hamstrung while obdurate persons, whether agents of labor or capital, argue out their differences from highly prejudiced standpoints. The use of force in human affairs

Ration Coupons Due Dates

Coupons now valid are sugar, $1 to $21, butter, $19 to $21, meat, $19 to $21.

Too often brings only the delusion of advantage. Increased spending dollars do not necessarily mean progress. It depends on what the dollars will buy in security and content.

The growing disruption of industry, the enforced idleness whose effects go far beyond striking workers and reach those still employed, determine the dollar's value. It will buy less because there is less to buy and because the ascending spiral of prices automatically devalues it. The "successful" strike is a dubious term. What have the lost work hours meant? They mean that the striking worker, at best, recoups his loss to the disadvantage of all other workers.

Even granting that peaceful means might be slower in achieving some ends, the benefits would be more lasting and tangible. They would be overtaken by deficits, and they would entail the loss of the sympathetic understanding of the whole people.—Liberty Magazine.

2-4-D Kills Bindweed.

Some months ago this column claimed the best chemical to control bindweed was 2-4-Dichlorophenoxyacetic acid. Fortunately, this is known as 2-4-D to anyone other than a chemist and we farmers can get our tongues around the shortened form. Many farmers are familiar enough with this product to call it by its nickname because they have been trying to use it for information about proper application.

Unlike chlorate sprays, 2-4-D kills plants by stimulating abnormal growth. Therefore, it should be applied when the plant can not stand any more rapid growth, which is just before flowering time. At this time, leaf structure is at its largest and more chlorophyll will be taken in by the plant. The brighter and better the day, the larger will be the openings in the leaf tissue, allowing small amounts of chemical to do a lot of damage to the weed.

Use Sparingly. Experiments have shown that too heavy concentrations of 2-4-D sterilize the soil and even kill blue grass, which is the most resistant type of grass to this hormone herbicide. An effective solution for one acre is 1 gallon of 10% 2-4-D mixed with 200 gallons of water. Two pounds of the solid 70% 2-4-D dissolved in 200 gallons of water makes the same strength treatment.

It is not practical to use 2-4-D to kill bindweed in a cereal grain crop because the amount required to get through the tall grain and onto the bindweed at the ground would be out of the question. In the case of heavy infestation, plant no crop, spray in June, plow in August and then plant with wheat.

Watch Imitations. Imitations of this original 2-4-D are already appearing on the market but this column does not propose to judge them. There seems to be a wide variety of prices for this product but a check of the percentage of strength of 2-4-D printed on the label will reveal whether the same value is being received or not. Some are as low as 10% 2-4-D which possibly explains their low price. Just as important—follow directions explicitly.

To be always thinking about your manners is not the way to make them good; but the very perfection of manners is not to think about yourself.—Walt Whitely.

People Are Asking?

Q.—Will cherries be under a price ceiling this year?
A.—Yes. Ceiling prices have been fixed for both sweet and sour cherries. Maximum prices may vary in different sections because of freight rates. You may obtain the correct list for your district at your nearest Warline Prices and Trade Board office.

Q.—My home and its contents have been destroyed by fire. I have a few clothes left. Can you tell me if I can obtain a priority for a suit?
A.—Priorities for men's suits are granted only to ex-servicemen discharged on or since May 1st, 1945. However, in case of dire need the board tries to lend its assistance. We would, therefore, advise you to contact the nearest office of the Warline Prices and Trade Board and give all details.

Q.—How long must an American visitor be in Canada before he may obtain a temporary ration card?
A.—Seven full days.

Q.—Is there a ceiling price on nails or have they been removed from selling restrictions?
A.—Nails are still under price ceiling regulations.

Q.—I have been given a temporary ration card with unnumbered meat and butter coupons. My grocer will not accept it because he says that some of these coupons expired June 30th. Is he correct?
A.—No. Your grocer is wrong. Unnumbered ration coupons have no expiry date.

Farm Improvement by Government Loan.
Through the Farm Improvement Loans Act of the Dominion Government a farmer may borrow up to $3,000 for any of the following purposes: (1) purchase of agricultural implements; (2) purchase of live stock; (3) purchase or installation of agricultural equipment of a farm electric system; (4) alteration or improvement of a farm electric system; (5) fencing or drainage; (6) construction, repair or alteration of, or addition to, farm buildings; (7) general improvement or development of the farm.

Only a farmer may borrow under the Farm Improvement Loans Act, which restricts these loans to a farmer who is in possession of a farm and whose principal occupation is farming. The term farming includes livestock raising, dairying, fruit growing and all tillage of the soil. The loans are paid through any of the chartered banks of Canada and the interest rate is 5 per cent simple interest. Arrangements for repayment are made to suit each farmer's individual requirements. The repayment periods may be from one to ten years, depending upon the amount borrowed and the purpose for which the loan is obtained, the object of the Act being to provide the farmer "short term" and "intermediate credit" simply mean that the credit is for one or two years up to ten years, this type of credit being midway between the short term seasonal loans usually made by the banks and long-term mortgage loans which usually run from 10 to 20 years.

For further particulars regarding these loans, a farmer may interview the manager of any branch of a chartered bank in Canada or he may write to The Supervisor, Farm Improvement Loans, Department of Finance, Ottawa.

How Farmers Helped in their Business.
Too continually increasing degree the farmers of Canada are drawing on technical agriculture for the better conduct of their business, points out Dr. E. S. Archibald Director of the Experimental Farms Service, in discussing the future of agriculture in the Agricultural Institute Review. By technical agriculture, he explained, is meant public activities which enable the farmer to benefit from services of experimentation, research, demonstration and legal regulations, which are beyond the farmer's capacity to provide for himself.

Despite the tendency in nature for new problems to emerge the moment old problems have been conquered, technical agriculture has scored many definite advances. Economic crop production is practised today in climatic regions of Western Canada where this was not possible with the crop varieties available 50 years ago, a change effected by the work of plant breeders.

Similarly, the combined efforts of plant pathologists and plant breeders have conquered plant diseases which threatened extinction of production in broad areas. Reference might also be made to many technical advances in the fields of animal health, livestock production, food processing, soil management, insect control and agricultural engineering.

Numerous other advantages arising from various lines of investigation, soil surveys, and economic research, has accrued to governments and administrators in the intelligent development and application of agricultural policies. Progress in this relationship is of vital importance to the future of Canadian agriculture, says Dr. Archibald.

There are men whose manners have the same essential splendor as the simple and awful sculpture on the friezes of the Parthenon.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

CBC. Uses Power to Confiscate Wave Lengths.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's recent announcement that it intends to confiscate the wave lengths of several privately-owned radio stations seem to have come as a surprise to the public as a whole, but it should be no surprise to the radio industry itself. The monopolistic intention and powers of the CBC were obvious when Parliament passed the Broadcasting Act in 1936. Unfortunately, a few private broadcasters have tried to keep the public informed of the dangers of this potential monopoly, and the CBC itself has always worked to achieve its ends as quietly and as discreetly as possible.

What the public should realize is this: The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has the power to regulate programs and advertising, to recommend the extension or cancellation of private stations' broadcasting licenses, no rival Canadian networks are permitted, and further affiliation with American chains is also banned. The only way that the average independent station can obtain enough advertising revenue to keep going is to affiliate with a CBC network, which certainly is not conducive to improvement in the variety of Canadian radio programmes.

Up to now, the independent stations have not put their case across to the public. The Canadian broadcasting has suffered as a result. But the time is at hand when some obstruction must be placed in the way of the Corporation's drive toward monopoly. The only body that can act is the House of Commons: it created the CBC and it can limit its powers.

Getting a Tan.
Those who will set out this year to get a real outdoors tan, are warned by the Department of National Health and Welfare that there is a right and a wrong way of doing it. Initial exposures, sun-bathers are reminded, should be for brief periods only, alternating between sunshine and shade. Don't overdo it, it is urged, and remember, never try for a quick tan by exposing the body to the noon-day sun.

Outstandingly Good "SALADA" TEA

Identification.

"What is your identification, Madam?" asked a bank clerk, glancing over a check which had been presented for payment. Documents addressed to the payee were submitted, and these proving satisfactory, the money was promptly passed out.

The money in question had lain in the bank to the credit of this particular person for some time. But until she identified herself and laid claim to it the money brought her no satisfaction nor was it of any practical value in her everyday experience.

There can be no consciousness of lack within the Infinite Mind, which is God. Moreover unlimited good belongs to man by virtue of his sonship with God. To the human mind, however, man seems to be a mortal, wandering in a material universe, subject to material laws. This is because mankind has been self-deceived into believing in a power apart from God and is ignorant of man's true nature as the son of God. To him the glorious and priceless verities which the Father has hid from the children seem hidden by the mists of materiality, and so seem of little practical value in the human experience.

Jesus taught His followers that the Heavenly Father feeds and clothes man even as He does the lilies of the field, and Christian Science demonstrates this truth. Whether the need is for food clothing, home, companionship, or for money to meet legitimate expenses, the understanding of God and the application of spiritual law can be depended upon to meet the human need. In Psalms (37:5) it is written, "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him; and He shall bring it to pass." In "Unity of Good" by Mary Baker Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, we find these inspiring words (p. 17) "I say, be allied to the divine power, and all that is good will aid your journey as the stars in their courses fought against Sisera." (Judges v.20.)

The student of this Science is learning to separate between the real and the unreal. He is careful to shut out negative suggestions, such as fear, hate, envy, selfishness, greed, and the like, and to admit only wholesome, constructive thoughts into his consciousness.—Christian Science Monitor Flock Psychology.

Poultry authorities are stressing the need for persistent culling of the poultry flock, particularly at the present time when feed is scarce. Drones in a flock are always a liability not only for the feed they eat but also for the example they set to the other birds. Flock psychology may have greater business significance than is realized. Drones have a depressing effect on the production of the rest of the flock.

Men's behaviour should be like their apparel not too strait or point device, but free for exercise or motion.—Du con.

FOR THEM... AN Ontario Holiday!

Roughing it in the wilds or basking in the luxury of a summer hotel... whatever their choice, lots of our friends from the States enjoy vacations in Ontario's northland. We can all give them a real welcome, when they come... make them want to return, year after year.

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. The suggestions come from a well-known Ontario hotelman:

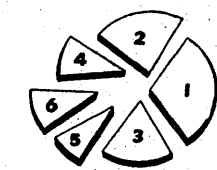

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came.
4. Take time to give requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it all up—follow the "Golden Rule."

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS... it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram shows how Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared in this way... 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them... we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday... so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

THE ESSEX FREE PRESS, ESSEX, ONTARIO.

FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1946.

With the O. P. A. news in Washington causing considerable concern about the dangers of inflation setting into the economy of the United States, there is a remarkable calm in Ottawa amongst officials on face of this break up of controls across the line in face of the extremely close relationships between the two countries. It is true that the Canadian Government has already given assurance that it will "hold the line" on price controls, rental controls and rationing, though the O. P. A. in the United States may be breaking up. However, it is pointed out that Canada is dependent greatly upon imports from across the international border for such everyday needs as fruits, vegetables, gasoline, oil, coal, cotton and others, and if these are to be resold in this country below the ceiling levels, increased payments of subsidies will have to be made at a time when the current trend was to cut such simple payments of subsidies.

In other words, a reversal of policy may be forced by the development at this time if price ceilings here are to be maintained and removed only gradually as conditions warrant. Last year the Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation paid a total of $100,000,000 to offset price increases and it was planned to spend only a sum of about $90,000,000 this year, though present estimates indicate that this may have to be much higher due to current events across the line.

Moreover, it is indicated in stories circulating in Ottawa that there is much favour here in following a policy whereby the Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation would pay more subsidies rather than pass the additional cost on to the consumer directly. Another story here indicates that there may be complications from a break-up of the controls in the United States in labor agitation for increased pay in tune with such increases in the other country, especially in the same lines and where international unions operate in both countries so that the rumoured possibilities of Canada raising a benefit in competition against United States products on the international market from these developments may be nullified by possible strikes or stoppages in this country for this reason, with the production being unable to keep up with the demand if this should happen on Canada's labor front.

On the other hand, the more optimistic attitude in Ottawa can be discovered in the report that the whole control system has operated much better in Canada than in the United States and there is evidence of this in many directions, particularly in the 10 to 12 per cent difference in the cost of living in the two countries, with controls being tighter in Ottawa than in Washington at all times as well as much less internal disturbance in the control machinery itself. Likewise, another important factor is that the discount in exchange has brought about a gradual increase of effort towards exports to the United States from Canada as well as a discouragement of import efforts from that country.

Since the heat in this capital has been excessive lately and the session has been lasting quite a long time now, it would be no great surprise to observe on Parliament Hill if more speed would be applied soon to the activities in order that Parliament may move more rapidly towards prorogation. Indeed, if early prorogation is to be accomplished, more sittings of Parliament may be inaugurated, it is hinted and this may be continued until the session is prorogated. Incidentally, there has been much talk "in the lobby" about the small number of members present on some occasions, recently as revealed in the voting figures, such as in such important measure as the redistribution bill debate when two divisions found the figures to be 129 and 150 votes in a Parliament of 245 members. On other divisions, it was noted, for instance, on the Government's farm prices program there were only 109 votes on one occasion and 93 on another; on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation dispute there were only 155 votes; on the Crown Companies dispute there were 154 votes; there were somewhat small numbers of members present on other occasions when important statements of policy were made and other significant discussions took place, including topics like atomic energy, international affairs, etc.

According to Order-in-Council PC 2316, it appears that the regulations on Family Allowances may be tightened up since, under certain circumstances, it is provided the Director may order that the allowance be paid to such other persons or agency deemed to be in the best interests of the child where, in his opinion, the person receiving the allowance does not apply exclusively same towards the child in respect of whom it is paid.

With an expenditure of no less than $620,000.00 in the current fiscal year in different payments to or on behalf of war veterans, including war service gratuities, benefits, re-establishment credits, etc., it is disclosed in Ottawa that almost one quarter of all expenditures of the Federal Government this year will be directly for the benefit of veterans and their families.

Reconstruction Minister, Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, has informed the Veterans' Committee of the House of Commons in Ottawa, that the priority system for veterans on new cars or trucks has "bogged down" and charged that veterans have been reselling their cars at times to civilians after buying them "on a colossal scale."

A delegation from the North American Indian Brotherhood of Canada and the United States, in colorful dress worn by some of them, marched along Parliament Hill and into the building in order to request consideration of an amendment to the Indian Act to assure the better welfare of Indian tribes throughout this country. In the colorful march could be seen the president of the Association, Andrew Paul, of North Vancouver, and the vice-president, J. Delisle, of Caughnawaga. One Indian, Alex McKinnon, of St. James, B.C., was said to have travelled 90 miles on snowshoes to reach his own tribe as well as to arrange for a delegation to be sent to this meeting.

"Canada has carried one-fifth of the entire burden of supplying food to the famine-stricken nations of the world," said in Ottawa the former president of the United States, Herbert Hoover, during his visit to this city in order to talk things over on food matters. "Just because a child grows to manhood, there is no reason for it to lose its affection for its parents," said in an address here Canada's Fisheries Minister Bridges. So with our nation and its growth, I like that word 'Commonwealth.' It means that we, Britain, Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand are united together for the 'common wealth' of all of us."

"It may be that we are moving into a socialistic economy but that should be done only after full and free discussion among the people of Canada so they know there they are travelling," said in the Senate Hon. T. C. Crerar, in talking on the subject of the possibility that the power given the National Research Council to establish companies might create an important precedent. "Canada has been the model for the gradual constitutional development of India and Indians are much interested in the process through which the Dominion has developed into a great self-governing country," said in this capital Lt. Col. Harwood Steele, M.C., F.R.G.S., who has been making a tour of some parts of this country addressing a number of clubs.

Members of Parliament have emphasized the need for more crime prevention as well as rehabilitation of prisoners, including the establishment of the Borstal system which has saved many young criminals in United Kingdom from careers of crime to become useful and better citizens. A two-day conference has been held in this capital by about 25 members from centres across this country by the Veterans' Affairs Department Nursing Association and it has dealt with future policies as well as plans, with this being the first meeting of its kind. Dr. George Miller, bacon expert of the Federal Department of Agriculture, has been sent to Britain in order to report on British reception of Canada's improved bacon products. Jacques Greber, the world famous town planner, has returned to Ottawa with his master plan to beautify this nation's capital, claiming that the work on these plans has been proceeding much faster than anticipated initially, including two years work in one year. A distinguished professor of paediatrics, Dr. F. F. Tisdall, O.B.E., has stated in Ottawa that people on a poor milk diet age more rapidly and have considerably less adult vitality than those who get sufficient milk, with the added remark by him that all persons should include milk around their diets, this being a food and not a beverage. Canada's North American Figure Skating Champion, Miss Barbara Ann Scott, of Ottawa, has become a great enthusiast for aviation and she has made her first solo flight. The leader of the C. C. F. party, J. J. Coldwell, was shaken up somewhat and his automobile damaged to some extent as a result of an accident between his car and a tram

Well Painted Poultry Houses.

Keep Hens Healthy and Increase the Production.

These are some mighty good reasons for keeping poultry houses well painted at all times, and we aren't just thinking of the matter of appearance either. The reasons we have in mind all represent increased money for the farmer.

Reason number one, of course, is that paint is the great protector of wood. Without its paper-thin but tough protection against every kind of weather, moisture enters the wood, rot and decay sets in and the poultry house doesn't stand up the way it would if it had been properly treated. Repairs and replacements costing many dollars can be avoided by the application of paint costing a few cents.

Reason number two also has to do with protection, but this time we aren't thinking of the protection of the poultry house itself. We are thinking, rather, of the poultry in the place. Paint is a great protection against lice and mites, against disease germs of many kinds which can make a big cut into poultry profits unless they are checked.

Paint checks such pests in several ways. In the first place it is deadly to most germs when first applied, so that a newly-painted building can be fairly well assumed to be free of disease—providing, of course, that the painter was careful to get into every nook and cranny where germs might lurk. Then too paint fights against germs by filling up the little cracks and tiny openings in the wood where germs could otherwise breed. It also makes the surface smoother and easier to keep free of all foreign matter which would otherwise harbour germs of one kind or another.

Reason number three is that a good paint job, in the right shade of paint, can improve laying and increase egg revenues. It has been demonstrated time and again that poultry will lay offener in a well-lighted poultryhouse. It has also been proved that use of a light paint, white, ivory, cream, or some such, increases the amount of light reflected, so that actually the poultry house becomes lighter without any additional light coming in. That results in better laying records and increases the revenue of the farmer.

They tell a story in the United States of a farmer who painted the interior of his hen-house for a different reason and in a different color. In fact, he covered the inside of the house with blood-red paint. He said the reason was that chickens could see red, green and white. When a young chicken got pecked by one of his fellows and a spot of blood showed on his white feathers, all the other chickens used to rally around and peck him to death. But with the inside of the henhouse so full of bright red anyway, when one of the chickens was pecked the others never noticed the blood spot and so the chicken lived out his allotted span.

It seems the same fellow is credited with keeping his cattle healthier and fatter in the winter because he painted the lower walls of the cowshed a lovely lettuce-green shade. He said that he had noticed that in mid-winter the cattle did not care much for the food because the hay had turned brown and unappetizing looking.

So he painted the lower walls of the cow shed green. That, he claimed, gave the brown hay a fresher greener look; the cattle found it more appetizing because their eyes had deceived them (it is said that taste is partly a matter of sight); and so the cattle prospered and so did the farmer.

We don't vouch for the stories. We just happened to run across them somewhere and thought you'd like to hear about them. Maybe they make sense — we've never tried the experiment to find out.

Our Returned Soldiers.

Our soldiers have circled the globe, North to south and east to west. They have come to one conclusion. That North America is by far the best. A little handful of this clear old soil and they wouldn't trade for all the rest.

They have been all over Europe, Through Africa, China and Japan. They have sailed the seven seas. From Greenland down to Salpain. Thank God I am an American. Is the prayer of every service man.

They have seen small countries suffer Under the rule of Nazi hate and greed, Who were forced to do their bidding Until by friendly Allied nations From such tyranny they were freed.

They'll forever sing the praises Of this great land of Liberty. No country in all the world can compare they all agree, With their good old North America, The land of real opportunity.

In this capital... "Ottawa may have a hinterland such as no capital in the world has," was the statement made before the Senate Tourist Traffic Committee in this capital when a suggestion was made that an additional 30,000 to 40,000 acres should be added to beautiful Gatineau Park, near this capital, with the president of the Federal Woodlands Preservation League, R. Percy Sparks, proposing plans to extend this park from its present area of 16,000 to 50,000 acres. (Reproduction prohibited, 1946, Federal Features Syndicate).

"What do you mean... I'm lucky?"

Lucky lad! Getting snagged on the wire in his effort to climb over a Hydro barrier... probably to recover a ball... may have saved his life. Some boys have not been so lucky.

Hydro energy is one of the finest things we have in Ontario to make for better living. But it can stop one from living, if you thoughtlessly give it a chance to flash through your body. Every possible precaution for safety is taken by your Hydro; but once in a while someone gets careless or "takes a chance", and tragedy strikes. A boy climbs a pole and touches a wire. Or he flies his kite near a Hydro line, and it contacts a high-voltage circuit and carries death or injury to whoever is holding it. Sometimes a storm breaks down a line and someone takes hold of the broken live wire with disastrous results. These are just examples of acts that are beyond the power of Hydro to prevent. Your Hydro can only warn of danger, and seek co-operation of parents and teachers and all who have influence with those who might expose themselves to that danger.

Hydro need never be a threat to anyone who:

1. Will not climb poles.
2. Will stay away from distribution lines and transformer stations.
3. Will keep away from fallen wires.

For your safety, in case of trouble immediately notify your nearest Hydro office. But never, never touch a fallen wire.

Middleton-Bain Nuptials.

Under an evergreen arch, beautifully decorated with roses, peonies and white bells, with long mauve and white streamers extending from the front to the back of the church, one of the loveliest of June weddings was solemnized in the Loring United Church, on Friday, June 21st, at 3 p.m., when the Rev. H. D. Dobson united in marriage Edith Mary, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bain, and Gernond Alexander, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Middleton, in a double ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, entered the church to strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March, and was lovely in a floor-length gown of white satin with a net overskirt. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice, round yoke edged with dionie, folds of net forming a sweetheart shape and short net puff sleeves. The back of the bodice was the same as front and buttoned down the neck to a point slightly below the waist with tiny satin buttons. Her long white embroidered net veil fell from a wreath of orange blossoms into a slight train. She wore long white gloves and silver slippers. Her necklace was a string of pearls and she carried a sheaf of white and mauve satin streamers studded with sweet peas.

Miss Kay Harknett, friend of the bride as maid-of-honour, was very attractive in a floor-length gown of mauve tulle, made with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline, short puff sleeves, and a very full skirt. She wore a wreath of mauve flowers from which fell a short veil and long white gloves. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and sweet peas.

Mrs. Richard Whitehead and Miss Henry Bain, both sisters of the bride as bridesmaids, wore lovely in pastel green gowns of tulle fashioned identically to that of the maid-of-honour. They also wore matching headresses, and white gloves and carried colonial bouquets of yellow roses and sweet peas.

Little Dorcas Malott, niece of the groom, and little Marilyn Bain, niece of the bride, were both charming new girls in yellow cyclot gowns, fashioned the same as the bridesmaids. They wore yellow bonnets and carried Colonial nosegays of pansies and sweet peas.

Keith Bruner, friend of the groom, acted as best man, and the ushers were Jim and Harry Bain, both brothers of the groom.

The guest pews were topped with large white bows, from which fell white and mauve streamers. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Ivan Donnelly, organist of the church, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Donald Bain sang very beautifully "Because."

As the bridal party left the church, they passed under an archway of arches held by three Girl Guides and three Boy Scouts — Shirley Bain, Louis Simms, Findlay Sinclair, Adele Donnelly, L. Donnelly, Marilyn Smith.

A reception followed at the home of the bride, which was also beautifully decorated for over fifty guests. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake, with burnt sugar candles. In the evening a large crowd enjoyed dancing at the Loring Community Hall.

Mrs. Bain chose for her daughter's wedding a two-piece flowered silk jersey, with white accessories, and wore a corsage of white gladioli and lilies of the valley. The groom's mother wore a flowered silk jersey with white and black accessories, and a corsage of gladioli and lilies.

And showers of comfort and best wishes the newlyweds left by motor for Ottawa, Montreal and Concord, N.H., to visit the groom's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. R. Thompson.

The bride travelled in a tailored grey gabardine suit, matching the groom's suit, and with white accessories, wearing white and black accessories.

Guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Alex Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Pettipiece of Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Middleton of Detroit, Mrs. D. J. Malott and Dorcas of Windsor, Keith Bruner of Glendon, Miss Kay Harknett of Toronto, Mrs. Ernie Armstrong and son Douglas, of Balsam Creek, and Mrs. Wm. Bain and two daughters of Chalk River, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Whitehead and son of Trout Creek and Jean Gibson, of North Bay.

Aquitania, at Halifax, and came to her husband's home on Talbot street.

She was one of some 1,100 brides on board and said their trip was smooth and uneventful. Asked what impressed her most on arrival, Mrs. Purdue said, "the many beautiful cars and the fact that they travel on the right side of the road in contrast to the left in England."

Band Concert Postponed.

Due to the sudden death of Bob Warren, on Sunday afternoon, the open air United Church service was held in the church and the band concert scheduled for the park, following the church service, was postponed until this Sunday evening.

Guest speaker at the special service was Rev. John Fune, son-in-law of George Hall, of Essex. Mr. Fune has just returned to Canada with his family, after 11 years as a missionary in French Indo-China, three years of which he was interned by the Vichy government.

Relating his experiences, he said: "They took everything from us but our God. By faith in Him, we managed to pull through."

Bob Warren Drowns.

Robert, 15-year-old son of Postmaster Howard Warren and Mrs. Warren, was drowned while swimming in Lake Erie, on Sunday afternoon.

He and his chum, Melvin Boultinghouse, also of Essex, were swimming, along with several others, across the harbor, between the two piers, at Kingsville. Bob was floating, when a sudden wave or spray of water evidently covered his face and he started to thresh about. The Boultinghouse lad went to his help, but after being dragged under twice, had to break loose.

Joe Senegato, recently discharged war veteran, who was walking along the pier, hearing the cries plunged in, and swam about 150 yards, and with another man, had Robert by the hand but after bringing him half way the unidentified man tired and let go. Senegato, after repeatedly calling for help, also had to release his hold, and the young lad went down in about 12 feet of water.

The body was recovered about 7 o'clock in the evening, by T. Brown and John Stewart, Kingsville fishermen.

Bob, who was born in Essex September 11th, 1930, was in the Entrance class at public school, was a member of the Essex Boy Scouts and of the Baran class of Essex United Church. He had only returned to his home in Essex, with his parents, on Saturday, after spending two weeks at the family cottage at Dyer's Bay.

Besides his parents, Bob is survived by a sister, Orpha.

Funeral services were held from the Hicks & Son Funeral Home, at 2:30 on Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. R. H. Parr, and burial was in Greenhill cemetery, Kingsville. The pallbearers were Bob McPherson, Bob Maedel, Dave Lee, Bill Thornton, Douglas Loucks, Melvin Boultinghouse, Del Matlack, Karl Ryckman.

To Celebrate Golden Wedding

Charles Maedel, well-known soft drink manufacturer, of town, and Mrs. Maedel, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, at their home, on Sunday, July 28th. They will hold open house in the evening, from 8 to 11, following a dinner at the Aberdeen Hotel, for members of their family, and a few close friends, at 5 o'clock.

Mr. Maedel, who was born near Goderich, moved to Staples in 1894, and was married to Miss Eva Boughner, a native of that village, at the Methodist Church parsonage, in Leamington, by Rev. Mr. Galloway. They had resided in Staples and Windsor prior to Mr. Maedel purchasing the Essex Pop Works, from T. Ed. Batten, in the spring of 1910. He has seen this small business of 1910, when for years he delivered his pop by wagon, mostly around the southern part of the county, and during the winter months working at his trade as a plumber, grow into a 12 months' business, which is one of the largest and most up-to-date privately owned soft drink plants in Canada.

Mr. Maedel, in spite of being a busy man, has always found time to give freely of his time to many other activities. For years he took an active part in local municipal politics, being an ex-Reeve of town, and has for many years been a stalwart of the Conservative party in South Essex, is at present treasurer of the party and on several occasions could have carried the party's banner in both Federal and Provincial elections; for many years he has been active in amateur baseball and is commissioner of the Essex County League this year, a position he held for some years in the North Essex League; he is one of the founders of the Essex Boys' Band, a group of local boys and girls, an organization of which he should, and no doubt does, consider one of his greatest achievements. He is one of the Directors of the Essex Boy Scouts as well as Director of the Boy Scout Association of Essex County; honorary president of the Essex Rotary Club, never having missed a meeting in over eleven years of life of the club, and is also an active member of Enterprise Lodge, I.O.O.F., a life member of Great Western Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Windsor; an honorary member of the Windsor Police Association, and a director of the Canadian Bottlers' Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Maedel have two children, Leota (Mrs. P. W. Lee), and Clarence, of Essex. Their oldest child, Earl, died three years ago.

Scout Leader Drowns.

Edward Earl King, of Roseland, Scout Master of the Scout Troop of that village, in charge of the Scout Camp at Point Pelee, since July 1st, drowned off Grubb's Fishery, on Tuesday afternoon. His body was recovered about 4:30 p.m.

Earl, prior to enlisting in the R. C. N. V. R., in December, 1943, resided just above Maidstone, and was a student in Grade 13, at Essex High School. Since returning home he attended the Windsor Training and Re-Establishment Institute in Windsor, graduating last month, with his senior matriculation, and was planning on enrolling at Ottawa Veterinary College this fall.

Deceased is survived by his father, William King; a brother, Lac, Howard King, and a sister, Jean Mary, at home.

Huge Pea Crop Saved by Aviation.

Leading Vegetable Packer Defeats Weather.

In a world of food shortages and famine, Stokely-Van Camp of Canada turned to aviation for saving and processing a bumper pea crop at Trenton, which was threatened because of hot weather and no rain.

Carrying ten tons a trip, a big DC-4 four-engine air freighter engaged by E. G. Stokely, vice-president and general manager, began a shuttle service between Trenton, where plant facilities are overtaxed, and Essex, Ontario, a 300-mile flight, where another of the Company's plants is available to process and can the vegetable.

"Hot weather and a dry spell matured this year's fine pea crop ahead of time and the Trenton factory's facilities could not handle the volume," Mr. Stokely said. "With famine in the world we've got to do everything we can to save this crop, so we are using a big air freighter to fly hundreds of thousands of pounds of peas on the 300-mile trip to Essex."

Forty tons of shelled peas are being shipped by air each twenty-four hours, Stokely officials state. It will take three or four days to complete the job and save the crop. Extra pilots, crews and flight mechanics are on hand to keep the big air freighter in constant operation.

Junior Calf Club.

The Junior Boys' and Girls' Calf Club, being sponsored by the Cottam Rotary Club, is certainly a fine gesture of community spirit on the part of the Cottam Rotarians, who are giving a total of $200 in prizes.

Qualifications.
All those wishing to enter must do so by January 1st, 1947.

All boys and girls, from 12 years to 20 years, are eligible, but competition is limited to two children from any one family, with one entry only per child, and calf must be the property of the club member.

The heifer calves must be born between October 1st, 1946 and December 31st, 1946, to be eligible, and may be any four dairy breeds, either pure bred or grade.

The Calf Club committee of the Rotary Club will, upon request, assist in the purchasing of the heifer calves, at no charge.

If entrants require financial assistance to buy a calf they may obtain the necessary finances from the calf committee.

Judging and awarding of prizes will be held at the Rotary Carnival, on Civic Holiday, 1947, when an auction sale will be held for those who desire to sell their calves.

Anyone interested should get in touch with either Allan Dewhurst or Fred Whitney, Cottam.

The Prize List.
1st—Calf Club champion, $50; 2nd, $35; 3rd, $25; 4th, $15; 5th, $10; 6th, $5, donated by Hess Bros.; 7th, $5, donated by McLeod's Garage; 8th, $5, donated by Scotty's Grill.

Special prizes—Best calf, $10, donated by Cottam members; best showman, $5, donated by Pratt's Hardware; best kept records, $5, donated by Cottam Mercantile; best judging score, $5, donated by Scarlett's blacksmith shop.

There will also be many other prizes.

On Faith.

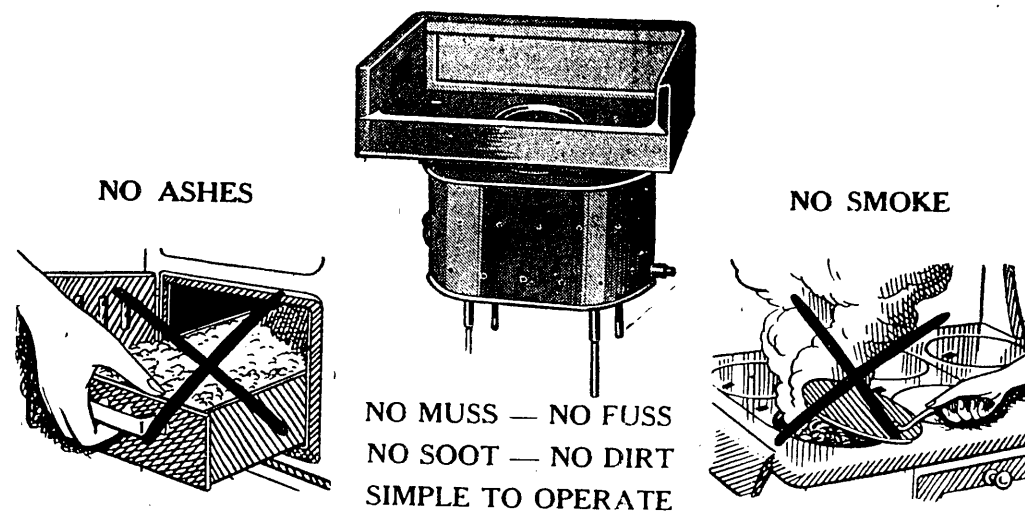

The following article appeared in the August issue of The Rotarian:

"Lady, you want them and you should have them." The proprietor of a little art shop in New York was pressing a pair of wall plaques into my sister's hands. She had just explained to him that, having that day returned from a West Indies cruise, she had no gift funds left. "Take the plaques now and send me the money after you get home," he added.

"But you don't even know me," my sister answered. "I live in Canada." "That's all right," the dealer replied. "I know you'll pay." Over her protests, he wrapped the plaques, gave my sister a receipted bill for them to aid her passage through customs, and sent her happily on her way with the coveted sculpture and with the ever-refreshing knowledge that there still are people who have a deep faith in their fellowman.—E. A. Naylor, Essex Ontario, Canada.

P. S.—She sent the money.

See The New Queen Range Burner In Action!

Here it is at last — the QUEEN Range Burner, bringing new convenience, safety and economy for every home now using a coal or wood range. No dirt or work, no smoke, no soot, no ashes, no need to worry about the supply of coal or wood, no wicks to clean or adjust.

The QUEEN Range Burner is a pot type burner which should not be confused with cut-of-date ring type burners in any way. In the QUEEN burner, the oil vaporizes from a cool pool of oil around the oil inlet in the combustion chamber. It will produce 50% more heat on 1/3 less oil — a burner with a six-year reputation in the United States. The remarkable economy offered by the QUEEN Range Burner is a result of the tremendous volume of air used in the heating flame. This burner actually burns 90% oil (No. 1 Distillate). This great economy of operation is made possible by special oil used. The QUEEN Range Burner is PERFECTLY SAFE — there is no danger whatsoever of the oil flooding the burner in case the flame goes out, since the special carburetor shuts off automatically.

Come in now and see this wonderful burner in operation in the store. Don't wait until fall to have the QUEEN Range Burner installed in your stove. We have been able so far to keep fairly well up with our orders. We will install the QUEEN Range Burner in your stove for only $79.50, complete.

Essex Juniors Trim Kingsville

The Essex Juniors trimmed Kingsville on Sunday last, in a very good ball game, by the score of 9 to 6. The local boys played their best game to date, featured by fine relief hurling by Wes Garrod, who replaced Bill Leebach to start the seventh inning, when Lefty became tired under the blazing sun. Garrod allowed only one hit and struck out four men in the three innings he worked. Wes also uncorked a peach of a throw from left field to nail Scratch at the plate, trying to score from second, on a line single. At bat Talbot and Bell, more led the attack, each getting a pair of singles, while Pete Ross hit a terrific triple to left centre for the only extra base hit of the game. Three Kingsville players got six of their teams' eight hits. Sherman, Brydges, and Cull each getting two hits. Frank Kokoval, little second sacker for Essex, walked four times out of five trips to the plate. Stan Trudell also walked on his only two times at bat. Hartley looked very good doing the receiving for Essex, and seems to get better every game.

Essex plays McGregor next Sunday, at the local Fair Grounds, game to start at 2:30 p.m.

Harrow Shuts Out Kingsville.

Wright pitched a lead four game Sunday afternoon at Kingsville, as Harrow a 10 victory and top of the Essex County League's week end.

Wright pitched 14 and walked four, while Tommy Howe allowed six hits, struck six and walked four.

The Harrow hurler was in trouble in the fourth, when Bob Graham hit a home run. In the fifth, Graham hit a home run, while Jack Howe singled to right, ending Graham's third, and then, in the sixth, Wright bowled down to the next three men.

The lone run came in the sixth, when Bill Baldwin singled to center and was stranded by second baseman Wes Garrod. Wright hit a single to centre to score Baldwin.

HOW MANY COATS?

The number of coats required when repainting a house, barn or other wooden structure depends on the condition of the surface. In normal painting of an entirely new surface, three coats—a primer and two finishing coats—usually are recommended. If the paint on the building being repainted is in good condition, free of loose, scaling or peeling paint, two coats of the finishing material normally is sufficient.

PEOPLE ARE ASKING?

Q.—My husband and I are planning on spending two weeks at a summer hotel, will we have to surrender any ration coupons?

A.—People taking up residence in summer hotels for a continuous period of fourteen days must surrender two ration coupons, one sugar coupon and one butter coupon for each person.

Q.—Is it true that returned service personnel may no longer service priority certificates for suits?

A.—Priority certificates for suits will not be issued to returned personnel after October 30th, 1946. However, retailers and custom tailors will be required to honor these up to December 31st, 1946.

Q.—Are all the coupons for sugar for camping now valid?

A.—Yes, on July 4th the last of the coupons, especially set aside for sugar for camping were declared valid.

Q.—The prices on tomatoes seem high, is there a ceiling price on tomatoes?

A.—No there is no ceiling price on tomatoes.

Q.—I am unable to get any more leaves of bread. The bread man tells me they have discontinued making these loaves, is that right?

A.—Bakers must continue in making of the Se leaves in the same proportion as they have been doing during the year 1941.

To Kill Poison Ivy.

Sodium chlorate, sodium chlorite, kerosene fuel oil, and a water white kerosene were investigated as herbicides for the eradication of poison ivy by the Division of Botany and Plant Pathology, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Poison ivy can be eradicated by sodium chlorate if treatment is persistent and thorough. Common salt and turpentine oil were not considered satisfactory. Water white kerosene when applied as a spray to the foliage proved of no value in eradicating poison ivy.

Success of Canada in Peace-time Aviation.

In spite of the fact that in an air sense Canada is at the middle of the world, more is needed for air success than to rest complacently upon her natural advantages, declares the current Monthly Letter of The Royal Bank of Canada. Far apart though such factors may seem, the success of Canada in peacetime aviation depends upon good aircraft, low rates, political and economic stability, a confident trend in business, reasonable taxation rates and enthusiastic attempts by government and people to build up business.

"It would be well," the article continues, "to take nothing for granted. Give geographical position; materials, factories and skilled men and women to build planes; natural resources and manufactured goods with which to trade; and many thousands of young men trained in all aspects of flying; there remain as needs to place and keep Canada in the lead of aviation development, imaginative initiative and a definite effort."

After telling of Canada's part in developing aviation, from the work of W. R. Turnbull at the beginning of the century to the exploits of bush pilots who taught the world how to carry freight over the tough northern stretches of Canada the article goes on to tell of wartime developments and discusses future prospects. "Air travel has raised many new problems for international solution as well as pointing up some old worries. Before development of the airplane Mercator's map was all right. An air map is quite different. In the centre of the air map showing the northern hemisphere there is a dot indicating the North Pole. Scattered over the circle are smaller dots representing cities. Reykjavik is a dot about an inch from Iceland, Moscow is another point an inch beyond, and another inch takes one to Aden. Winnipeg is an inch from Nome, and two inches from Tokyo. No boundary lines on the air map say 'This is Canada' or 'This is Iceland' or 'This is Japan'."

If a man wishes to leave Toronto for a flying visit to South Africa, he might be tempted by the Mercator map to go by way of Miami, Natal (in Brazil), trans-Atlantic to West Africa, and thence south, but the air map shows that his shorter route is by way of Montreal, Labrador, and Europe.

"Over-water flying has become a commonplace. The great circle route that cuts Montreal, the Straits of Belle Isle, Northern Ireland and London stretches on to Paris and points south, and if airplanes left tracks the route would be well worn. In its annual report of 1944-45, the Department of Transport records 127 round trips by TCA, carrying 600 tons of mail, 57 tons of freight, and 800 passengers. These trips were in addition to those by the air force."

"Need for a northeast staging route to the Kingdom in 1941. Before the end of the year Goose Bay field was in use, and upon completion of the Greenland and Iceland fields by the United States a staging route was available for commercial short-range aircraft. Estimates of possible traffic vary widely, but all are optimistic. An English source suggests five departures from London for North America daily, with three more starting on the continent, carrying an average of 600 passengers per day in each direction."

"Very little had been done in development of the North Pacific great circle route to the Far East until the war brought imperative needs. Today's airway is very good, at least as far as the Bering Sea, and it is likely to gain greater eminence as people come to realize that from the North American mid-continent it brings Shanghai 4,300 miles nearer than by the Hawaii-Manila route flown before the war. The northwest staging route was built, developed and put into operation by short-range aircraft. Estimates of possible traffic vary widely, but all are optimistic. An English source suggests five departures from London for North America daily, with three more starting on the continent, carrying an average of 600 passengers per day in each direction."

"Referring to the May meeting on aviation, the article remarks, 'The Dominion's potential position among the world's aviation leaders has been recognized. When the Chicago International Conference on Civil Aviation created the first inclusive international Civil Aviation Organization, Strong efforts should be made by Dominion, provincial, civic, and other bodies, and by citizens generally, to make Montreal so acceptable to the 500 delegates meeting there this month that they will vote to make this Canadian metropolis the permanent seat of the organization.'

"PACAO has great potentialities, and Canada will wish to have her full share in framing and executing the policies. Already this organization has produced an impressive number of technical standards, authorized regional route conferences, and laid the groundwork for an international code of flying technique which will increase efficiency and reduce hazards. Optimists say to leave things alone, and order will come out of chaos. It is the job of PACAO to endeavour to introduce the order before chaos has a chance to envelop aviation. In this task, Canada has taken a leading part."

Interesting facts are given in a comparison of air transport with other forms, and the article continues in part: "There is an unprecedented number of skills and interests. More than 120,000 men and women have been employed in aircraft manufacturing. A quarter million men voluntarily entered the Royal Canadian Air Force, of whom 773,000 graduated as air crew. Thousands of schoolboys have learned the fundamentals of aeronautics. Yet the future of airplane plants as in all countries, is still obscure. One characteristic of the airplane in transport activity is its carrying capacity when measured in ton-miles or passenger-miles. A relatively small number of efficient airplanes can establish an impressive transportation record. There were, and this is surprising, only 22,729 civil aircraft registered in the whole world in 1938, and of these only 2,388, or 11 per cent were in scheduled operation. It has been calculated that some 600 airplanes carrying 36 passengers each, operating 3,000 hours yearly with a 65 per cent load factor, could (theoretically) handle all the United States Pullman travel of 1940 and still have space for cargo and mail. J. Parker Van Zandt, of Bookings Institution, estimates that all air traffic can be carried in 1,500 airplanes, while a survey by the Curtis-Wright Corporation outside an even earlier internal aviation affairs, but, on the other hand, no nation can acquiesce in unregulated use of air travel and facilities by either its own or other nationals. These regulations should, in the interests of safety and efficiency, be alike in all countries, insofar as they are concerned with navigation aids, airport techniques, and similar affairs. It would not do if over every unsewn frontier an air crew had to get out a new book of rules."

The whole world is now much smaller, measured by travel time, than were Upper and Lower Canada at the time of Confederation, 75 years ago. Air travel and radio are making the world into a neighbourhood. There are closer contacts between political leaders, businessmen, educators, and scientists. Whether in addition to making nations neighbours, the development of air travel shall also make them friends, is a question for the people and their leaders, outside the scope of practical aviation."

Painting the Right Way.

Be they farm buildings or town houses, a lot of structures are in need of paint this spring, and chances are the majority of them will get their coatings of beauty and protection from their owners because of the continued shortage of professional painters in many parts of the country. The buildings won't suffer because of the so-called amateur touch, however, provided the amateur goes about the job in a professional way.

A good painter is distinguished by his attention to the details that the home owner often knows nothing about, or doesn't think about at the time of the paint job. Like a trained detective, the good painter knows where to look for trouble spots about the building and how to correct them.

The thing in which the non-professional painter is likely to fall down is in the lack of attention to danger signals which spell the entry of moisture into the buildings—a lack of attention which usually springs from a desire to cut out the preliminaries and get the paint brush swinging as quickly as possible.

Assuming then that you are acquainted with the fundamentals of how to paint, here are a few spots about the home or farm buildings which require a special look. They are listed in the interests of those who want their painting to be successful, long-lasting, and a good investment in time and money.

Gutters: Paint-neglected gutters and drains soon deteriorate and rust, costing money for repairs or replacements. Leaking gutters frequently are the cause of paint break-down and of damage inside the house where water gets in behind the siding.

Sashes: Unless painted, water seeps into sashes, the wood swells, putty crumbles out, glass cracks and frames come apart. The good painter always gives a coat or two of protection to sash bottoms as well as more visible parts, to prevent the absorption of water from wet window sills.

Window frames: Water often lodges on window sills, seeps into open joints to cause warping followed by shrinkage and paint breakdown. All cracks should be carefully filled with putty before the top coat of paint goes on.

Flashings: Flashings require painting the same as other parts of the house. Driving rains hunt out the smallest break of the metal when rust has opened the way. Attention to painting of such danger spots will help avoid trouble inconvenience and repair bills.

Shutters: Shutters should be painted along all edges, tops and bottoms as well as on the body so that water cannot get into the wood and cause the paint breakdown so often seen on poorly kept shutters. When not in use, the shutters should be stored in a safe dry place. The same rules apply, of course, to storm windows.

Doors: Edges, tops and bottoms of doors should be kept water-tight with paint to prevent swelling, sticking or shrinking. A well-painted door is easier to keep clean, and adds distinction to the house.

Shingles: Regular painting with special shingle paint keeps wood shingles in good condition, indefinitely, preventing warping, splitting and decay.

Screens: Should be well scrubbed to clean both wire and frames. The netting can be protected with well-thinned paint or varnish to minimize corrosion and to prevent rust-staining of the side of the house.

Porches: Porch floors get extremely hard service, and water drains slowly from them. Unless they are well-protected, sun tends to break water-soaked wood, causing warping and decay. Railings and pillars also need particular paint attention to prevent deterioration. All cracks should be puttied up before painting, particularly the openings which sometimes form at joints, and the paint should be worked carefully into the wood to present a smooth unbroken, weather-resisting surface.

PAINT INCREASES VALUE.

The rental value of residential property is increased 10% by a fresh coat of paint on the exterior and 13% by a freshly redecorated interior, according to a survey conducted by the Providence Sunday Journal.

The Journal made the survey among 1,362 real estate dealers, architects and building material suppliers.

Pride of ownership and protection of investment are said by owner-occupied homes; with health, safety, comfort and cheerful home atmosphere as additional benefits.

CCOLOR A SEEING AID.

Combinations of green and a brilliant orange, used in painting the walls of homes for the blind, have been found to be seeing aids to the near-blind. The color scheme basically consists of two shades of green paint on the walls, with supporting pillars, stair rails, hand trucks and other objects painted orange.

A. V. Weir, general manager of the Canadian National Institute for the blind, concurs in the claim of Peter J. Salmon, of Brooklyn, N.Y., that carefully-chosen color schemes can be an aid to the near-blind just as they are effective aids to better seeing by those who suffer no eye trouble.

Beware Poison Ivy — Method of Treatment.

In choosing the locale for a holiday camp or a picnic or a temporary resting place in a day's outing, the precaution should be taken to make sure that no poison ivy is around. This unpleasant weed can grow anywhere but is rarely met with on cultivated ground. It may be found in dense patches about a foot high, or as a small clump, or as a climbing plant twining around trees or crawling along fences. The leaves are in groups of three, glossy green, and in the fall assume autumnal colours. In June the flowers appear. They are small, greenish, and hidden by the leaves. In winter they take the form of hard, round, whitish berries. However, no matter what time of the year, the plant is poisonous in every part — leaves, stem, and roots which are permeated by an oil. On breakage of any part of the plant, the oil is released and contact is made.

The initial stage of poisoning is a mild itching sensation, followed by the development of blisters which become painful oozing sores. Poisoning may also result through anything that has touched the ivy — clothing, kit, shoe laces, tools, picnic baskets, or even a pet dog or cat. Many treatments have been proposed and used, but when possible the immediate scrubbing of the contacted part with strong laundry soap will effect a cure, if the soap has been used before the oil has penetrated the skin. A common treatment is daubing the affected parts with a three per cent solution of potassium permanganate or tincture of iodine. Once blisters have been formed, all rubbing should be avoided.

If the attack is severe a doctor should be consulted. Care should be taken to localize infection by painting iodine around the edges of sores, or by using compresses soaked in a two per cent solution of aluminum acetate. Any other cooling substance like soda or boracic acid powder. No application should be made when the sores are oozing because they may seal over and aggravate conditions.

It must be reported that there is no small degree of concern backstage in this capital about the possible length of this session on account of the huge list of tasks still facing the legislators before it can be closed, even eliminating that nothing unexpected may turn up to delay proceedings of the House of Commons, though such an eventuality is possible, of course. In addition to bills or resolutions on the order paper already, the chief item of business is, of course, the budget. But it is only one task and there remains to be passed a considerable volume of estimates. Then there are bills dealing with veterans' affairs, predicted to be twelve, and other bills arising from reports of committees. Furthermore, there are bills respecting the financing of the C. N. R.; amending the Criminal Code; amending the Immigration Act; consequent upon the Canadian Citizenship Act; Department of National Defence; Canadian Broadcasting Act; Canadian Information Service; Federal District Commission Act; Toronto Harbour Commission; Merchant Seamen's compensation; National Housing Act; Militia Pension Act; ratifying of Canada-United Kingdom Tax Agreements; Canadian War Crimes Regulations; and others.

Obviously, even this short outline of the tasks confronting the present session of Parliament indicates beyond a shadow of a doubt that it is an extremely lengthy programme still to be handled so that it would be no surprise if something is not done soon to expedite the business of the House, though the Government has taken pains to make it clear that it favours a speed up of proceedings but it is not anxious to shorten the business of this session, nor to cause it to be pressed on unduly.

A total of no less than 40,260 wives and children of Canadian ex-servicemen have been brought to this country up to and including July 5th, but still awaiting transportation in the United Kingdom are 15,227 wives and 4,357 children, with 2,188 wives and 67 children in Northwest Europe. This has become known in Ottawa where it is pointed out that the population boost would be over 62,000 war brides and children when this is accomplished.

The price of imported American coal to the Canadian consumer will not be affected by the new parity of the Canadian and American dollars, it is indicated in this capital, though Canadian industries will benefit since the price of their imported coal has not been subsidized, with the 10 cent benefit on every dollar being eaten up in lessening the subsidies by which the Canadian Government has kept the price to Canadian family consumers within certain ceilings.

Members of the Saskatchewan Prison Commission have been in Ottawa working on a report which they anticipate will probably be measuring means for all provinces in the reforming of penal institutions. This Commission was appointed by the Government of Saskatchewan to examine penal institutions or reformatories in Saskatchewan, New York, California, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Ohio, etc. During their stay in this capital, they interviewed the new Federal Commissioner of Penitentiaries, Maj. Gen. Ralph Gibson. It is believed that their report will be given to the Saskatchewan Government probably in September.

Arrangements are being made for a preparatory committee of which Canada is a member, to meet in London on October 15th, 1946, "so that a further constructive step may be taken towards freeing the productive forces of the world" by the United Nations. This has been made known in Ottawa by Premier Mackenzie King.

He disclosed that the suggested basis of discussion will be as follows: International agreement relating to the achievement and maintenance of high and stable levels of employment and economic activity, to regulations, restrictions and discriminations affecting international trade; to restrictive business practices; to international agreement relating to intergovernmental trade organization as a specialized agency of the United Nations. Owing to the scope and complexity of the preparatory work necessary before the international conference on trade and employment can be held itself, the conference may not take place until next year and negotiations relating to tariff changes will, it is hinted, be held early in 1947.

Resulting from "rapid deterioration of price control in the United States," the Minister of Finance, Rt. Hon. J. L. Hays, has announced that the Canadian Government has taken four steps to "maintain order, stability and independence" in this nation's economic and financial affairs, including adjustment to parity of Canada and the American dollar; clear listing of all goods now under "ceilings" which involve all articles really of significance in normal household budget; rigid control of markups (profits) on imports not eligible for price controlling subsidies so that henceforth all imported goods of a certain kind subject to price control, unless dealt with on another basis, will be priced on importer's landed costs plus prescribed maximum markup in each case which will be less than markup normally obtained by distributors of similar domestic goods, and subsidies paying policy will continue.

It is held in Ottawa that this practical insulation of Canada's economy against current unfavourable external conditions and easing of present inflationary pressures may bring sweeping implications but officials here refuse opinions on same, thought it is evident that Canadian government has no intention "to move exchange rate with every passing wind."

"We have established a simple and workable pricing principle for imports which, among other things, will enable a continued flow of whatever goods are available from other countries," despite fluctuation in foreign prices," said Mr. Hays.

Premier Mackenzie King has served notice in Parliament whereby he would seek an extension of the Emergency Transitional Powers Act in order to add to the already extremely heavy legislative program before the House of Commons indicating that the next session of Parliament would come in late January.

According to two bills introduced in Parliament by Justice Minister St. Laurent, it is intended to increase the number of puisne judges of the Exchequer Court from two to three and to raise the salaries paid judges generally by one-third starting next January 1st. It was explained that present salaries of judges were established in 1920, and these were lower than those paid in other countries based on the British judicial system.

"If it isn't listed, it isn't on the ceiling," said in Ottawa Donald Gordon, chairman, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, in referring to new order listing all goods considered to be under price control in Canada.

"When all is said and done, the objectives of our national stabilization program are the preservation of real social values, the protection of the value of real wages, of the real incomes of primary producers, of the real value of the income of pensioners and teachers, and office workers and of the wartime savings of so many millions of Canadians," declared Rt. Hon. J. L. Hays in Parliament.

"Let us not be unduly dismayed by the trouble and turmoil of the world today," stated Premier Mackenzie King. "What else could be expected as the aftermath of the appalling hatred and strife of recent years?"

"Canadian food products will be in demand for a long time," declared Hon. D. L. Campbell, Minister of Agriculture for Manitoba, in an interview in this capital.

While tourist trade may be affected adversely in certain parts of Canada by the parity of the Canadian and American dollar, yet it is stated in Ottawa that buyers from the United States may be plentiful since the price control system is much tighter in this country and prices generally lower for certain commodities.

Investigation into irregularities in the handling of food ration coupons in some branches of the Banque Provinciale de Credit, it is learned here.

The matter of filling posts of high diplomatic standing in Britain, Australia, South Africa, are dependent in some measure on transfers in the Canadian diplomatic corps.

Canadians who did "underground" work will get veterans' rights and benefits since the Veterans' Affairs Committee of the House of Commons has approved a draft bill to give such benefits and rights to 511 special operators who were dropped into Europe to do such dangerous work, with the remark that a considerable number of them were killed.

Reconstruction Minister Howland said in Ottawa that "if somebody will give us $50,000,000 for Polymer Corporation, we will sell it," this referring to the artificial rubber plant owned by the Federal Government.

One of the principal features of the bill adopted by the House of Commons to curb monopolies in trade is that it allows the Exchequer Court to cancel the patent and trademark rights of any firm restricting their use to the detriment of the public.

Oilcake Demand.

The tremendous expansion in the production of oilcake and oilcake meal which occurred during the war years as a result of the wartime expansion of Canada's live stock numbers has continued up to the end of 1945. Although supplies of those by-products of the oilseed crushing industry have increased with the expansion of the Canadian crushing capacity, the demand still remains far in excess of supply and even now the products are, in many instances, practically unobtainable.

A Useful Wagon for Farm Transport.

In the Agricultural Engineering Section of the Field Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, there are many labour-saving devices, as well as of farm machinery and other implements. These plans and specifications are for distribution to farmers. For example, in Agricultural Circular No. 6, there are full details about the construction and use of a handy transport wagon.

The platform of this wagon, explains Agricultural Engineer W. Kalbfleisch, is carried on two railway irons or I-beams which are fastened below two truck front axles. The floor or platform is about 12 months above the ground. When the wagon goes over a sharp rise in the road, the stringer acts as a skid until the wheels again contact the ground. The side walls which form the box are attached to the platform by hinges and can be lowered to form a ramp for loading, or removed if a low platform wagon is required.

A low transport wagon of this type is very useful for transporting farm machinery as moderately sized tractors can be driven across the platform. Due to the low platform, this wagon can be used to advantage in hauling corn, hay, manure, and other materials, and for moving heavy loads, sick animals, and other loads. When the wagon is rigidly constructed and when five-inch I-beams or railway irons (50 pounds to the foot) are used for the stringers, the wagon will carry three to four tons. The 32 x 6 truck tires used on the wagon (and illustrated in the circular) have a capacity of 1 1/2 tons each. Because the platform is large, care should be taken not to overload the wagon. Further explanations and information may be obtained from the Agricultural Engineering Section, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

REPAINTING METAL.

When repainting metal which still retains all or part of an old finish coating, all bare or worn spots should be cleaned down to the metal by wire-brushing, sandpapering or sand blasting; all loose or scaling paint should be similarly removed. The bare spots should be treated like new metal with a priming coat and any remaining glossy surfaces of old paint should be rubbed with sandpaper to promote adhesion of the new paint. Care should be taken to avoid application of the paint when the metal is too cold.

British Workers Have Unspendable Wages.

By Lewis Milligan.

So far as money is concerned there appears to be no poverty in Britain at the present time. Wage rates are at a high peak and the working people have more money than they can spend on the necessities of life because there is a shortage of necessities. Food and clothing are strictly rationed to the bare subsistence line, and luxuries or non-essentials articles which are not rationed are taxed to such an extent that their prices are prohibitive. So that the situation is that while the working people have plenty of money, they are living in a state of want so far as food and clothing are concerned, and in poverty in regard to what we might call the essentials of life.

It is undoubtedly true that there are black markets, and these relieve the situation for many people, particularly for those who eat in high-class restaurants, and I was told that there is considerable traffic in counterfeit ration "points". But the majority of people obey the law and make ends meet by careful housekeeping and economy in clothing. From my observations, I would say that the British people generally are better clad than they were a generation ago, and while they may lack the niceties of food they appear to be healthy enough. There are some murmurings against the continuance of wartime restrictions, and the people in the queues look anything but happy.

But queuing has become a habit with the people of England. The first thing the housewife does after breakfast is to hasten out to get in line at one of her assigned shops to procure her rationed portion of food. In the big cities and even in the small towns one comes upon queues everywhere. Commenting on this situation, the London Daily Mirror, in an editorial entitled "A Rhapsody in Queues," said "Queues which were a necessity in wartime have become a social disease. People wanting tickets for the Channel Islands have been queuing at London Station for three days. At the end of each night they get tickets guaranteeing them a place in the queue next morning. Then they queue up for places in special trains in which they are permitted to sleep! It is a burlesque of the dream. It is a rhapsody in queues!"

The queuing habit has become so strong among the women of England that the war brides on the Queen Mary not only queued for waiting

Food Saving.

According to official figures, wage rates in England have gone up 60 per cent since the beginning of the war while the cost of living index has risen only 32 per cent. It is estimated that wage increases by the end of the year will amount to an annual rate of £4,257,000 a week, compared with £2,633,000 in 1940, and £2,485,000 in 1941—the two peak years of war. The year 1920 was the only previous year on record which eclipsed the rate so far set for this year, and it was followed in 1921 by the biggest slump on record, when wages fell by more than £6,000,000 a week. Two reasons are given for this year's trend. First is "compensation for loss of war overtime, the second is the need to attract more workers to vital industries."

IF YOU SOMETIMES FIND TELEPHONE SERVICE SLOW...There's a Reason!

When your telephone call takes longer than you think it should, please remember —

There's a critical shortage of telephone equipment all over the country—in fact, all over the world!

In order that as few applicants as possible may have to wait for service, we are connecting more telephones than our central office equipment was intended to handle. It is heavily overloaded. Our operators are doing their utmost to complete calls with a minimum of delay, but slow service on some calls is inevitable.

Manufacturers of telephone equipment are working night and day to catch up on civilian needs after having had to devote all their output to war purposes. Intricate equipment takes time—both to manufacture and to instal.

We are confident that our subscribers will be indulgent if service is slow on some of their calls when they reflect that the prime reason is that we are trying to serve as many applicants as we possibly can.

We ask your tolerant cooperation until we are able to clean up this difficult equipment shortage situation.

PAINT INCREASES VALUE.

The rental value of residential property is increased 10% by a fresh coat of paint on the exterior and 13% by a freshly redecorated interior, according to a survey conducted by the Providence Sunday Journal.

The Journal made the survey among 3,362 real estate dealers, architects and building material suppliers.

Pride of ownership and protection of investment are said by owner-occupied homes; with health, safety, comfort and cheerful home atmosphere as additional benefits.

COLOR A SEEING AID.

Combinations of green and a brilliant orange, used in painting the walls of homes for the blind, have been found to be seeing aids to the near-blind. The color scheme basically consists of two shades of green paint on the walls, with supporting pillars, stair rails, hand trucks and other objects painted orange.

A. V. Weil, general manager of the Canadian National Institute for the blind, concurs in the claim of Peter J. Salmon, of Brooklyn, N.Y., that carefully-chosen color schemes can be an aid to the near-blind just as they are effective aids to better seeing by those who suffer no eye trouble.

Foreman's Pay $12 a Week.

So Printer Quit His Job Forty Years Ago.

William A. Oliver, veteran printer, an early member of the typographical union, quit a job as foreman 40 years ago, because the union scale for the job was $12 a week, and his employer would give him no more than nine.

Recalls Eccles Gott.

Mr. Oliver spent his youth in Amherstburg. He was apprenticed to the Windsor Record, 50 years ago. He remembers the field days at Harrow and Amherstburg, where one of his rivals was the young Eccles Gott, who was to become the M. P. for Essex South.

Feeling the wanderlust when he was 19, Mr. Oliver went to the U. S., and was foreman in many newspaper offices, including the New York Times, the Battle Creek and Lansing, Mich., where he returned from the State Jour and 14 years ago.

First Color Press.

He was in charge of the first Duplex Color Press, an old "stove pipe" type, which used small hand routed plates. There was great excitement in Kalamazoo when a special edition appeared on Decoration Day, with colored flags in the corners. Almost at once he says, the business men realized the value of color in their advertisements but the process was so laborious that the paper had to refuse advertising contracts.

Visiting friends in Windsor at the moment, Mr. Oliver came in to The Star, because he "couldn't stay away from the smell of ink for very long," he said.

The above item was taken out of the Windsor Star of July 3rd.

"Bill" will be well remembered by the older residents of town as he worked for the late publishers of the Free Press for many years some 45 years ago.

Johnny: "I know, but this is not the same noise. I was playing the drum then, but I'm blowing my whistle now."

I. Ross Wins Game in Ninth With a Double.

Essex again broke into the win column on Sunday, when they defeated Tilbury, on their home diamond, by a score of 7 to 5, thanks to I. Ross, timely double in the ninth inning, with two out. Ross, however, had to share "star of the day" with Ted Parent, whose delayed steal of home, in the seventh, was executed perfectly and who also got two long doubles. Fleming got in trouble in the 8th, but pitched good ball, striking out eight men in 4 2-3 innings.

First Inning.

Essex—Queen, first up, worked Benoit for base on balls; A. Miller sacrificed; pitcher to first; Brackell singled to center; to score Queen; Brackell stole second; Brown struck out; Parent went out, second to first—1 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Tilbury—Ted Daigneau tied to M. Miller in right; Parent took Tom Daigneau's fly in center; Reardon's fly in short center fell for a hit; Pendergast walked; King ended the inning on a high one to Parent—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Second Inning.

Essex—M. Miller struck out, but Ted Daigneau, who had been singled to left, Loebach stopping at second; Queen ended the inning, grounding out, pitcher to first—0 run, 2 hits, 0 error.

Tilbury—Benoit struck out; R. Rankin was safe on Queen's error on his ground ball; Askin and Ballard fanned—0 run, 0 hit, 1 error.

Third Inning.

Essex—Art Miller was out on a grounder to Pendergast, unassisted; Brackell flied to center; Brown was safe on Askin's error, and stole second; Parent doubled to right center to score Brown; M. Miller was thrown out by Askin—1 run, 1 hit, 1 error.

Fourth Inning.

Essex—Martin again struck out; Loebach singled to left and stole second; Jessop struck out; Queen again walked; Art Miller flied high to center for the third out—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Tilbury—Benoit singled over third base bag; R. Rankin singled to left; Benoit stopping at second; Askin struck out; Holmes, batting for Ballard, hit into a fast double play, Queen to Brown to A. Miller—0 runs, 2 hits, 0 error.

Fifth Inning.

Essex—Brackell was thrown out by Askin; Brown flied to Tom Daigneau in center; Parent doubled to left center; M. Miller was purposely passed; with Martin at bat, both runners advanced on a wild pitch, but the batter grounded out, third to first, to end the inning—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Tilbury—Ted Daigneau lined right at Brown; Pendergast walked, and went to second on a wild pitch; with the count 2 balls and 1 strike on Pendergast, Fleming replaced Jessop and I. Ross took over the catching duties; Pendergast walked to fill the bases; King also walked, to force in Tom Daigneau with Tilbury's first run.

Benoit flied to Queen, who recovered in time to Pendergast, at third; Reardon scoring to tie the score, and King reached second; King stole third; R. Rankin struck out—2 runs, 0 hits, 0 error.

Sixth Inning.

Essex—Loebach popped to King; Askin threw out Fleming, and Pendergast took Queen's grounder for an unassisted put-out—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Tilbury—Askin and Holmes struck out; Ted Daigneau walked and stole second; Tom Daigneau struck out—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Seventh Inning.

Essex—A. Miller singled to right; Brackell hit a hard line drive right at King; Brown sacrificed, Benoit to Pendergast; Parent was purposely passed; M. Miller singled to left and when R. Rankin let the ball get by him, A. Miller scored, Parent reached third and M. Miller second; with I. Ross at bat, Parent, by a delayed steal, stole home, and when Askin threw high over Reardon's head, M. Miller followed him across the plate; I. Ross was thrown out by King—3 runs, 2 hits, 2 errors.

Tilbury—Reardon singled through Brackell, when the ball took a bad bound; Art Miller took Pendergast's high infield fly; King and Benoit were called out on strikes—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Eighth Inning.

Essex—D. Rankin, one-arm ramed pitcher, went to the box for Tilbury. Loebach grounded out to first base, unassisted; Fleming singled to left; Queen hit to King for a fielder's choice, the Tilbury second baseman tossing to Ted Daigneau, trying for Fleming, but the shortstop failed to touch second and threw to first too late to get the batter, however Fleming, thinking he was out, continued to third and was tagged out sliding in, Pendergast to Askin; Queen stole second, but Art Miller ended the inning on a grounder to King—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Tilbury—R. Rankin singled to left; Askin hit to Fleming and when A. Miller let his fly, quick throw, get by him, Rankin took third; Askin stole second and both scored on Holmes' single to center; Holmes then took second on a short passed ball; Ted Daigneau sacrificed, I. Ross to A. Miller, Holmes moving over to third, from where he scored on Tom Daigneau's infield single; Reardon hit to Brackell, who threw to Brown to force Tom Daigneau; Pendergast struck out—3 runs, 3 hits, 1 error.

Ninth Inning.

Essex—Brackell's fly fell in short left for a hit; Brown struck out; Parent flied high to King in short center; Brackell stole second; M. Miller walked; I. Ross, with the count three and two, lined a double over R. Rankin's head in left, to score Brackell and M. Miller; Loebach was thrown out by Ted Daigneau—2 runs, 2 hits, 0 error.

Tilbury—King was thrown out by Brackell; D. Rankin flied to Loebach in left, and R. Rankin struck out—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

More and more each day I miss him.
Friends may think the wound is healed,

Will never fade away.

FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1946.

Innocent Bystanders?

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

Most of us are merely bystanders in the present industrial conflict. At the close of the war it was estimated that, apart from the armed forces, there were better than 4,000,000 regularly employed persons in Canada. At almost the same time—1943 to be exact—organized labor in Canada had reached a total of 641,533. A little mental arithmetic, then, will very quickly show that, of all the workers in Canada, only about one in six belongs to any union, and only a very minute fraction has any part in superior management. Only these two combined could have any hope of advantage from the current industrial unrest.

In the main, therefore, we have watched the fracas with a somewhat detached interest. Probably our sympathies have been largely on the side of labor. We have all realized, some what dimly perhaps, that unionism had provided a necessary protection for workers whom the machine age had drawn from the farm into the unfamiliar conditions of organized industry. In that more ruthless and arrogant age, too, it was not surprising that the "haves" designated lazily as capital and management should have accepted their blessing as God-given and have assumed that God looked down so many poor had in fact been so to remain. Of course, that thinking was as foolish a top as the concept of the divine right of kings from which it stemmed. As industry grew in importance, and management in wisdom, that attitude changed. This was partially the result of trade organizations that started a new way of thinking, that in turn induced a new sense of fairness and the growing belief that was shared somewhat less promptly by management—that no prosperity was possible that did not have as its foundation a solvent working class.

That was the general attitude of us with any dispute that goes beyond argument into overt act is that when someone tosses a brick, there is a better-than-even chance that it will find the head of some non-participant who, up till then, has been a disinterested party. That is what is happening to-day. True, labor has been arguing that a wage increase of approximately 18 percent can be taken from the profits of industry without suffering. Wouldn't it be wonderful if it were true? But if it were true, would the earnings of capital have declined, in recent years, from an easy 5, 6, or 8 percent to a rather uncertain 2?

Let us not be to simple-minded. If industry had been making that kind of profit, capital would have been demanding not 3 but 10 or 12 per cent. The truth is that extra costs, beyond the nominal, must be reflected in higher prices. Management can pass these along to the consumer. Labor can make greater wage demands to offset these effects, even if it means no net gain. But there is one party who must lose: the innocent bystander who can't pass on his obligations to anyone, and can't compel higher wages to protect himself.

When the bystander finally comes to realize how he is being whipped around in this industrial conflict, he may change his opinion that it isn't his fight. And when he gets into it, he will put both labor and management in a tough spot. Representing as he does five-sixths of the ultimate consumers when he gets tired of being pushed around for somebody else's dubious good, and decides to strike himself, there will be no profits for management and few jobs for labor.

Housing Problems in England

by Lewis Milligan.

There is much talk about the housing problems in Canada but it is nothing compared to the problem of housing the hundreds of thousands of people who have been bombed out of their homes in England. That is not to say that those people have not been able to find places in which to live, for they have been housed or roomed in the larger residences in the suburbs, many of which were vacated during the war years for various reasons, one of which was the difficulty in obtaining domestic help, another was high taxes, and in some instances the occupants deserted their city mansions for safer districts.

Many fine residences in one-time select suburbs have been turned into apartments or rooming houses in which the homeless were glad to find shelter, and large numbers of these people have adapted themselves more or less comfortably to their limited quarters. Occasionally one comes across one of these palatial residences still occupied by an aristocratic family with a depleted staff of servants and an old gardener who has kept the enclosed grounds with the lawns and shrubs in perfect condition.

In all the large cities prefabricated houses are being built on the cleared foundations in the downtown bombed residential areas, and these are immediately occupied. It is realized, however, that this is but a temporary measure and it is complained that the government is not fulfilling its solemn promise to carry out an extensive program of permanent housing. Private builders are not entering the housing field because of the difficulty in obtaining materials, and because of the labor "shortage", which in reality means the high cost of labor. In Liverpool during May some 2,500 men were reported as unemployed. These were drawing pay under the builders' and property owners' complaint that they have to fill out too many forms in order to get building materials, and one real estate man told me that he had to get a government permit to buy a few electric switches and other necessary articles for repairs.

Between the two great wars such cities as Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham went into business of housing on a very large scale. They extended their boundaries out into the countryside, erecting thousands of modern dwellings with wide and winding thoroughfares. In the first instances these dwellings were built by the city with direct labor, but this proved to be costly and most of the work was later done by contract under city inspection. The houses were mostly six-roomed houses, rent from about 12 shillings to 17 shillings a week including rates, and whenever the city rates go up the tenant is charged with the increase. This applies to privately rented houses also, so that every tenant is a direct ratepayer.

The city employs rent-collecting and property-repairing staffs, also inspectors who enter the houses at will to see that they are kept in good order. The city entered the business of housing originally as a slum clearance scheme, demolishing downtown slum property and erecting large apartment buildings. It is generally agreed that the undertaking of building houses for rent by the city was the only solution to the problem, as private builders were only interested in building houses for sale, and the English working man seems to have no desire to own his own home. Moreover, he cannot own an automobile because he would have no place to keep it as the city houses are built in attached blocks and have no rear entrances. Very few have telephones, although the telephone services is publicly owned. All of which has had the effect of cramping and stereotyping the lives of the common people.

Progressing of housing in Britain is exceedingly slow. According to figures issued by the Ministry of Health and Housing, the local authorities have completed only 1,071 permanent houses in England and Wales up to April 30. Twelve of these local authorities have built more than 300 temporary houses each, London heading the list with 1,749; Hull next with 1,016; Coventry 556; Birmingham 510; Sheffield 469; Bristol 457; Liverpool 313. Birmingham heads the list of 15 towns where private builders have completed more than 30 permanent houses in each place, the total being 120. Only 2 such houses have been completed in Liverpool, 7 in Manchester, and none in London, while Birmingham leads with 125 houses built by private enterprise.

Creative Energy.

Study of the proper employment of the creative forces in man is urged by Ottawa health authorities. They point out that many young people need intimate guidance for better understanding of the creative impulses and the emotions. Vitality and energy, it is stressed, are responsible for many forms of activity, including quality of work, powers of incentive and even artistic ability. All the force which make for fuller and more positive life depend upon this creative drive, which, therefore, must be harnessed to the best purposes.

Coupons now valid are sugar preserves, $1 to $23; butter, $10 to $15; meat, $40 to $46.

New Life to Soil.

An Essex County friend of mine told me of his plans to restore his soil and they are so well thought out that they should be passed along to as many as possible. That explains their appearance in this column just as he outlined them to me.

Like many more farmers, he had been repeating one crop on his land year after year until he realized he was burning his humus and reducing the fertility. He said that his soil had become so compact that the tiles, which once were ample to drain his fields, are inadequate now. He used to be able to draw a three-furrow plow with his tractor but now the same machine has to struggle to pull a two-furrow one. His problem was to restore his soil to its proper condition without reducing his income very much.

Using Hoe Crop.

The first step in this man's plan is to have a good hoe crop on each field before seeding it down. The matter of a hoe crop and good income are both settled in his mind by a large crop of sugar beets. This income, he figures, will keep him in cash while he is restoring the fertility to his land. Sugar beets were also chosen because many farmers have noticed that yields of oats and barley are larger after beets than after any other crop.

Using Clover.

He also plans a good mowing variety of barley and seeding down red clover on one part of the field and sweet clover on the other. The sweet clover will be plowed down in the spring and a crop of soy beans planted. One crop of red clover will be cut and the land plowed in the fall. The next spring he intends to grow barley over the whole field and seed the land down with sweet and red clover as he did before. Clover is being used in place of alfalfa because this farmer has little use for hay and clovers are better soil-building crops than alfalfa.

After two crops of clover, a crop of corn is planted, followed by sugar beets and again using spring grains as the nurse crop for clovers. This plan is to be repeated over the whole farm and it looks like a good one to me for a place with only a few livestock.

Useful Egg Cooler and Humidifier.

Experimental work has shown definitely that to maintain the quality of eggs they must be kept in an atmosphere that is both cool and moist—65 degrees Fahrenheit temperature and above 75 per cent humidity. A well ventilated cellar serves the purpose excellently, but where a cellar is not available the same results may be obtained by the use of an egg cabinet—an egg cooler and humidifier in one—such as has been evolved through the co-operative work of the Poultry Division and the Agricultural Engineering Section, Field Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Full plans and specifications of the cabinet may be obtained by writing to the Farm.

The size of the cabinet may be increased according to individual requirements. It is divided into three compartments. The top compartment or shelf may be used for empty cases so that they will be cooled before filling. The bottom shelf will hold the wire baskets full of eggs as they are brought from the poultry house and cooled before packing, and the middle shelf will serve as the receptacle for the eggs packed for shipment.

The sides, top, and bottom of the cabinet are built of tongued and grooved lumber, also the front which is made in the form of a hinged door. The back is covered with a burlap curtain which is continually kept moist by having one end hanging from a tank of water on top of the cabinet and the bottom end of the curtain loosely falling into the metal tank on the floor for drainage.

In view of the enormous output of eggs by the Canadian poultry industry and the higher prices for Grade A eggs, this egg cooling and humidifying cabinet has great practical value. It will maintain the quality in eggs and will pay many times its original cost in increased prices due to better grade eggs. The Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, will be glad to give full information about it.

Cereals.

The word "cerealism" immediately presents a picture of breakfast food. Some people forget or do not know that they can also be used in soups, main dishes, muffins and hot breads, and also in desserts and in cookies.

Canada produces large quantities of cereals in great variety. They are therefore an easily obtained food. Canadian people should use more of them. Whole grain cereals are those from which little or nothing is removed in processing. They are a more complete food than those which are refined. There is a choice of flaked, cracked and rolled types, also meals and flours, all of which are inexpensive.

Cereals should be examined frequently to make sure they are in good condition. All should be kept tightly covered in a cool, dry place, to protect against insects and vermin. Glass sealers or tightly covered tin canisters are excellent for storing cereals purchased in bulk. Those which come in packages may be stored in their own containers, but must be kept tightly closed.

To prevent the development of weevils, heat the cereal in a warm oven (not higher than 200° F) for about an hour. Cool well before storing. Whole grain flours and meals containing germ and any prepared flours containing fat will turn rancid unless kept in a cool, dark place. The home economists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, offers several excellent recipes.

Hello Homemakers!

Most folks tell us, "Desserts are my worst problem." It is no wonder with fruit and sugar low in supply and little fat and cornstarch. But if women with electric and wood stoves have difficulty thinking up desserts, the two-element plate cooks are really up against it. They have to eliminate all those tempting oven-baked puddings and rely on top stove desserts exclusively.

Yet when you stop to think seriously about it and study cook books, you discover that the situation is not hopeless after all. Puddings, good ones, too, can be made on top of the electric plate.

Today we list a number of dessert ideas, hot and cold, off the top elements. Add these to the ones you have already collected and your dessert problem will disappear.

DESSERTS FOR TWO-ELEMENT STOVE DINNERS.

1. For a hot, hearty dessert make double boiler cottage pudding, cooking vegetables or other food in the boiling water underneath.

Leftover puddings may also be heated in double boiler at the same time other foods are being cooked.

2. Steam batter puddings cook more quickly in individual greased custard cups than casseroles.

If you have not a steamer put carrot puddings in a condensed soup tins, cover with wax paper and set in a saucepan containing two inches of water and steam. To reheat, cut two servings off and heat in a sieve. Serve with top milk.

3. Stew rhubarb, add a few raisins for variety. Serve with graham crackers, plain or put together with date filling.

4. Make milk puddings and custards in advance and let cool while cooking first course.

For example: Maple Rennet, Honey Junket, Chocolate Meringue Custard, Rhubarb Custard, and other flavoured custards, Cottage Cheese Pudding, Barley Pudding, Cornmeal Pudding, Lemon Rice Pudding, Vanilla Crumb Pudding, and Farina Pudding.

5. Quick Fruit Shortcake: Drain juice from left-over canned fruit. Thicken with cornstarch, 1 teaspoon in 1 tablespoon cold water for 1/2 cup juice. Add fruit and heat slightly. Pour over slices of sponge cake (bought) or drop cakes.

6. Top-of-stove scones may be made successfully to serve with stewed fruit first time, with the remainder make a rice custard next day. Make custard in double-boiler, add rice, reheat and pour into serving dishes.

7. Bavarian sponges require a small amount of heat. The gelatine may be dissolved in a dipper over the tea kettle and the dessert finished at the kitchen table according to recipe.

9. Pancakes require a short cooking time. Serve with synthetic fruit syrup or raisin sauce when sugar quota is low.

10. Press squares of bread into greased muffin tins and place over an element turned medium. Toast 3 minutes. Fill these shells with marmalade or custard filling.

11. Fruit dumplings can be made on top of stove this way: Cook fruit in a little syrup. Add 1 beaten egg, 1 teaspoon sugar and enough milk to moisten to 1 cup prepared biscuit mix. Drop by spoonfuls on top of simmering fruit and juice. Cover and let simmer, with out removing lid for 15 minutes. Use wide saucepan so dumplings will not be crowded.

DOUBLE BOILER COTTAGE PUDDING.

1 cup sifted pastry flour, 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons soft shortening or butter, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 egg well beaten, 1/2 cup milk, 1/2 cup jam or sweetened fresh or canned fruit, if desired.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cream shortening or butter, add vanilla then add sugar gradually. Add beaten egg and beat until mixture is light and fluffy. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk. Grease thoroughly top part of double boiler (1 1/2 quart capacity). Put in jam or fruit, if used. Pour batter over jam or fruit. Cover and place over boiling water (in bottom part of double boiler). Cook for 1 1/2 hours or until pudding is firm on top. Keep water boiling steadily. Turn out and serve pudding with sauce or cream. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

NOTE: If pudding is made without jam or fruit, turn out and garnish with sliced prunes or serve plain with a fruit or any desired pudding sauce.

TOP-OF-THE-STOVE SCONES.

1 egg, 1/2 cup milk, 3 tablespoons mild-flavoured fat, melted, 1 1/2 cups sifted flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar.

Beat eggs, add milk and melted fat. Mix and sift ingredients and add to the milk mixture (mixture is very soft). Turn onto a floured board and pat out 1/4-inch thick. Cut in triangles. Heat frying pan and cover (preferably an iron pan) until very hot. Put scones in frying pan, cover and reduce the heat. Cook until well puffed and almost cooked, about 15 minutes.

Turn scones and brown slightly on other sides. Serve hot like tea biscuits. Be sure to keep heat as low as possible during cooking, to avoid burning. Yield: 4 large or 8 small scones.

World Fruit Crisis May Last For Years.

The critical world food situation may last for four or five years. Ample evidence exists to show that, even with the average or better than average yields for the remainder of 1946 and 1947, the world food situation will remain critical, at least until the harvests of 1947. Sir John Boyd Orr, Director General of Food and Agricultural Organization, has stated that the world food situation is likely to remain critical in one way or another for the next four or five years, and has urged some agreement on a plan for international agricultural action over that period of time.

The grain supply outlook for the approaching season is anything but reassuring, states the Monthly Review of the Wheat Situation. A preliminary estimate of world foods needs and supplies for 1946-47, prepared by the FAO, reveals that in the case of wheat the imports need of the deficit countries may be as large as 30 million metric tons in order to maintain a minimum subsistence. On the other hand, assuming average weather conditions, the amount available from the "Big Four" exporters is not likely to exceed 20 million tons.

The present moment is all we can call our own for works of mercy, of righteous dealing, and of family tenderness.—George Eliot.

The Duty of Being Happy.

Robert Louis Stevenson wrote, "There is no duty we undertake so much as the duty of being happy." We may all be grateful to have our attention called to the fact that happiness is a state of mind which we are duty bound to claim and demonstrate, rather than a mere emotion resulting from felicitous experiences.

Christ Jesus held happiness to be natural to the real man. This is evident in His meaningful statement, (John 15:11). "These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." He knew that a joyous heart is man's heritage, the natural expression of divine grace.

A common question regarding happiness is, "How can I be happy when my experiences are distressing, when unemployment, poor health, weariness, and frustration haunt me?" How can I be happy in the face of these conditions?" Christian Science shows that right reasoning about happiness may be based on a spiritual, not from a material basis.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 276): "If money in man is as real and immortal as in music, discord is unreal and mortal." One who glimpses the indissoluble relationship of God and man is not bound by sadness or depression. Rather does he become increasingly aware of the unfoldment of harmony and peace.

Advancing from the standpoint of true joy, one will not believe that he would be happy if he were well, or rich, or surrounded by companions. Rather will he insist that because man is one with the Father, he is one with the joy and perfection that is natural to the Father and cannot possibly lack good.

The genuine Christian is joyous not sorrowful; he gives loving service to his fellow man, sows the good seed of Truth and Love, and reaps what he sows. He should consistently claim the reward of right doing, because the Scriptures assure him (Galatians 6:7). "Whoever sows man sows what shall he also reap"—Christian Science Monitor.

SEWING. D. TAPIC.

FRIDAY, JULY 19, 1946.

Essex Town Council.

Council met in the Council Chamber, as per adjournment, with Mayor Linton, Reeve Irwin, and Councillors Chase, Lee, Shaw, Francotte and Brushett present.

C. B. Allison, engineer, was present in regard to the McEntee drain. A discussion followed re laying of sewer crock along the northerly side of the Gosfield Townline from No. 3 Highway to Cut-off road, to replace the open ditch.

Mr. Francotte thought this should be done, town to stand the expense, as has been done in other cases.

The Engineer also thought the tile should be laid as an improvement to the adjoining property, which is being built on.

It was left with the Engineer as to size of sewer crock required.

Council then sat in with the Public Utilities Commission, at their request, and discussed the town's water situation.

Mayor Linton stated he was in favour of keeping the Canning Factory supply and the town supply separate. This could be done by putting in a T at the corner of Center and Alton streets and run a main from there to the factory and let them have all the water, during the packing season, from the Broom and Garrow wells.

Mr. Truesdale, water works engineer, who was present, stated that he could easily handle the needs of the town with the Howe and M.C.R. wells. The biggest trouble is storage space.

Mr. Geddes, Town Solicitor, stated that at the request of the Clerk, he had checked up the legal angle and was of opinion that whereas the town can't sell the wells to the factory, they could lease them to the Company, but not for a term of over five years.

Quite a lengthy discussion followed re purchasing of the Hutchinson pond, and make same over into an open reservoir for either town or Canning factory.

As no one from the Stokely plant was present, it was decided to adjourn the meeting and the Clerk was instructed to invite Ed. Stokely to a meeting on Tuesday evening, at 8 p.m.

Council and P. U. Commission Hold Joint Meeting.

Council and Public Utilities Commission met in joint special session, with all members present except Mr. Chase.

Messrs. Ed. Stokely, Doug Stevenson and Norman Affleck, of the local factory, were also present.

After a lengthy discussion it was agreed that the Stokely Company be allowed to test pump the Garrow and Broom wells, no further action to be taken until they are satisfied as to the amount of water these wells will throw.

Respiratory Diseases.

Warning to workers in industry to guard against lung irritants at work, is issued by the Industrial Hygiene Division of the Dominion Government.

Those whose work exposes them to such potential hazards as dust, fumes, sand particles, etc., are advised to adhere closely to plant rules regarding "good housekeeping," and to use all the protective devices provided for employee protection.

As a result of the work carried out in the past by all the Services of the Department in co-operation with the provinces and agricultural colleges, a much greater measure of stability has been given to farming in the Dominion.

Now that the war has ended all the Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture — Experimental Farms, Science, Production and Marketing — visualize a broader and fuller program of usefulness to the people of Canada.

The facilities of these Services are varied and extensive. Everybody in Canada is invited to take advantage of them freely. The Department is always ready to assist in any way in the advancement of the basic industry of Canada — Agriculture.

Dominion Department of Agriculture

Ottawa, Canada.

HON. JAMES G. GARDINER, Minister.

DR. G. S. H. BARTON, Deputy Minister.

That the government and people of Canada are sincerely concerned with the fate of Jewish refugees in Europe — and that the orders-in-council passed on May 28 are considered only "a short term measure to provide some early and partial relief in number of individual cases" was the heartening information given to the House of Commons last week by the Prime Minister.

The action taken by order-in-council was without distinction as to race and creed.

While most Canadians realize the truth of Mr. King's statement that "the general problem of refugees, because of its magnitude, can only be resolved by the United Nations as a whole" there is a hope that Canada will take an active and leading part in dealing with suffering people at that meeting of the "Social and Economic Council" of the United Nations scheduled for August 30.

Our people have wholeheartedly and unanimously accepted the great humanitarian task of feeding millions of starving people in Europe. Difficulties of transportation and distribution seriously reduce the number of people whom we can help.

Will the people of Canada rise to what is perhaps the greatest opportunity and challenge of all the ages? Echoes from Parliament.

(During the address of Senator McGeer (B.C.) on the "Redistribution Bill").

Sensor Lambert: May I ask the honourable gentleman if he would care to read the remarks made by the Minister of Justice beyond the point at which he has been quoted? The minister said that legally he thought section 133 could be dealt with by parliament without the consent of legislatures. He was speaking then as a lawyer; but afterwards, speaking as a constitutionalist — and there is a difference — he made remarks which satisfied me and, to my mind, changed the whole complexion of the argument.

Sensor Reebuck: Would the honourable gentleman read what the minister said? . . .

Sensor McGeer: It was a spirit of generosity that caused me to omit quoting these words of the minister.

Sensor Lambert: I think it is the spirit of the thing that counts.

Sensor McGeer: I will read the remainder of the minister's remarks now, since they have been referred to. Continuing from the point where I left off, he said:

"The situation appears to me to be this. There are persons and nations who reach a high estate in the affairs of men, and the high estate they reach impose upon them high obligations. There was no obligation on the Tribune Fester to say to King Agrippa that he could not deliver Paul to the Jews . . . There was no such statute; there was no law which required that this be done; but there was the concept in the Roman conscience that it was the proper thing to do."

I suppose the inference is that the Parliament of Canada, having reached its new high estate, has developed a sense of responsibility equivalent to that which the Roman Emperors had in the time of St. Paul.

CLASH. In Great Britain Socialism, as practised by the labor government, has quickly reached the inevitable clash with the co-operative movement.

The Co-operative non-profit insurance group known as the "Friendly Societies", with more than eight million members, want to be included in the government's National Insurance program.

The "Friendly Societies", some of them over two hundred years old, are supported in their claim by Lord Beveridge, Liberal leader and author of the "Cradle-to-Grave" security plan.

Sr William Beveridge was elevated to peerage by the King on the advice of the Labor government.

Correspondents from all parts of Canada are unanimous in reporting favorable comment on the government's four major steps to protect Canada's economy from the dangers of inflation which came when the United States Price Administration system expired on June 30.

The Ottawa Journal (Progressive-Conservative) says that this is the time for steadiness; that it must be the part off all to assume that Mr. Hilsley and his advisers know what they are doing; that he is not running off some tangent of panic; that, in the end, the best bulwark against trouble is good sense and public self discipline.

She was assisted by the Rev. Stanley R. Johnston.

A donation of $10 was made to the Windsor Star Tornado Fund.

Mrs. Albert Congdon invited the members of the association to meet at her home for the next meeting, August 1st.

Setting Up.

That suggestion "Get out of bed on the right side," isn't just funny, say Ottawa health authorities. The Physical Fitness Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare points out that the start of a day is all-important. They suggest that those who would conserve and build up health sacrifice a few minutes in bed to get up and "set up."

"Open the window wide" they say, "inhale deeply, and then start out to meet life with a smile by walking to work."

Canning Questions and Answers.

At this time of year hundreds of letters from homemakers seeking help with their canning problems, pour into the offices of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Here are some of the most frequently asked questions and their answers.

"All the recognized authorities on home canning used to insist that sealers be sterilized before using. Now a lot of people say this isn't necessary. Can you tell me why?"

It is not necessary to sterilize sealers before using because the processing of food in the sealers sterilizes both food and sealers. However it is essential that sealers be thoroughly washed in hot soapy water and well rinsed in clear hot water.

Sealers, with glass lids in place, should be placed on a tray in the oven and the oven heated to 225 degrees F., or they should be half-filled with hot water, placed on the rack in the boiling water bath, surrounded with hot water and brought to boiling point. Sealers should be left in water or oven until ready to fill.

"My strawberries always seem to float in the sealers. Can I prevent this?"

Now that sugar is rationed there is less likelihood of this happening than when heavy syrup is used. Some fruits will float on the top of the sealer if too heavy a syrup is used.

Syrup in the preparation of one cup sugar to one and one-half cups water is recommended for strawberries and peaches. Often an even thinner syrup may be used. Over-processing may cause fruit to float even in this syrup.

"Mother always did up her fruit by the open kettle method, we liked it, and it kept well except for the occasional jar that went moldy. Now you do not suggest this method, what is the reason?"

The open kettle method is not recommended because there is a great risk of spoilage unless very heavy syrup is used. The method of packing sealers and sterilizing both sealers and food together is easier and much safer. The product will be more attractive as the food is less likely to break up.

"My neighbour tells me that I can do up fruit without sugar. It seems to me it would not keep. Please tell me if I can do it this way as my sugar ration doesn't seem to go very far."

The keeping quality of canned fruit does not depend on the addition of sugar but rather on sufficient processing and the use of airtight sealers. However, the shape, colour and flavour of some fruits are ruined by heat when some sugar is added.

There are two methods that may be followed in canning fruit without sugar. Small juicy fruits, berries, cherries, rhubarb and juicy plums, should be washed and part of the fruits crushed in the bottom of a quart jar. The remaining fruit is then added and heated for a few minutes or until juice just starts to flow. If necessary, a little water may be added to prevent scorching. The sealers are packed solidly, crushing fruit down slightly so that it is covered with juice. The filled sealers are then processed by this method and sweetened to taste when opened is excellent for pies and desserts.

Large fruits, such as peaches, pears, in the sealers. Two inches of boiling water should be put in the bottom of the canner. The sealers are placed on the rack in the canner which should be covered tightly. The filled sealers are then steamed from 20 to 30 minutes until the fruit shrinks and the juice flows. The sealers are then removed from the canner and the fruit and juice from one or two of the sealers is used to fill the others. If there is not sufficient juice to completely cover the fruit, boiling water may be added. The lids are then put on, partially sealed and the sealers processed the required time. If the fruits canned by this method are to be served for dessert they require some preparation before using. The juice should be drained off enough water added to make two cups of liquid for each quart sealer, then brought to a boil, sweetened to taste and poured over the fruit. Best flavour is developed if this is done several hours before using so that the fruit will be thoroughly sweetened.

The processing times vary according to the fruit canned. Complete tables for processing will be found in the bulletin, "Home Canning of fruits and vegetables," available free of charge, upon request, from the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa.

LIGHTING HELPS PRODUCTION.

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness has found that sub-normal eyesight keeps 25% to 40% of workers below normal production, that inadequate illumination causes glare in many factories handicaps the entire working force. Absenteeism, fatigue and accident rates are substantially increased by eyestrain.

SUGAR PRICES INCREASED IN U.S.

Increases in the prices of U. S. sugar have been announced. Hinted at for some weeks, the increases became official June 24th, when O.P.A. announced that a five-pound package would retail at one cent more, while the refiners' ceiling on granulated cane and beet sugar advanced 10 cents per 100 pounds.

Have you read the Chamber of Commerce announcement on page 4?

Tires that Promise Longer Life.

Tires that promise longer life and exhibit a greater safety margin are being planned by tire development engineers of the Dominion Rubber Company. It was announced this week by A. W. Hopton, vice-president and general manager of the Company's tire division, as a result of a recent decision to increase the denier of rayon tire cords in heavy duty tires manufactured by Dominion Rubber from "1,100" to "2,200."

Although rayon so far has been applied only to heavy service tires, it is conceded by the industry that eventually passenger car tires will also be built of rayon fabric. Cost and supply of rayon for this purpose will be major factors, however, in this type of passenger car tire construction, company officials admit, but it is pointed out that prices of cotton and rayon have been moving steadily closer together, while the production of rayon in Canada is rising rapidly. Laboratory and field tests conducted in the United States and Canada have shown that rayon-built passenger car tires are more flexible, softer and safer than tires built with cotton fibres.

"2,200 denier," latest development in the manufacture of heavy duty tires, is another step in the short history of the adaptation of rayon to the building of heavy duty tires. Dominion Rubber laboratory engineers point out. It was in 1929 that experiments were first conducted by the U. S. Rubber Company in substituting rayon for cotton. By 1937 rayon had become a favoured component for bus and truck tires, so popular had high tenacity rayon become in that short space of time.

Synthetic rubber tires, rated at only 50 per cent of the value of natural rubber tires when they first appeared, have since risen to an evaluation of at least 90 per cent, it is claimed by the industry. It further appears that synthetic rubber gives its best performance when used in combination with tire cords capable of maintaining their high strength under ordinary conditions of driving temperatures. Tire cords manufactured from rayon tend to be lighter and stronger than cotton, lead to the evolution of a finer cord, a lighter ply and a thinner tire.

Thinner tires run cooler, engineers of Dominion Rubber Company Limited point out. They have lower strains when deflected and therefore generate less heat; heat generated by flexing passes off at the surface more quickly and the average temperature is therefore reduced. All textile cord materials have a tendency to become weaker as the temperature rises, but other things being equal, rayon proves to be stronger than cotton, and rayon stronger than rayon. Tire development engineers point out that the use of giant land planes, has an apt analogy in the application of rayon for heavy duty tires.

The ascent of rayon in the manufacture of the carcasses was meteoric in World War II. The need for the conservation of raw rubber stocks and the growth of a huge synthetic rubber program led to the summary welding of rayon fabrics to synthetic rubber and so made possible the successful manufacture of heavy duty tires in wartime. It was found that rayon gave tires longer life, and thus played a major part in extending the nation's meager rubber supply. The miles delivered per pound of rubber were increased both by reduction in the weight of crude rubber in the tire, and by the increase in actual tire life.

It is an inherent characteristic of GRS, the synthetic rubber universally used in tires, that it loses its strength rapidly as its temperature rises. The adoption of rayon cords which (weight for weight) make possible the construction of a thinner tire carcass, leads to more rapid dissipation of heat and thereby counteracts this condition.

Major Bowes Estate Over $3,000,000.

The late Major Edward Bowes, who amassed $4,500,000 in radio and real estate, left the bulk of his fortune — more than $3,000,000 — to the Major Bowes' Fund of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City, according to the terms of his will.

Bequests ranging from $2,500 to $50,000 were left friends and relatives, but the greater portion of the estate was given the cathedral to be administered by Bowes' longtime friend, Francis Cardinal Spellman, head of the Catholic diocese of the City of New York.

The will, executed February 15th, 1945, before Spellman was made a cardinal, directed that Spellman "shall in his sole discretion use and disperse the funds for the beautification of the interior and exterior of St. Patrick's Cathedral or for the use of such charitable institutions as, in the sole direction of his excellency, Archbishop Spellman, shall accomplish the most good, his excellency knowing my desire to help the poor, the sick, the widowed, the orphaned and the sisters."

Bowes, who died June 13th, at the age of 72, had neither wife nor children. He left 62 bequests ranging from $500 to $10,000 to charitable institutions representing all creeds and races.

It is easier to go six miles to hear a sermon, than to spend one quarter of an hour in meditating upon it when I come home.—Phillip Henry.

Topping Burley Tobacco for Quality.

The object of topping tobacco is to improve the quality of the leaf produce and also to cause the plants to ripen more uniformly.

With a normal growing season burley tobacco will come into top right to nine weeks after transplanting. Experiments on topping tobacco conducted over a period of years at the Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, Ont., says R. J. Haslam, Superintendent, prove that time to top burley tobacco is when the flower bud has formed which is commonly called the "Buttoning out" stage.

Owing to the fact that season, soil fertility and the vigor of the variety has an effect on topping, no hard and fast rule can be set for height of topping. However, under average conditions, early and moderately low topping are recommended. The period elapsing between topping and harvesting should extend at least four weeks for proper maturity.

Under dry weather conditions a tobacco plant usually establishes a deeper and more extensive root system, with a greater capacity to take in plant food. If dry weather occurs for a prolonged period up to topping time slightly higher topping may be an advantage if rain occur following the topping stage.

On the other hand if growth has been rapid up to topping time due to adequate moisture the tobacco plant will have a shallower root system, consequently, less capacity for growth after topping. In such cases slightly lower topping may be found advantageous to both yield and quality.

Under normal growth conditions the majority of burley varieties will mature 12 to 14 good leaves. Slightly higher topping may prove advantageous for the cigarette varieties of burley, while lower topping will benefit varieties grown for wrapper leaf.

Harrow Velvet, a cigarette variety, possesses a greater number of leaves than any other varieties and is frequently topped too high. Not more than 18 to 22 leaves should be left on this variety to produce the best cigarette quality leaf.

Maturity is regulated by both the time and height of topping. The period from topping to harvesting is the period which influences both yield and quality of burley. Topping should be regulated to prolong this period rather than shorten it. Delayed topping may mean delayed harvesting with less favorable conditions for curing. Topping should be a timely procedure when growing burley for quality leaf.

Out of Eternity the new Day is born; into Eternity at night will return.—Thomas Carlyle.

ed sugar beets, a crop with a reputation as a safe late-planter due to its ability to withstand early fall frosts.
By the time the land dried, it was too late to plant many other cash crops grown in southwestern Ontario.

The light damage to sugar beets, compared with other crops, was attributed to the plant's unusual hardness.
Many beet fields which were entirely under water have already recovered.

John H. Blackmore, Member of Parliament, from a beet growing constituency in Alberta, commended the Sugar Company for its action in giving free seed, stating, "It was a generous move to give the farmers free beet seed

S. A. Vacation Bible School.

The Salvation Army Daily Vacation
Bible School was held for two weeks in the Citadel, and was attended by a good number of boys and girls. Every day we went for an excursion trip on the Steamship "Sally Ann" visiting many interesting places in Bible Land where blood was shed. Most interesting and wonderful of all was our trip to Mount Calvary, where Jesus gave His life for everyone. New songs were learned, scripture verses committed to memory, log books filled, and souvenirs made. At the closing program on Friday evening, awards and certificates were presented for the best work.

Prize prizes were won by Richard Devaun, Joyce Roberts, Tom Robinson and Betty Barnewall; second prizes by Catherine Wilson, Ruth Barnewall, June Harrison, Margaret Robinson and Betty Harrison.
Thanks to all who helped make this Bible School a success.

Keyes-Tully Nuptials.

Pink snapdragons and white shasta daisies formed the setting, in Trinity Anglican Church, Cottam, when the Rev. Joseph Tully, uncle of the bride, recently united in marriage Miss Alice Elizabeth Tully, eldest daughter of Mr.
and Mrs. Wave Tully, Marsh Road,
Gosfield North, and Joseph Hanley Keyes, only son of William and the late Mrs. Keyes, of Gosfield South.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in a floor-length gown of white tulle.
The long bodice yoke and a yoke of white eyelet embroidered tulle.
The long sleeves had similar eyelet embroidery extending over the hands.
Her veil of illusion was caught to her head in an eyelet embroidered headdress, and she carried an arm bouquet of salmon pink gladioli.

Miss Margaret Keyes, only sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honour, and chose a gown of wedgewood blue tulle with net skirt. The bodice featured a sweetheart neckline outlined in matching ruching, and she wore a matching Dutch hat; her bow-quet was blue delphinium and yellow gladioli. Miss Joy Tully, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, wore a daffodil yellow gown of silk jersey. The shirred bodice was trimmed with matching bows. Her eyelet embroidered Dutch hat was also in yellow, and her bouquet was of blue delphinium and yellow gladioli. Little Jean Tully, a cousin of the bride, acted as flower girl, wearing a long white dress trimmed with pink baby ribbon, and carrying a nosegay of roses, delphinium and gladioli.

Albert Wigle, of Kingsville, acted as best man and Manley Thorpe and Howard Girty, of Kingsville, were the ushers.

The wedding music was played by Miss Catherine Grant, of Tilbury. A cousin of the bride, and Clair Tully, her uncle sang "O Promise Me" and
"Because" during the ceremony.

Reception Followed.
A reception for 70 guests followed at the home of the bride, the bride's table being centred with a three-tiered wedding cake made by a friend, Mrs.
Walter Cooke, of Essex, and flanked by burning pink tapers. Mrs. Donald McLean, Mrs. Leo Kaiser, Miss Elizabeth Montgomery and Miss Dorothy Alexander served.

Mrs. Tully chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of powder blue crepe, white hat and accessories, and a corsage of pink roses.
Mr. and Mrs. Keyes left on a motor trip east, the bride travelling in a beige dressmaker suit, blue straw hat and white accessories. On their return they will reside in Kingsville.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Miss Mina Staddon, Miss Sally Brady, Paterson Brady, Mr. and Mrs.
George Tully, Miss Ellen Tully, Mrs.
Leo Kaiser, of Detroit; Miss Noreen Heatherington and Miss Marion Shaw, of Wheatley; Mrs. James Almond and Miss Dorothy Alexander, of Windsor;
Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Watters, of North Maiden; Miss Catherine Grant and Edward Grant, of Tilbury; Mr. and Mrs.
Elliott Staddon, Miss Jo Anne Staddon,
Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brimmer, of Arner; Miss Teresa Miller, of Brantford;
Bruce Arner, of Leamington; Miss
Lily Olsen, Joseph Keyes, Mr. and

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Townsend, of Kingsville; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Linton, Mr. and Mrs. Clair Tully, Jean and Tom Tully, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Annett, Miss Gail Annett of Essex;
Miss Dorothy Huffman, Mrs. Donald McLean, of Harrow, and the Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Tully, of Paquette.

Essex Town Council.

Monday, July 22nd.
Council met in regular session, in the Council Chamber, at 8 p.m., with Mayor Linton, Reeve Irwin, and Councillors Lee, Francotte and Brushett present.

Minutes of last regular and two special meetings were read and on motion of Messrs. Francotte and Irwin, approved.
On motion, Monday, August 5th, the first Monday in August, was declared
"Civic Holiday," and Clerk ordered to have advertisement published in the Free Press advising the public.

H. Harrison, Chief of Police, again waited on Council, requesting a farther extension of leave, possibly for three months more.

Reeve Irwin stated he had spoken to both Mr. Harrison and Mr. Davis and could see no reason why request should not be granted.

On motion, the request was granted.
Thomas Oliver asked Council if there was any bylaw prohibiting tractors driving on the paved streets in town, with steel lugs on. He stated a farmer had driven into town by Arthur avenue, earlier in the evening and when he got to the pavement drove down his boulevard and the other boulevards till he got to Wilson avenue. He tried to keep his own boulevard looking nice, the same as his lawn, and didn't like to have it cut up by a heavy tractor. He had stepped the farmer, whom he knew personally, but was told it was none of his business as the boulevard was part of the street. The tractor was over at Len Black's for minor repairs, and he would like council to request that the farmer not take same route back out of town.

Matter of passing a bylaw prohibiting tractors with steel lugs being driven on the highways in town, was referred to Mr. Geddes.

Harold Findlay, for a committee composed of himself, N. Prince and Charles Maedel, members of the Community Service and Scout Committees of the Essex Rotary Club, addressed Council re town providing a lot for a new Scout hall, to be built by the Rotary Club, which on completion will be dedicated to the town, local Scouts to have free use of same. The building will be of cement blocks and of a size 33 x 60.

The two lots directly behind the Salvation Army, facing Irwin avenue, was suggested by the committee and on motion, the Rotary Club was granted permission to build the new Scout hall on Lot 28, directly behind the Mc-Coll-Fontenay Station.

Miss Margaret Keyes, newly appointed inspector for the county, addressed council re destroying weeds in town.
He stated that while the cost the first year is heavier by spraying method rather than cutting, it would become much less costly in three or four years.
All surrounding townships are spraying their weeds this year.

He also advised Council that the Township of Mersex had a good spray pump they would sell for $20, but the barrel was useless.

Mr. Scaife, town weed inspector, stated he thought the town had a good barrel, but if it wasn't a new one could be purchased for a couple of dollars.

Mr. Francotte, as chairman of the Board of Works, stated that he had already spent over $300 on cutting weeds and that allowance in the budget wouldn't stand for spraying this year, however he would do what he could.

The matter was left with the Board of Works, with power to act.
The Board of Works reported he had several requests for more calcium chlo-ride on streets, but that he was unable to get the work done as Brunner Mond is closed by a strike of its employees.

W. Helkie was again present re alley at rear of his place.

Rev. R. N. Pick is Inducted.

The induction service for Rev. R.
Norman Pick, B.A., formerly of Empress, Alta., into the Maidstone circuit, comprising Maidstone, Wesley and Bethel churches, was conducted by Rev. G. Everett Ashton, of Ottawa
United Church, Windsor, on Wednesday evening, July 17th.

Rev. James McAvoy, of Riverside United Church, brought the devotional message. Speaking on the text: "But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself unto godliness," Mr. McAvoy said: "This is a time for rededication and recommitment. Don't wait till it is too late. Turn yourself into godliness. We like to see the church go forward, not only under divine guidance, but through human agency. The church is no party to inactive members. They are responsible for all."

Rev. Norman Pick was presented by Rev. Stanley H. Johnston, of Essex, for induction, and the service of induction, was conducted by Rev. G.
Everett Ashton, John Graham presided at the organ.

Rev. J. W. Howes, of Calvary Episcopal Church, Windsor, addressed the newly inducted minister and the congregation. After commending the minister on his high calling he spoke on the subject "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." He said "This is an age in which you cannot give up study. If you do you will know it yourself and your people will very soon know it. This is a day when you must keep abreast of modern thought. The hydraulic and electric age is a thing of the past — this is the atomic age. The ministers must point out in this day that these terrific forces are not here to destroy men but to lead them to God. God is the master of all cosmic power. J. I. H.
Jewett used to say a minister must be a man of light and not of twilight."

Urging the congregation to attend church regularly, he said, "worship is the recognition of the worship of God." A strong plea for loyalty and co-operation between minister and congregation concluded his speech.
Rev. Norman Pick pronounced the benediction.

At the close a social hour was spent in the church hall, when the minister was introduced by Raymond Ure. Representatives of the various organizations spoke words of greeting, and the ladies of the congregation served refreshments, after which Mr. Pick spoke briefly.

light at the Talbot street intersection with Gordon avenue and Center street.

The letter stated that the expense would have to be borne by the town as Talbot street was not a King's Highway.

Both the Clerk and the Solicitor advised Council that the Minister was mistaken as town and Department had entered into an agreement a few years ago.

The Clerk was instructed to write
Mr. Doucet and apprise him of this fact.

The Clerk was also requested to write the towns of Blenheim and Thamesville re cost of traffic lights in those municipalities, as to cost of installation and cost of maintenance.

Two young men, from Leamington waited on Council re supplying town with cement tile. They stated they had a large quantity of all sizes from 8 to 18 inches, all well seasoned.

They were told town didn't need any at present, but they would keep them in mind.

Reeve Irwin tabled a copy of a building bylaw and necessary form to be filled in by builder, to be turned in to assessor.

These forms were turned over to the solicitor to go over, and get in touch with Mr. Gravel.

Bylaw 1127, re closing alley between lots 25, 26 and 35, 36, the S. Rupert property, was read and passed.

A most successful Vocational School was conducted in the Essex United Sunday School rooms, from July 15th to 24th, with sixty-six girls and boys ranging in ages from 4 to 13 years, attending.

Devotional talks, object lessons, new songs and choruses, daily projects,

9.30 to 11.30. Rev. Harold Parr, Miss Marjorie Harrow, Miss Maxine Price and Mrs. Lauretta Price were the leaders, with Miss Dorothy McKennie and Robert Price assisting part time with the games and projects.

Wednesday morning several mothers and interested ladies attended the clos-was given by the children, including group singing; solos by Jean Tully and Carol Gurbil; piano numbers by Lois

Felestad, Shirley Gurbil and Marlene Stephens; a number of Old and New Testament Bible characters dramatizations, 12 disciples by 12 boys; recita-

Juvenile Delinquency Fruites of Wrong.

Someone on the "Duffy Tavern" program once said that juvenile delinquency is when the kids begin to act like their fathers and mothers.

The following letter from a high school student was published in the Montgomery, Ala., "Advertiser":

Editor: The Advertiser.—If this is a democracy, we young people also have a right to express our opinions. The papers have been shockingly full recently of reports on the delinquency and vandalism emanating from the youths of this and other communities—all from the pens of critical adults. You have had the young people on the defensive long enough. As a Larier student I wish to present our side.

You call it "juvenile" delinquency and ask, "What can be done about it?" To eliminate an effect, one must hit at a cause. I assert that "juvenile" delinquency is the result of adult delinquency. Why don't reporters follow a few adults around Saturday night and see what they do and where they go, and find out what causes juvenile delinquency? We young people would rather see a sermon than hear one. Do you think mothers who call themselves "Christians" and stand in the whisky line are a good influence? No! neither are the police officers who do so. Christian youth today is fighting against overwhelming odds.

Later itself, has not gone to the dogs. Last year 250 students petitioned for a course in Bible without success. This year he organized a prayer meeting which meets each morning before school. There was also organized last year a group called the Lanier Christian Organization, which has done some splendid work. You have no right to lay the blame for everything upon our young people. We believe that what our parents do is O. K. We merely follow the examples of our preachers and teachers in forming our character. Yes, you see the evil fruiting of wrong-doing.

Give us leaders whom we may safely follow. Give us mothers who are pure in word, thought and deed. God, give us mothers who will train their children instead of fox terriers. God, give us mothers, and the world will take care of itself.—Willbur Costly Hall

Daily Dozen.

If you want health, appetite, energy and stamina, health authorities at Ottawa make this suggestion: "Do yourself up for exercise each day, the easy way. Take a walk but, walk correctly. Swing along—get rhythm in it. Breathe deeply, point the toes straight ahead, lengthen the stride and let the arms swing freely from the shoulders. The Department is working to interest all Canadians in the National Physical Fitness program."

Health Safeguards.

Urging parents to protect children against possibility of contracting certain serious diseases, Ottawa health officials list the benefits of the "Green" well service available to all Canadians. They point out that a baby six to nine months old should be immunized against diphtheria and during its first year a baby should be vaccinated as protection against smallpox. These are stressed as only two of the health safeguards all families should accept.

Danger of Inflation.

By Lewis Milligan

Some weeks ago prices were raised in Britain for motor cars, utility clothing, and for railway fares and charges. The Labor Government also announced that it would be necessary to raise the price of coal in order to nationalize the coal mining industry. Wages and other production costs have been rising and prices have had to be raised to cover them. Prices have thus been chasing wages up the spiral staircase and the question is being asked in Britain whether inflation has begun.

Discussing this question in the Spectator (London), Walter Templin says: "The answer given by the best-known indices is a somewhat hesitant no. The cost-of-living index stands at about 20 per cent above 1939, where it stood for five years, pegged firm by the official policy of subsidies. The wholesale price index has risen sharply since the beginning of the year, the main upward influence being manufactured goods, and now stands at 25 per cent above pre-war. Wages rates have likewise risen in the past four months, but not alarmingly, and the rise in rates has probably been partly offset by reduced hours, so that earnings will not have been quite so buoyant. All this may give rise to faint suspicions, but it is not possible to conclude from it that inflation is in progress."

Mr. Templin admits that "such fragmentary measurements" cannot give the true story, and he points out that "inflation is not easy to detect until it has reached the rabid stage." It would have to be shown whether spending as a whole was outrunning production as a whole, and Mr. Templin says that "data for a sound judgment about the volume and efficiency of production do not exist."

Speaking in the House of Lords, Lord Cherwell said: "Never in our history, so far as I can see, has the danger of inflation loomed larger. If the Government cannot economize and cannot increase production, the only hope of avoiding inflation—admittedly a very faint one—is to make the public realize what the position is, and trust that the people in their patriotism will refrain from insisting on increased wages and salaries." In replying for the government, Lord Packham admitted the danger of inflation, but he believed it could be averted if the controls were kept on and if the National Savings Campaign were carried on with the same intensity as during the war. But he declared that "the only way to overcome the danger of inflation is to produce more goods so that there will not be too much money running after a limited supply of goods."

As I saw things during my recent visit to Britain, this last sentence sums up exactly the economic situation. Not only is the supply of the necessities of life limited by strict rationing, but a "scarcity" of all other commodities have been created by extremely high taxation which renders their prices prohibitive. One reason given for this is that the Government does not want the people to buy these non-essential goods because it requires them for building up export trade.

Capitalists in the past have been accused of creating a condition of scarcity in order to enhance prices and profits, but in this case it would seem that a Labor Government is resorting to "scarcity" as a means of preventing the people from enjoying the benefits of the high wages which the labor unions have secured for them by strikes and agitation. There can be no doubt that the high cost of labor plus absenteeism to avoid income tax is hindering production in Britain. Social security measures are having the same effect. Many people are taking advantage of unemployment insurance when they might be working, for there is so much work to be done in reconstruction and there is a general shortage of labor in many lines of industry.

On the other hand, as Mr. Templin points out, the possibility of rapid expansion of nationalization in industry raises problems which are even more difficult to assess. The prospect of a future apparatus of control which they open up must be weighed against the apparent inability of Ministers to command any function whatever in the free play of prices. It may be that prices are the tool of the new machine, but at least something is known about their behaviour. But who would care to make a firm statement of the behavior of Cabinet Ministers particularly when the sphere of their activity extends down to the details of a national organization?

Inflation, comes in Britain it will show us, these two factors. Government interference with industry and wages, and the high cost and "shortage" of labor. The words of Lord Cherwell are worth repeating: "The only way to overcome the danger of inflation is to produce more goods so that there will not be too much money running after a limited supply of goods." His Lordship was speaking for the Labor Government, but the powers of that government are largely responsible for the present situation in which there is so much money running after a limited supply of goods.

Some motives are too good to be spoiled by praise, and wherever the vein of thought reaches down into the profound there is no danger from vanity. Emerson.

Praise like gold and diamonds, owes its value only to its scarcity.—Samuel Johnson.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Says Sir Malcolm Robertson, British M. P.: "The youth movement which has the greatest conception of life is the Boy Scout Movement. For the good of our country this organization should be extended throughout the country and throughout the world."

Over twelve hundred volunteer Boy Scout Leaders in Canada took special efficiency in the last year.

A fourteen year old handicapped Scout at the Home for Incurables, Toronto, is an efficient watch repairman. Recently in response to a photographer's question, "How much will you charge to fix my watch?" the Scout looked up, and with dead seriousness replied, "Sir I never quote a price until I have examined the job."

Boy Scout Troops and Wolf Cub among handicapped boys in the Queen Alexandra Solarium, Mill Bay, B. C. School for the Deaf, Saskatoon, Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, Winnipeg, Home for Incurables, Toronto, I. O. O. F. Preventorium, Toronto, Sick Children's Hospital, Thistledown, Ontario, and the School for the Blind, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Of Canada's 1989 Boy Scout Groups, 1385 are sponsored by Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish churches. The balance, 604 Groups are sponsored by clubs, anadion Legions and other organizations.

When Scouts were forbidden by the Germans in Norway, all Scouts were required to turn in their uniforms to the enemy. These were then sent to a factory to be remade into other clothes. The factory however managed to hide the uniforms and have now returned them to their original owners.

Less School Failures in Well-ventilated Rooms.

A record of two-thirds less school failures in rooms properly painted and lighted in a number of widely-spread schools is quoted by the Miami Kiwanis Club in a report urging more attention to school painting and lighting.

The report brands as "criminal neglect" indifference to proper sight conditions in school rooms. It points out that expenditure of a few dollars in a class room can save infinitely more expense involved in re-teaching pupils who fail to say nothing of the expense of eye-examination, glasses and treatment.

Farm Workers Get Protection.

Announcement by the Hon. T. A. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, that farm workers are to be placed under the Workmen's Compensation Act, is of great interest to the people of Ontario, quite apart from the farming population, says the St. Thomas Times-Journal. The exclusion of farm workers has been a flaw in our economic system. Modern farming requires more machinery with the introduction of tractors, motor trucks, and electrical or gasoline driven implements, and far more accidents occur than in the days when nearly all power on the farm was horse or man. Apart from that, there are often accidents such as men being kicked or trampled upon by horses or cattle.

No doubt a lot of farmers will kick against this new "impost," but after all they are only being asked to carry a form of insurance which has been obligatory on Canadian industries for many a year. As far as possible, men who are employed on farms should have as much protection as they would have in factories, and farmers cannot hope to attract men to the farms, or get them to stay there, unless conditions are more equalized. Too long has the hired man been treated as a sort of peon, and this is an expenditure that the farmer should regard as an investment instead of a new tax upon his industry.

Few persons have sufficient wisdom to prefer censure, which is useful, to praise which deceives them.—Rochefoucauld.

Everybody's Business.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

It is almost a year since the greatest and most devastating of wars came to an end. A year ago hearts were high with the thought that at last it was over; now it would be possible to turn from our concentration on death and destruction to the alleviation of suffering, the restoration of normal life, a life that could be happy and livable and generous again. We have hoped that at last the minor restrictions, the seemingly purposeless doings-without, would quickly come to an end. If we did so much for war, many hopeful individuals urged, certainly we could do as much for peace. But this is wishful thinking, for one of the requisites of doing as much is that people should have their eyes as unselfishly fixed on a goal in peace as they had in war.

We haven't any such attitude today, and we haven't any particular zeal but our own selfish interests, and we are not too smart in looking after these. We still stand in line for butter, for meat, for shirts and stockings and clothing. We look endlessly for places to live. We hope that increased construction will eventually overtake this need. We find instead that we are joining other lines begging for bricks and lumber and structural steel. We can't get a thousand and one raw materials, so stock piles dwindle and industry bogs down. Goods on the merchants' shelves become scarcer daily, so we stand in line again for other goods. But there is no relieving satisfaction that we are sacrificing for a great end. Perhaps we dimly realize that we are suffering because we won't think straight.

Every day there are new disagreements between labor and management; labor possibly demanding too much and management conceding too little and too late. Yet neither management nor labor has a right to lay down terms of unconditional surrender, because neither can survive without the other. Ultimately there will be concessions, after an industrial battle that benefits no one and harms everyone. If satisfactory adjustments are possible at all, they are possible in the beginning before damage is done. A little less of the threat of coercion; a little less of the "be damned to you" attitude and we might achieve the normal life for which we had hoped.

We might as well reckon the cost of our attitudes. Let us leave aside for the moment the belauding differences of labor and management. Then what becomes clear is that there is only one way to assure the survival of our present way of life. It is that we should produce more goods. The industrial development on which our present degree of national prosperity is founded requires that we produce more goods, better goods, cheaper goods. Without that, politically we cannot maintain our position as a first-grade nation. Labor cannot maintain the gains it has secured. We citizens cannot continue the social-security policies we have undertaken. We workers everywhere cannot protect the jobs we now have. A solid postwar prosperity can be built on a foundation of more production from farms and factories and mines and forests and fisheries and all the industries that serve them. But shortened work hours and decreased production means less goods, higher prices, and lost markets at home and abroad. And that road leads to another depression.

Therefore, Canadians as a whole have a right to demand that neither extreme demands of labour nor shortsighted policies of management should be permitted to jeopardize the flow of goods on which the hopes of all of us depend.—Liberty Magazine.

Baby Care.

Instinctive love and common-sense must be allied with modern medicine for better baby care, according to health officers at Ottawa. One authority on infant rearing states, "Nature provides parents with the loving solicitude essential to a child's well-being, but there are some phases of upbringing which require the guidance of experts. To ensure your child all the advantages of modern medicine, knowledge and the accumulated experience of Science, establish and maintain constant liaison with the family physician."

SAFETY THEATRE ON RAILS.

Designed to give more than 20,000 men of the Canadian Pacific Railway on eastern lines "visual" education in general train, interlocking rules and safe practices, a theatre on rails has begun its tour of lines from the Head of the Great Lakes to the Atlantic seaboard. When schools reopen children at divisional points will be invited to visit the car, in which have been incorporated all the features of a modern theatre, and see films which will teach them to avoid trespassing on railways and to prevent crossing accidents. Here J. C. McCuaig, general safety agent for eastern lines, is lecturing to a class of railroaders on the operation of block signals with the aid of light panels which give an excellent replica of the signals' operation on the line. The rule in question is shown on the screen. Inset, N. R. Crump, general manager for eastern lines, who conceived the idea of such a car, is speaking over the car's public address system in describing the operation of the lighted panels to C. P. R. officials when the car was put on display in Montreal when it was turned out of Angus Shops after conversion from a World War II hospital car.

Top o'the Morning—TO OUR U.S. VISITORS!

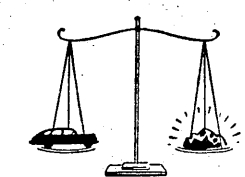

A windy hill at sunrise . . . a woodland trail at noon . . . Ontario's bridlepaths invite horsemen from far and near. Time and again riders from south of the border come to enjoy the beauty spots of our Province. These visitors help us. We can help them by being good hosts . . . making them welcome . . . giving them a grand time!

WHAT CAN I DO? The answer is plenty! Here are some of the things anyone can do. The suggestions come from an Ontario hotelman, famous for his hospitality.

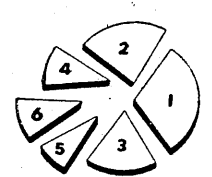

1. Know the places of interest and beauty spots in your district and tell people about them.
2. When you write your friends in the States tell them about the places they would enjoy visiting.
3. Try to make any visitor really glad he came.
4. Take time to give requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it all up, follow the "Golden Rule."

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The province of Ontario profits to almost the same extent from tourist business as it does from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

This diagram, shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every dollar is shared in this way: 1. Hotels; 2. Stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc.; 5. Amusement; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday . . . so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

Food for Infants.

Health authorities declare that growing children should not be fed on combinations of starch and grease, such as gravy, peevens or fried foods. An Ottawa authority says "Starch is only partly digested during chewing and the digestive process is retarded if there is a coating of grease on food. This is hard enough on any digestion, and can only lead to trouble in a child's stomach." Children should not be fed fried foods.

Q.—What is the ceiling price on lamb chops?

A.—61c a pound is the ceiling price on sirloin or chump spring lamb and 49c a pound on lamb rib roast or chops.

Q.—I am living in a summer cottage for the season, April 15th to September 15th, which is described as furnished, and my receipt reads paid in full for the season as above. I have been given a water bill for ten dollars which is not made out in my name. I took it for granted the rent covers this, does it?

A.—If the rent on this summer place has been set by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, the landlord must give the services agreed upon when the rent was fixed. If no services were included in the rental the landlord does not need to give any. If the rent for this summer place has never been fixed the landlord must then rent for the same price including the same services as were given when he rented the cottage in the summer of 1941.

Q.—My mother and father have lived in a rented house for six years, and now the landlord wishes to move into this house, having sold the one he previously lived in. Can he do this?

A.—If your parents pay the rent and are considered "well behaved" tenants the landlord cannot give them notice to vacate even if he wishes to live in the house himself.

Q.—Where do I send the extra meat coupons which I have not used when I want them to be used to increase the meat shipments to Europe?

A.—You may surrender valid meat coupons to the nearest local ration board or nearest Branch Office. Either take them yourself, or if you live in an isolated area send them in a carefully sealed envelope registered mail to the nearest local ration board.

Q.—Is there any more sugar coupons for canning to come due?

A.—No. The last five sugar-preserving coupons especially allotted for canning for home canning were declared valid on July 1st. The first five of the total ten coupons for sugar for home canning were declared valid on May 1st.

Vegetable Plates.

Everybody knows today that no food is more important than vegetables. Nutritionists recommend at least one raw and two cooked vegetables every day. And with up-to-date information on cooking and serving vegetables this rule is not hard to follow. Now nearly everyone enjoys vegetables.

A vegetable plate may be a picture. That is the right sort of vegetable plate may be, but it takes some artistic ability as well as knowledge of cooking. No one would be tempted with a dinner of potatoes, white turnips and canned corn or spinach, green beans and peas; but carrots, green beans, new potatoes and a few slices of raw tomato on lettuce attracts the eye as well as the palate.

If one wishes to depart from the all-vegetable idea, a poached egg may be added or a cheese or other piquant sauce may glamorize one of the vegetables.

For entertaining at luncheon a vegetable plate with hot rolls is always welcome whether it be of hot vegetables or a crisp cold salad.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggests three recipes for vegetable dishes.

In her book "Retrospection and Introspection" (p. 21) Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes: "It is well to know, dear reader, that our material, mortal history is but the record of dreams, not of man's real existence, and the dream has no place in the Science of being. It is 'as a tale that is told' and 'as the shadow when it declineth'." she adds on the next page.

Preface to War.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge

There has been a lot of loose talk in recent days that has given voice to the unthinkable notion that we are on the verge of another war while we are still digging in the debris of the worst cataclysm in all human history.

Obviously these are disquieting facts confronting us. It isn't encouraging to see Russia reaching out for more and more influence in Europe especially when we remember that all the great conflicts in Europe, from Caesar's day to our own, have been fought to prevent a militaristic power from dominating the whole continent.

No one power can so dominate without endangering the peace of the world. Therefore no power can be permitted to achieve that end.

But before we permit ourselves to consider the possibility of another war it will be well to relate these facts and their motives to our own acts and our own motives.

In Top Secret, Ralph Ingersoll's somewhat hysterical and frankly biased view with alarm, there is a confident statement that Britain is the real villain of the piece. "The British," he says, "always mix political with military motives." In Mr. Ingersoll's view, that eminently wise and sane country makes Britons a group of venial warmongers. Mr. Ingersoll, sitting in a comfortable office a safe three thousand miles away from the cockpit of Europe, is thus explaining self-righteously in his placing of blame.

But from the European view, and that, of course must be Britain's view, it matters very little whether Europe is controlled by a totalitarian Germany or a totalitarian Russia. Either would dominance almost half the world. If that isn't political thinking what is it?

The reasons then, come down to this: We are not yet quite ready to pool our securities in the hands of the United Nations. We hope it will be but if it shouldn't, we are not ready to be left defenceless in the face of aggression. So Russia and Britain and the United States, and lesser states in lesser degree, are seeking to protect themselves against failure in the face of another upsurge of national arrogance.

It isn't the best we could hope for, but it may be the best we can get. The world where still we are not quite sure of one another. Also it has a reasonably good chance of working out better than we now believe. It has that chance if reckless individuals do not sway public thinking by distorting these natural actions until they appear as a preface to war—Liberty Magazine.

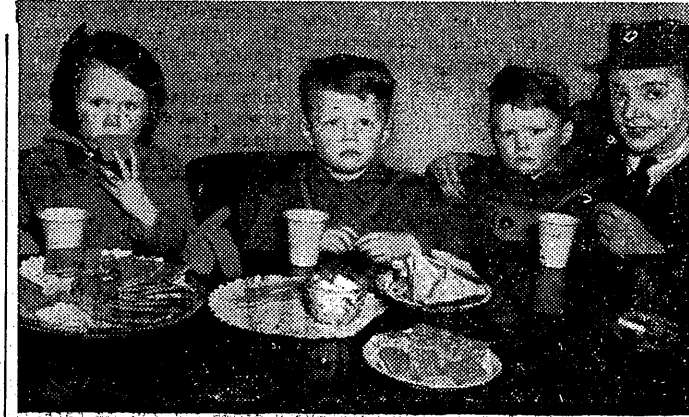

SERVICEMEN'S DEPENDENTS APPRECIATE TRAIN MEALS

TO CARRY more than 20,000 dependents of Canadian servicemen to their new homes in all sections of the Dominion, 87 special trains have been operated out of Halifax over Canadian National Railways' lines. The records of the Canadian Red Cross Society show that to date 9,686 wives and 5,994 children of soldiers, 9,956 and 1,459 of airmen and 538 and 131 of sailors have been brought to various points in Canada by rail. In addition, 45 wives of servicemen have been flown across the Atlantic by Trans-Canada Air Lines.

Figures released recently by the Department of National Defence, Ottawa, indicate that there are still at least another 50,000 dependents of Canadian service personnel to be brought to Canada. Based on this report, it is estimated by C.N.R. traffic department officers that another 200 of these "homes on wheels" specials will have to be operated before the last war bride has been welcomed to her new home.

One of the biggest tasks connected with the operation of the trains is the serving of meals. To feed nearly 2,500 women and children going to Quebec, Ontario, and Western Canada recently on C.N.R. trains, more than 20,000 meals were served. Here are a few of the many items which had to be stored in the dining car pantries—100 gallons of ice cream, enough for 10,000 people; 500 gallons of milk, 8,000 glasses; three tons of meat, 900 dozens of eggs, four tons of vegetables and 1,250 loaves of bread.

The upper photograph shows a typical scene at meal time in the dining cars of the dependents' specials. In the lower, three cute little children, twins on the right, are enjoying cookies and milk in the Red Cross Welcome Canteen in Bonaventure Station, Montreal, on their arrival from Halifax on a C.N.R. special train.

HOW TO HARVEST YOUR BEAN CROP

Beans may have "fibres" in side walls or "strings" in the sumers, both lower the quality. To avoid: harvest while pods are still growing, outer surfaces still smooth, beans stringless. Seeds will be partly developed, but not evident from outside.

Pick at several intervals for highest quality. Discard pods showing disease or injury. If snap beans are too mature (surface bulges) harvest later as shell or dry beans.

• Cultivate beans shallowly.

EWING ED TARIO

FRIDAY, JULY 26, 1946.

Eye-Opening Visit to City Garbage Dump.

"Potatoes by Carload, Cabbages by Ton, Spoil in Toronto," "I don't believe it," declared the Woman Who's Always Positive, waving the Canadian Press clipping indignantly at the local sanitation superintendent.

"Why not?" asked the veteran of two world wars, who had much first-hand acquaintance with garbage dumps.

"Toronto is just like this city-like any other city in Canada even though it's larger," said the Woman Who's Always Positive. "We never waste food like that here, I'm sure. Ever since the government 'Save Food' campaign started, our women's organizations have done everything possible to co-operate. We're all following the advice sent out by the Food Information Committee. Every housewife wants to help. Most of us turn in our meat coupons, use less bread, don't waste anything. Then how can our garbage dumps be so big?"

"Let's look at one of our local dumps," madam, interrupted the harassed sanitation superintendent.

There are more fragrant spots than a city garbage dump on a warm summer's afternoon. As driver after driver with his laden truck came in, he watched the quantities of unspoiled foodstuffs piling up, the unwilling visitor became more and more disturbed.

"This is open season for people to impose on the garbage man," one wily little man informed her. "Some of them don't even know that there are twice as many collections during the hot weather. We waste more time gathering their stuff together, than on the actual door-to-door round. And what they waste! I've seen kids along the road in Holland would live well on food like that."

"But everyone knows how badly food is needed overseas," remonstrated the Woman Who's Always Positive.

"So what?" the veteran retorted. "With so many of the people's money as heavy in the pocket. Most Canadians have never gone without enough to eat, and when you don't know what it's like to be hungry, it's easier to throw away good food."

The supervisor of the city dump did little more to cheer the visitor. "Naturally there's always more waste in warm weather," he explained to her. "Perishable fruit and vegetables, sauce, waste of some of that sort of stuff, is understandable. But potatoes, food which would keep and feed people who haven't enough bread. We get bags of potatoes dumped out here, and the other day there was a full load of watermelons thrown out, because of some price hold-up."

"But never bread? Surely not?"

"Never bread?" The dump supervisor stared. "Lady, I know that the papers have been telling us for months that millions of people haven't enough bread to keep them alive—but we still get bags full of it every day, loaves still in their wrappings."

"I suppose," he added, philosophically, "that there will always be the have-nots in this world. And the have-nots will always be looking for the crumbs from the have's tables. But what I'd like to do," he added a trifle grimly, "is to have the people who fill the garbage cans with good food see what the European children struggle to keep them alive. They wouldn't like it. I hope they'd be ashamed."

"While thousands of men, women and children face starvation in European countries, this city . . . the Woman Who's Always Positive read thoughtfully from the Canadian Press dispatch, as the sanitation inspector drove her home.

"This city," repeated the superintendent, thoughtfully. "This city, madam, any city in Canada. There are many people who are doing a fine job of food conservation. I know, but there are many others who just don't seem to think. Seems to me by this time every Canadian family should know that every bit of edible food thrown away means less for the people in the famine countries, to whom our simplest meals would seem like banquets. What's that Food Information Slogan? 'Share with the hungry.' It's worth remembering."

Home.

The famous opera singer, Madame Patti, was accustomed to close her program by singing "Home Sweet Home." On hearing that song so exquisitely rendered, few in her audience could hide their emotion.

Why was this? It must have been because the human heart is deeply touched by memories of the happiness and peace of a human sense of home, perhaps is longing for some place of rest.

Writing in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," the Discoverer and founder of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy, says (p. 58), "Home is the dearest spot on earth, and it should be the centre, though not the boundary, of our affections." Many today will agree that home is not so much a locality as a state of thought.

The writer has a friend who because of financial difficulties, was obliged to return to the home of her youth. This return proved far from happy, but instead of becoming disturbed over what seemed a difficult problem, she quietly reviewed the situation from the standpoint of Christian Science.

"The Big Boss."

By R. J. Deachman.

I did not write this article. It came to me from an Ontario business man who is a keen student of economic affairs, a man who knows that neither labor nor capital has the final word in the making of a prosperous nation. Back of both there is another — his orders are obeyed, he determines whether capital or labor works or idles. Who is the real master? You will meet him, not for the first time, in the final paragraph of this story.—R. J. D.

Those who know him call him "The Big Boss." They say he is the largest employer in the country. Some go so far as to say he is the only employer. He doesn't look much like a boss, as bosses go. He is big and tremendously strong, but he is ungainly, easy going, not at all alert. Apparently he is not much interested in what his employees are doing. You never see him bossing them or throwing his weight around.

"Perhaps that is why so many of his employees ignore him. They fall to realize that he is the real boss. They organize for the purpose of holding him up, and expect him to come across every time they do it. He doesn't seem to resent this, he never fights back. He is of slow speech, and quite incapable of organizing any defence. In the end he has his own way. Despite apparent indifference, he functions with marked efficiency.

"On the other hand, he is not at all sentimental in dealing with his employees. He shows neither gratitude for faithful service nor resentment over past offences. Day after day he goes into the market and hires the laborer. He is not moved by sympathy, no amount of pleading will change his mind. Your need is no concern of his. The problems of capital are not his headache. He insists on treating labour as a commodity to be bought and paid for, with no further obligation on his part. Laws have been passed declaring that the worker has a vested right in his "job" and that the employer has a responsibility for the future of his workers. To him these laws have no meaning. He ignores their existence, hires and fires at will.

"Wise workers watch him closely, try to anticipate his wants, supply his needs. In that way they keep themselves employed. Though his needs are infinite, he has a wonderful capacity for doing without. That is the secret of his power.

"He is the consumer. He buys all the goods, meets all the pay-rolls. Without him there would be no employment, no wages. He is the one we seek to hold up when we demand more pay, shorter hours. Nothing can change him from his course. He does not worry about organized labor. He does not dread the power of the state. If we push our demands too far he does without us. Our fate is in his hands. He is in the market place of the world. The workers, the manufacturers, the distributors must bring their minds into harmony with the consumer, the Big Boss. Failure to do so means less capital, unemployment and poverty."

The Big Boss Squawks.

"More shoppers are holding off for what they want. Only fractions of yesterday's waiting lists are today's buyers."

A Portland, Ore., merchant with 19 customers in his waiting list for refrigerators discovered only three now want them."

A New York department store advertised a big white-shirt sale, 20,000 at $4.98 . . . expected tremendous response . . . which did not materialize."

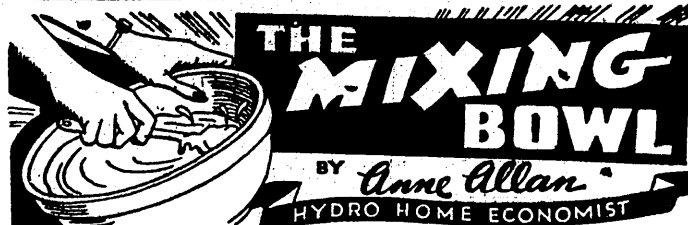

—From an advertisement of "Wall Street Journal."

Flavoured Foods.

Highly flavoured foods are bad for young children, according to Ottawa nutrition authorities in the Department of National Health and Welfare. They declare that infants and growing youngsters should not be fed on foods containing pepper, spices or vinegar in generous proportions, nor on a highly sweetened substance. Feeding a child such things as sausages, pickles, relishes and preserves, it is claimed, cultivates a capricious taste and turns a child away from the plain wholesome foods.

She saw that because God is All, God must of necessity be man's dwelling place, as the Bible declares. She also recognized that God is not some mysterious, enlarged personality, but is Mind, the one perfect Mind, in which, as Paul tells us (Acts 17:28), "we live and move, and have our being." Looking deep into her own heart, she discovered qualities of through she herself would not like to see manifested by anyone she lived with. She also carefully considered the characteristics or thoughts she herself would wish to see expressed by those she lived with, such as loyalty, affection, consideration, orderliness, patience, and the like.

As she patiently expressed love and compassion just where she was, her environment, which had before seemed so uncongenial, began to improve. Shortly after this, she was invited to visit for two weeks in the attractive home of a friend in a large city. Before her visit terminated a sudden change came about in the plans of her friend and she never returned to her former environment, but lived with that friend for many happy years.—Christian Science Monitor.

Hello, Homemakers! Waste not — want not! Come next winter you will be glad you stocked up on canned foods for the family! Tomatoes, rich in food value, are the easiest of all vegetables to can at home. But here are some precautions to take to prevent any spoilage whatsoever.

Look over the tomatoes carefully. One bad spot can spoil a whole batch when canned. Use only the finest tomatoes, freshly picked. Soft tomatoes not firm enough to can make excellent chili sauce or chutney.

Use thoroughly clean jars — scrub with soapy water, rinse and boil for 12 minutes. Fill to top with blanched tomatoes. Wipe each jar rim with a clean, damp cloth. One speck of food may let in air and spoil the tomatoes.

Process quarts of tomatoes in a preheated electric oven of 300 degrees for 15 minutes; or submerge jars in a deep kettle of boiling water for 10 minutes.

Place jars, top side up and well apart, on a folded cloth to cool. Prevent a draft across the jars which may crack them.

GENERAL DON'T'S.

Wilted, over-ripe or partly spoiled food is dangerous to can. Food spoiled if left partially prepared. Corn, peas and greens should not be packed tightly — fill jar within an inch of top and then pour in the pre-cooking liquid to the brim. Follow timetables to the minute for successful canning. You may break the seal if you cool the jars by placing them on the rims. Pressure Canning is recommended for processing non-acid vegetables such as peas, beans and corn.

DIRECTIONS FOR PRESSURE COOKER.

1. Use fresh vegetables. Clean thoroughly. Prepare for table servings. Cover vegetables with water and bring to boiling point. Put the product into jars to within 1/2 inch of the top. Add 1/2 teaspoon salt to each quart. Push the blade of a knife down the inside of jar to remove air bubbles. Fill to top with hot liquid. Make sure there are no particles of food on the rim and put lid on as you fill each jar. Screw band tightly, then loosen about 1/4 inch.

2. Clean the openings on the pressure cooker lid (which is never immersed in water) with a toothpick or skewer.

3. Place filled containers in the utensil, allowing an inch of space around each.

4. Pour warm water to depth of about one inch. Adjust lid of cooker and fasten securely.

For Outdoor Appetites.

With the coming of summer, many people are thinking of going on picnics and even all day excursions again. "Picnics are grand for everybody but me," says the busy homemaker. This is true in many instances because all the work of planning and preparing the food is left to mother and father. Picnics are grand for everybody but me," says the busy homemaker. This is true in many instances because all the work of planning and preparing the food is left to mother and father. Picnics are grand for everybody but me," says the busy homemaker. This is true in many instances because all the work of planning and preparing the food is left to mother and father.

Every Canadian, it is hoped, has heard about the conservation program and of the need to conserve bread, meat, cheese and eggs. In the past, sandwiches usually were considered indispensable to a picnic. Besides taking a long time to prepare they also put a strain on the butter ration. To save both bread and butter, two slices of bread per person might be allowed with various spreads like softened cheese, relish, jam, etc., to be carried in jars. Every member of the party can then make his or her own open-faced sandwich.

Baked beans, chowders or soups, vegetable, spaghetti or macaroni casserole dishes, wrapped in several layers of paper to keep hot, or substantial salads, are very nice on a picnic and will satisfy the most ravenous appetites. For good measure, fresh vegetables, like radishes, green onions, celery, carrot sticks, cucumbers and tomatoes might well be tucked into every picnic basket.

Whole wheat or bran muffins may be used instead of bread. These cereals contain parts of the grain removed in milling white flours. A more general use of them in Canada will help to save wheat for overseas. Rolled oats or fine oatmeal used to partially replace flour in biscuits also serves the same purpose.

Mix ingredients together and arrange in a greased baking dish. Bake

5. Open petcock and keep open until steam escapes with an audible sound. This takes from 5 to 10 minutes.

6. Close petcock and allow pressure to rise slowly until gauge registers the desired point. Keep heat constant to avoid change of pressure. Time the cooking from the minute the gauge records the desired pressure.

7. At the end of necessary period, remove the cooker from the electric stove and allow pressure to drop gradually to zero. Sudden cooling may crack jars or cause loss of liquid.

8. After the gauge has registered zero for 2 or 3 minutes, gradually open the petcock. Close immediately if there is a hissing sound and leave for extra 2 minutes.

9. Tilt the lid away from your face and remove the sealers to cool on a pad of newspapers.

10. With tin cans, remove cans immediately and plunge into cold water to cool quickly.

Those in receipt of family allowance cheques are reminded by the Welfare Branch of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, that all changes of residence, increases in the family, etc., should be reported at once. Address for correspondence concerning these payments is the Regional Director of Family Allowances at the Provincial Capital.

Holiday Cookies.

During the holiday season when the family is home and friends from far and near drop in for a visit and often stay on for a meal, it is a satisfaction to any homemaker to know that her cookie jar is full.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, have suggested three recipes for those time-saving cookies made all in one pan and cut after they are baked.

Canada's Care of Canned Commodities.

Canada has one of the best grading Horticultural Division, Experimental Farm Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in the course of a recent address on fruit and vegetable grades—Fancy, Choice, Standard, and Sub-standard—in canned fruits and vegetables. Canada and the grade must be shown on the cans of the products processed in factories under government permit. The grades are determined on each manufacturer's pack throughout the Dominion by inspectors who decide the grade according to regulations under the Meat and Canned Foods Act.

The highest grade is Fancy; Choice, second, and Standard, third. Sub-standard refers to products which are fit for food, but are below Standard quality and cannot be sold through retail outlets. Each label on canned fruits and vegetables must be authorized by the Canning Division, Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture. This is a protection to the consumer against misrepresentation. Each factory is visited regularly by inspectors to ensure that sanitary conditions prevail, and the inspectors have the power to close down a plant, or place under detention any product if conditions are not satisfactory.

The Fruit and Vegetable Processing industry and all connected government agencies are continually striving to improve Canada's processed foods, while bringing them within the reach of all income groups. Progress is being facilitated further by the fact that in recent years food investigation has become recognized as a truly scientific field rather than something that was left strictly to workers in the nation's kitchens. Scientifically trained men and women are now being attracted to the relatively new field called "Food Technology," and much advantage to all concerned will be the result.

Yellow Paint for Caboosees.

As a safety measure, the Canadian Pacific Railway is experimenting with yellow paint for the handrails of cabooses. The highly-visible yellow attracts the eye automatically to the handrails, so that railwaymen are less likely to miscue when grabbing them.

In a somewhat similar experiment, Canadian National Railways have painted cabooses orange instead of the traditional box-car red. The orange caboose stands out clearly to mark the end of a long freight, making accidents less likely.

Chatham Beet Sugar Plant to Run.

The large beet sugar refinery at Chatham will be operated this year in processing sugar beets, stated an official of the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company this week. The Wallaceburg plant will again remain idle as there will not be a sufficient supply of sugar beets to warrant operation of both factories.

While the official figures on the measured acreage of sugar beets are not yet available, it is estimated that less than 25,000 acres will actually come through to harvest, and with a normal yield of ten tons to the acre, this would only provide a run of average duration for the Chatham refinery alone, which is one of the largest in the North American Continent.

The closing of the Wallaceburg plant is stated as a grave disappointment to the management of the Company. Very substantial sums of money were spent in readying the Wallaceburg plant for 1946 operations and the Company has kept on a full staff of foremen and key men so as to be in a position to operate the plant if the acreage under crop turned out to be sufficiently large.

Over a half million dollars were spent in improvements to the Chatham plant in 1945, including the installation of a new boiler house and complete revamping of the Company's beet-receiving yards. Several hundred thousand dollars are also being expended this year in further improvements and replacements at the Chatham plant.

It is too soon as yet to make an estimate of what the 1946 beet sugar output may reach, but officials state that between 50 and 60 million pounds of sugar would be a fair guess at this time. Operation of the Wallaceburg plant, if beets had been available for the purpose, would have boosted the figure on sugar output to over one hundred million pounds.

Old Essex Girl Passes.

Joseph Wortley, of Town, received a telegram on Monday, advising him that his sister Helena (Mrs. Maurice B. Cooper) had passed away about 2 o'clock that morning, at her home in Sardis, Miss. She had been in ill health for a long time, death being due to a stroke.

Deceased, a daughter of the late John and Charlotte Wortley, was born on the Township, in Gosfield North Township, on February 23rd, 1886.

After graduating from Essex schools, she learned the millinery trade in the O. H. Bricker store in town, and worked in Detroit for several years.

After marrying she and her husband resided in Memphis, Tenn., from where they moved some years ago to Sardis.

Surviving, besides her husband, are a daughter Dorothy, and a son John; a sister Ethel (Mrs. L. F. Dingman), of Hillsdale, Mich., and two brothers, Joseph, of Essex, and John, of Chatham.

Essex Man Loses Father.

Alfred Trudell, well-known resident of Sandwich East Township, passed away at his home, 4509 Tecumseh Road, on Sunday, at the age of 86 years.

Deceased was born in Tibbury North, but had lived near McGregor prior to moving into Windsor about 12 years ago.

He was a member of the Holy Name Society and an honorary member of the St. John Baptist Society.

Surviving are his widow, Josephine; three daughters, Mrs. Oscar Sampson, of Sandwich East Township; Mrs. Theodora Labute, of Toronto; Mrs. Marshall Phaneuf, at home; five sons, William and Herman, of Sandwich East; Albert, of Essex; Wilfred, of Windsor; and Gilbert, at home; also 42 grandchildren, 50 great grandchildren and one great great grandchild.

Funeral services were held from his late residence, at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, to St. Theresa Church at 9:30. Burial was in Our Lady of the Lake Church cemetery.

Bryant-Rose Nuptials.

A wedding of interest was solemnized in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Puce, when the Rev. A. B. Ransom united in marriage Miss Lucille Julia Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rose, of Oakland, Cal., and Roland Ernest Bryant, of Puce.

The ceremony was performed before an altar, flanked with palms, in a setting of roses and summer flowers, the bride being given in marriage by Alex McRobbie.

The bride was lovely in a white eyelet organdie gown featuring a sweetheart neckline, a long bodice and short, puffed sleeves, with a full skirt. Her finger ring was of illusion, the bride being given in marriage by Alex McRobbie.

David Long Convicted.

David E. Long, of Leamington, was given a two-year suspended sentence, on a $200 personal bond, in Windsor Police Court, on Saturday, after being convicted, a week ago, of bodily harm assault.

In levying the suspended sentence, Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan told Long he undoubtedly would face civil action and he felt in this way he would suffer sufficiently for his "rash" action. Too, he was taking into fact he had a long war record and that his defence had advanced the argument he had suffered nervous shock in the service.

The people of Essex will remember that Mr. Long was the man who assaulted Gordon Townsend and Oswald on 3rd last, after their cars had been in collision on Talbot street, near the north end of the town park.

Long struck Mr. Townsend, knocking him down, and in falling to the pavement the latter suffered a badly fractured leg. He was hospitalized for several weeks, and is still getting around only with the aid of crutches.

Alphonse J. Drouillard Dies.

Alphonse Joseph Drouillard, aged 77 years, died at his home at McGregor, on Saturday, following a lengthy illness.

Deceased was born in Colchester North and had farmed there all his life. He was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Clement Church.

Surviving, besides his widow, Everline, are two sons, Alphonse and Oswald, at home; five daughters, Yvonne, Cecile, Theresa and Angela, at home, and Marguerite (Mrs. Mose Sutor), of Belle River; also three brothers, Oliver and Norman McGregor, and Dr. Otto, of Chatham, and a sister Lorette, of McGregor.

Services were held on Tuesday morning from his late residence, at 9 o'clock, to St. Clement Church at 9:30. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Capt. Church Back in Canada.

The following excerpts from a letter, received this week, by Captain Carter, of the local S. A. Corps, from Major Albert Church, a local boy, who with his family is back in Canada after 13 years unbroken missionary service with the Salvation Army in Kenya, Africa, will be of interest to Essex readers:

Long Branch, Ont.
My Dear Captain:

How kind of you to wire us the other day — a real thrill to receive word from my old home town corps — the day we arrived in Toronto, after a fairly long time on the journey home. We travelled on the Swedish liner Drottningholm from Liverpool, calling in at St. John's, Nfld., enroute to New York. And what a thrill to catch the first sight of America. The voyage was rough and foggy for several days but we kept cheerful and bright with the prospect of seeing maple trees and bright sunshine at the end of the journey.

All of Mrs. Church's family were at the Union Station, with Major and Mrs. Clinton Endicott, missionaries from China, and Captain and Mrs. Ibbotson, to greet us. The whole thing seemed just like a dream. Then today a big car rolls up and a gent walks towards the house and I look at him wondering what he wanted. He just looked at me for a moment and came out with "I'm your brother Walter!" Imagine, I didn't know my own brother. He motored from Detroit with his wife and three children, enjoying a short vacation, and didn't know that we had arrived. This was a surprise indeed. My Toronto looks good, and it's grand to be home.

Naturally we are looking forward to seeing you all in Essex, and we want to come that way just as soon as we are able to plan a visit. We have in mind trying to secure a small car and driving to Essex. If possible, we would also like to rent a cottage at Cedar Beach, or nearby, for a month or so, so that we may have the opportunity of calling on our comrades and friends in the county and of conducting meetings in the interest of our work. If you could make inquiries about a summer cottage near Essex I would be grateful to you.

Our sincere thanks to the comrades of the Corps for their prayers and kind interest. We appreciate it so much and look forward to being amongst you all at an early date. We have found everyone so anxious to make our furlough a time of real physical and spiritual benefit.

Greetings from Mrs. Church, myself and the girls. The Lord bless you and the splendid work being done for the Kingdom. I will do all that is possible to visit Essex at an early date.

Yours under the flag,
ALBERT E. CHURCH.

Major.

(Captain Carter would appreciate hearing from anyone regarding such a cottage that would be suitable. Call Essex 19 or write P.O. box 431 immediately.)

Fire Bugs a Danger.
Canada's forests have one major enemy — bugs. There are insect bugs and fire bugs. The latter destroy millions of dollars of Canada's wealth.

Helps Half Million Canadians.
The pulp and paper industry helps to provide a livelihood for some 500,000 Canadians.

War Bride Arrives in Cottam.

Mrs. Nelson Boose, Cottam's first Scotch war bride, came to Canada on the "Lady Nelson" to rejoin her husband, Nelson Boose, who arrived home three months ago after three years service overseas in the Canadian Grenadier Guards. Mrs. Boose is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gibson, of Dundee, Scotland, and was married in that city in June, 1945.

Mrs. William Tessier Dies.

Mrs. Emma Tessier, wife of William Tessier, passed away at the family home, on the 10th Con., Gosfield North Township, on Saturday, at the age of 62 years.

She is survived by her husband, William, five daughters, Della (Mrs. Ernest Grounding), Windsor; Ozeline (Mrs. Arrie Jensen), of Richmond, Mich.; Alvina (Mrs. Arthur Church), of South Woodstock; Rachel (Mrs. Leam and Bedal) of Harrow; Gladys (Mrs. Walter Marshall) of Gosfield North; four sons, Clarence and Ray of McGregor; Albert and Gerald of Toronto; and a sister, Mrs. Mary, of St. Catharines.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning from the family residence at 9:30, to Holy Redeemer Church, St. Charles, at 9. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Essex Town Council.

Tuesday, July 30th.
Council met in the Council Chamber, at 8 p.m., in special session, at the call of the Mayor with Mayor J. C. Linton, Reeve Irwin and Councillors Chase, Shaw, Lee, Francotte, Brushett and Pulleyblank present.

Albert Hyland and Orvan Whitall were present re drainage of their property on Talbot street.

Mr. Hyland stated that the water from their lands cannot get away as the flow is being blocked by the two bridges into the properties of Ern Wilson and Roberts Bros.

After much discussion, it was moved by Messrs. Francotte and Chase, that matter be left with the Drainage Committee to look into and remedy, if possible.

The Clerk then read a letter, handed him by Mayor Linton, enclosing the resignation of Ray Davis, as Chief of Police, to take effect August 15th.

Mr. Davis, who was present, stated that the salary of $1,800 was not enough money when you had to own and maintain your own car.

Mr. Francotte stated the policing of Essex was a two-man job and that Council couldn't expect one man to be on call 24 hours a day.

After a short friendly discussion in which most of the council voiced their thoughts, along with Mr. Davis and H. Harris, who was present, and offered to resign if he was standing in the way of Mr. Davis being appointed permanent chief, it was moved by Messrs. Lee and Pulleyblank, that the resignation of Mr. Davis be accepted.

Mr. Davis here stated that if it was not possible for town to fill in the position by August 15th, he would stay on a few days longer if it was the wish of Council.

Mayor Linton stated he had had a call a couple of weeks ago from Norman Hogarth, of the Halifax Police Force, who was at that time spending his holidays with his parents in Windsor. Mr. Hogarth had sent an application in when Council advertised for a Chief in April. Mr. Linton stated that Mr. Hogarth had told him that he would like to get back to Essex County and if, at any time, the office of police chief in Essex was open, his application would be on hand for consideration.

On motion of Messrs. Irwin and Chase, the Clerk was requested to notify Mr. Hogarth, at once, that his application had been accepted and to request Mr. Hogarth to wire his answer. Council adjourned.

Wheat Bonus Authorized.

The Canadian Board of Grain Commissioners has notified elevator operators throughout the country to pay the 14-cent-per-bushel subsidy on winter wheat to farmers upon delivery of the grain.

Unlike previous equalization fund payments which are now being made to farmers for wheat delivered in 1944-45, the new subsidy is payable on delivery or as soon as the farmer has signed a certificate stating he has been paid.

Elevator operators are advancing subsidy payments to growers and the money they paid out will be repaid by the government monthly.

One result of the subsidy is that it is bringing out deliveries of wheat. Elevator men point out that the new price boost which increases wheat to $1.24 a bushel delivered and the elevator may be responsible for a large amount of wheat being sold instead of stored in farmers' granaries for feed.

Government action on the request of growers for increased wheat prices has given growers hope that the War-time Prices and Trade Board will agree to a similar boost in corn and soy bean prices. Members of the Essex-Kent Corn Growers' Association are preparing a brief asking for increased ceilings for corn and a calling boost on the price of soy beans which would bring the beans to $2.40 per bushel f. o. b. Toronto.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES MAEDEL WED 50 YEARS.

Courtesy Windsor Daily Star

Sunday and Monday were two gala days in the lives of Mr. and Mrs.
Charles Maedel of town, who were celebrating their Golden Wedding Anniversary.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs.
Maedel were hosts at a dinner served at the Aberdeen Hotel, in town, to about one hundred invited guests and members of the immediate families.

A short program followed the meal, with W. J. Blankstein, manager of the Royal Bank, Kingsville, but formerly of Essex, as toastmaster. J. A. Nightingale proposed the toast, as only he can, to the bride and groom, while several others spoke words of congratulations. A feature of the afternoon was the playing of several selections by a 5-piece orchestra composed of five of their grandchildren.

The honoured couple held "open house" in the evening, when over two hundred friends called to offer congratulations, while shortly after 8 o'clock they were serenaded by the local Salvation Army band.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with many floral gifts, the bride's table in the diningroom being centred with a four-story wedding cake, flanked by yellow tapers and vases of yellow rosebuds.

Assisting during the evening were Mrs. Ernie Taylor, of Harrow, late of Essex, welcoming the visitors at the door; Mrs. Art Ward, in charge of the guest book; Mrs. Walter Simpson, Mrs. N. McEntee, Mrs. H. Wigle and Mrs. A. C. Welch, who poured tea; and Mrs. H. C. Piper, who invited the callers into the diningroom, as well as the members of Group 3 of the W. A. of Harvest Critical Time for Potato.

The practice of destroying potato tops by spraying the plants with certain chemicals several days before digging the tubers is being widely adopted by the growers in Prince Edward Island, where potato production is a major commercial undertaking. Investigations carried out by the Dominion Plant Pathological Laboratory at Charlottetown and elsewhere demonstrated that late potato blight and rot could be prevented by killing off the potato tops towards the latter end of the growing season and leaving the crop on the ground for at least ten days. But there are other types of infection.

Some rot, especially in badly infected fields, is likely to result from blight spores being washed into the soil by heavy rains during the growing season, says L. C. Callbeck, Agricultural Scientist at the Charlottetown Laboratory. This type of infection may be satisfactorily controlled by following a recommended spraying program and by hilling to ensure that the tubers are covered by at least two inches of soil. Many of the tubers infected will show the bronze discoloration indicative of blight rot at digging time, and most of them should be caught by the pickers. This type of infection is usually the least important, and the greater part of the losses is due to infection which takes place during the actual harvesting of the crop.

Many investigators have shown that storage rot may be practically eliminated if the crop is not dug for at least ten days following the complete death of the plants. By that time, the infectious spores are dead and incapable of causing harm. Growers are more and more realizing that even light epidemics of late blight may cause severe losses unless necessary precautions are taken at digging time. As a result, in season when severe frosts do not come early enough to destroy the plants and permit digging operations at the usual time, growers are using certain chemicals with which to kill off the tops.

Accumulated information from many experiments which have been conducted in potato growing regions in Canada and the United States has so impressed the manufacturers of fungicides and insecticides that they have realized the great possibilities in this method of controlling late blight and rot. The manufacturers and technicians of the Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, are developing and experimenting with many types of chemicals for use by potato growers.

My Favourite Poet.

I have tried to write some poetry. At some dear friends request, I have also read a lot of lyrics. But the ones I like the best are the ones in the morning paper. Written by our friend Edgar Guest. His poems always appear to me to be so much better than the rest. Some poems appear in the papers. They will pass most any test. Some are sad and serious. Others are written in jest. But of all the poems that I have read, I still insist my favourite poems are ones by Edgar A. Guest.

Uneasy Lies the Head That Wears a Crown.

"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown," goes the old saying — to which the modern chateleine adds "EASY rest the head that falls asleep amid the comforting effects of harmonious colors." In other words, it's important to have colours which please you in your bedroom.

It's important for its soothing effect when you are going to bed. It's more important when you wake up. When you open your eyes in the morning, the appearance of your bedroom can have a lot to do with shaping your outlook for the day ahead. A cracked and dismal ceiling, drab uninteresting walls, scarred and battered furniture can combine to give you the glooms.

Nobody need have a bedroom like that. Every woman can make of her bedroom a room of pleasing colors and an air of distinction, at low cost. Paint is not expensive, and neither are the things which furnish the final little touches of decoration which make a room complete.

The color scheme you choose should be definitely and individually yours. In case it might give you a few ideas of value, however, here is a word picture of a beautiful bedroom, done in tones of sapphire blue, white, silver, pale gray and cerise to give a delightful blending of modern and Victorian.

The window wall and the one opposite are painted in sapphire blue. The other two walls are silver grey in color. An alcove in one of the gray walls, in which the head of the bed is placed, is painted blue — a treatment which serves to set off the simple but luxurious looking bed, lacquered white and topped by a coverlet of blue chintz. The ceiling is painted pale blue and the woodwork is done in two tones of blue — slightly darker than the wall color. The floor is carpeted in gray, similar to the upholstery of a comfortable chair. The Frothing dressing table is skirted in blue chintz trimmed with cerise; and the lamps and all the accessories are in silver, white and crystal.

Too expensive, you figure? Well, this particular room was created from an ordinary run-of-the-mill bedroom at the cost of only a few dollars for paints and a bit of material.

If your bedroom furniture is of blonde wood, you might like to set it off to perfection by giving it a wall background of a delicate salmon pink. Chintz drapes with a cinnamon-toned background and flowers that blend with the tint of the light furniture would be lovely at the window.

Another charming bedroom, dramatic in its simplicity, would combine primrose, yellow ivory and chocolate brown. Walls would be of pale yellow and the rug rich brown. Two-toned painted furniture could have a finish combining an ivory base and chocolate trim. Plain brown chintz draperies, piped in ivory, would frame the window and a chair could be covered in pale yellow corded with brown.

Incidentally if your bedroom has a dormer window, you can convert what might have appeared to be a liability into a decided asset by the careful use of color. Accent your dormer alcove by painting it a contrasting color to that of most of the walls, and see how much more effective it looks.

The type of paint you use, like the colors you choose, is entirely up to you. Some people prefer water or enamel paints because they are colorfast, odorless, inexpensive, fast drying and extremely easy to apply. Those who want an oil paint have a choice of standard interior paints, gloss or semi-gloss enamels, or the flat paints prepared especially for wall use.

Fortifies Skim-milk for Young Calves.

For young calves that are being fed from the pail, skim-milk is the standard feed, but one disadvantage is the low fat content of the milk. To replace a part of the fat removed from the whole milk, the Dominion Experimental Farm, Brandon, Man., has evolved a home mixed calf meal which has demonstrated its value. The meal mixture is made up of two parts of finely ground sifted barley chop, and one part of flax seed. The mixture is prepared for feeding by adding scalding water to the meal a few hours before being fed. The mixture when cool forms a jelly, and it is in this form that it is added to the milk. Two heaping tablespoonfuls of the dry meal is the allowance given to young calves. The amount is gradually increased until about one-half pound daily is being consumed. The milk and meal mixture are given in three feeds daily at as near blood temperature as possible. Overloading the calf's stomach is a common cause of scours. In addition to the calf meal mixture, young calves may be self-fed with a mixture of whole oats and bran and they are supplied with good quality hay as soon as they will eat it. Access to a supply of clean drinking water is also important.

Air Treatment.

Even when skies are over-cast, "sky-shine" is almost as good as sunshine as a health-giving factor, according to authorities in the Department of National Health and Welfare at Ottawa. City dwellers need to get out into the open frequently to compensate for life in crowded surroundings, say the specialists, and this is particularly important for those whose livelihood keeps them in smoky manufacturing areas.

The Milky Way.

In planning meals for the home where there are children, it is necessary to think of them first. Milk, then, is a food to be considered.

The home economist of the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, says that it is easy to plan dishes that have the required amount of milk for the children and still appeal to the adult members of the family. Milk soups, scalloped dishes and many delicious desserts carry a large proportion of milk and yet are not suggestive of baby food.

The care of milk in the home is very important. As soon as possible after delivery, the milk should be taken into the house and put immediately into the refrigerator or other cold place. The bottle and cap should be washed, before putting away, in order to remove any dirt or dust which may have adhered to the bottle during delivery.

Milk should be kept in the storage place, except when it is actually being used. When cooking with milk, the bottle should remain in the warm kitchen only long enough to measure out what is required. In serving milk, the amount put on the table should be as nearly as possible what will be used, and after the meal, milk, cream and butter should be the first foods put away. Left-over milk should not be poured back into the bottle, as the milk in the bottle will be several degrees colder than that taken from what is required. In serving milk, the keeping quality and flavour. Milk pitchers should be thoroughly washed and frequently scalded.

Milk readily absorbs odours and flavours of other foods. To guard against this, it should be kept covered and away from strong foods such as onions, cabbage or fish.

FARINA CREAM.

2 cups milk
1/2 cup farina
1/2 teaspoonful salt
1 egg
1/2 cup brown sugar

This quantity will make two, one-

Supper Problems.

Supper menus are a real problem at any time of the year, but with the thermometer soaring in the eighties such difficulties are tripled. People who work must eat, and unfortunately most people must continue to work whatever the temperature. They must also have the right food whether it be hot or cold, but as the weather changes there is a decided difference in the appeal of certain foods. Hot baked beans and meat dishes are excellent for winter-weather, but vegetables with eggs and cheese, in salads or casseroles, tempt the appetite in summer.

The home economist of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggests these dishes for summer suppers.

Vegetable Marrow Casserole.

1 1/2 cups milk
1 cup stale bread crumbs
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 eggs—well beaten
12 slices vegetable marrow (1 medium marrow)
2 tablespoonfuls chopped onions.

Scald milk, pour over bread crumbs, add cheese, salt and pepper. Let stand 1/2 hour. Then add well beaten eggs. Arrange the vegetable marrow slices in a greased casserole. Sprinkle with chopped onion, pour milk and egg mixture over. Set in a pan of warm water and oven poach in a moderate oven at 350 degrees F. for one hour or until custard is firm. Six servings.

EGGS AU GRATIN

4 cooked potatoes
1/2 cup milk
4 green onions (1/2 cup chopped)
1/2 salt and pepper
6 hard cooked eggs
1/2 cup grated cheese

Slice potatoes into a greased casserole. Heat milk and pour over potatoes. Cover top with sliced green onions. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover and bake in a moderately hot oven 375 degrees F. for 25 minutes. Cut eggs in half lengthwise. Arrange on potatoes, cover with green cheese. Return to the oven and bake 10 minutes in a moderately slow oven 325 degrees F. to heat eggs and melt the cheese. Six servings.

LIVER STUFFED EGGS.

8 hard cooked eggs
1 cup minced, cooked liver
3 tablespoonfuls chili sauce
Salt and pepper to taste
2 cups medium white sauce (hot).

Shell eggs and cut in half. Remove yolks and mix with liver blended with chili sauce. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Fill whites with the yolk mixture and reheat in the white sauce. Serve on toast. Six servings.

Eggs may be placed in a casserole, covered with the sauce, sprinkled with some of the crumbled egg yolk and reheated in a moderate, 350 degrees F., oven.

Let in Light.

In a health tip to office and work-room staffs, the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, advises on thorough airing of working premises. "Open the windows wide," they say, "if you let in sunlight you help kill off germs of colds or flu which may be lurking about. This is particularly important in places where crowds have caused accumulation of used-up air mingled with dust, and possibly with tobacco smoke." The Department suggests that offices and other quarters be thoroughly aired when not in use.

crust pies. Bake the shells for 10 minutes in a hot oven, 400 degrees F. Add custard mixture and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F., for 45 minutes or until set.

Eggs.

"Sunshine in sealed packages," that is what eggs have been called. Can you imagine the plight of the homemaker and the chaos of the kitchen should our hens go suddenly on strike? Many homemakers from Great Britain know the difficulties and have had to face the problem during war years, when egg supplies were so limited, of preparing the family's favourite dishes without eggs. However, they have expressed their appreciation for Canada's contribution of dried eggs, which enabled them to treat their families occasionally to the old-time dishes.

Eggs are a versatile, concentrated and economical food. They may be served at any meal, either by themselves or in a wide variety of combinations. There is an old saying, "eat eggs and live long" which aptly describes their beneficial qualities.

Eggs are a perishable food. To maintain their original quality eggs should be properly stored. Keep them in a clean, cool, dry, well-ventilated place. The temperature should never be above 50 degrees F. and preferably around 45 degrees F. Temperature also plays an important role in successful egg cookery. A low even heat gives a palatable, tender product, which is easily digested.

The home economist of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, says that left-over eggs will keep for several days if tightly covered and stored in a cool place. However, never allow them to freeze. They may be used in sauces, icings, meringue toppings, for pies and puddings, whips, souffles and angel food cake. Left-over egg yolks may be hard cooked by dropping them into simmering salted water for 15 minutes. They may then be sieved and added to sauces. French dressing or used to garnish a salad.

SCOTCH OMELET.

4 eggs
1/2 cup cooked rolled oats
1/2 cup milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon fat

Beat slightly, add the rolled oats, milk and salt. Mix thoroughly. Melt the fat in a hot skillet and pour in the mixture. Cook over low heat. With a knife loosen the edge of the omelet and tilt the skillet to let the uncooked portion run underneath the cooked part. When cooked, sprinkle with grated cheese, cream and fold over. Serve immediately. Six servings.

CREOLE EGGS

1/2 cup raw spaghetti (inch pieces)
2 tablespoonfuls fat
2 tablespoonfuls all-purpose flour
1 cup milk
2 tablespoonfuls chopped onion
1 cup canned tomatoes or tomato juice
1 clove garlic, mashed (optional)
1/2 teaspoon chili powder
4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Cook spaghetti in boiling water and drain. Meanwhile make cream sauce of 1 tablespoon fat, flour and milk. Add seasonings. Cook onion in 1 tablespoon fat until tender, but not brown. Add tomato juice, garlic and chili powder. Cook until thick. Add to cream sauce. Place alternate layers of spaghetti, sauce and eggs in a greased quart casserole. Sprinkle top with crumbs which have been mixed with the remaining tablespoon of fat, melted. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F. for 20 minutes. Six servings.

SAVOURY SAUCE FOR POACHED EGGS.

3 tablespoonfuls fat
1 small carrot, grated (about 4 tablespoons)
2 tablespoonfuls onion, chopped
1 bay leaf
1 tablespoon flour
1/2 cup water

The Quality Tea "SALADA" ORANGE PEKOE

Keep Eggs Cool to Retain Quality.

Because it is enclosed in a shell the deterioration of a new laid egg during warm summer temperatures is not as noticeable or as rapid as some other perishable foods. Nevertheless, a lowering of quality is brought about by improper storage conditions even in the space of a few days, and the maintenance of the flavour of a freshly laid egg requires as much care as that given other perishable foods, says Walter Mountain, Poultryman, Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, Ontario.

The removal of the male from the laying flock is advisable, otherwise most of the eggs laid will be fertile. While this condition in itself does not impair the quality of the eggs, germ development should be prevented by keeping the eggs in temperatures between 45 and 50 degrees after they are laid. As long as eggs are not frozen temperatures below this range are even better, though when removed to a warmer place moisture may gather on the shell. This sweating tends to destroy the natural bloom of the new laid eggs, opening up the pores in the shell, and allowing an easier penetration of bacteria to the contents. Moisture and warmth may lead to the formation of mould spots, spoiling the fresh flavour and giving the product a low rating in the grader's estimation.

Warm and dry conditions are the cause of evaporation of the contents of the egg so it is also necessary to give attention to humidity so as to prolong the original freshness.

Stale, stagnant air may impart a mustiness to egg flavour, so if mechanical control of humidity is not available a well ventilated cellar will provide a suitable place for storing before shipment.

The thin membrane separating the yolk from the white may be weakened and even fractured by unfavourable temperatures, allowing the two parts to mix when the egg is broken out. While it is characteristic of some fowls to lay eggs with thin whites, usually an egg that has been properly cared for will hold together when poached or fried.

Of all foods, eggs are among the most adaptable to the varied preferences of the human taste, and to be attractive in both appearance and flavour they should be kept cool from the nest to the kitchen.

Exports Lost by Fire.

Forests represent pulpwood, the raw material of Canada's largest export industry. Canadians should be their own fire wardens.

Forest Fires and Foreign Trade. The world looks to Canada for pulp and paper products. These exports are the largest single item in our foreign trade. Every forest fire cuts into Canada's wealth and diminishes world trade potential.

1/2 cup sieved canned tomatoes or tomato juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Melt the fat, add the carrot, onion and bay leaf. Brown slightly. Add the flour and stir to make a smooth paste. Then add the water and tomatoes or tomato juice and stir until thickened. Add salt and pepper. Serve over poached eggs, or omelette. Six servings.

Suspend Maximum Prices on Seeds.

Maximum prices have been suspended on all seeds, except seeds of field peas and field beans, other than those of registered or certified seed, the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Wartime Prices and Trade Board have announced. Reason for this action is because supplies of practically all kinds of seeds are sufficient to meet Canadian requirements and some European countries are now offering for export seeds from the 1946 crop which has taken an indication that the Canadian seed supply situation is safe. Canadian requirements will, however, still be protected by the export permit policy.

Since the price control regulations have been lifted, the Special Produce Board will not now be the sole exporter of all seeds of alfalfa, red clover, alsike clover, and alsike-white clover mixture, nor will it provide for the even better, though when removed to a warmer place moisture may gather on the shell. This sweating tends to destroy the natural bloom of the new laid eggs, opening up the pores in the shell, and allowing an easier penetration of bacteria to the contents. Moisture and warmth may lead to the formation of mould spots, spoiling the fresh flavour and giving the product a low rating in the grader's estimation.

Travelling First Aid Instructor

Women in the isolated communities of British Columbia, McLean, Hilly Beach and Richard's Landing have availed themselves in large numbers of the opportunity of learning the knowledge of First Aid, announced Miss Margaret Dulmage, Director of Home Nursing and The Reserve Ontario Division Red Cross. This has been accomplished through the travelling First Aid instructor, Miss Irene Anderson, who returns to Ontario Division Headquarters next week the spending six weeks in each of these communities.

Miss Dulmage, with District leaders of the Reserve has presented 13 reservists with pins which signify that the wearers have completed six months' course. Fitting them to give nursing care: for volunteer service in civil hospitals and to assist with various activities in health agencies. Among the centres where Reservists have qualified during July and June have been Toronto, Hamilton, Burks Falls, Caladonia, Sault Ste. Marie, Sharnburg and Timmins.

Future Milk Bottles to be Gaily Painted.

Now it's painted milk bottles. Toronto's Banting Laboratories suggests that if a red or green bottle were used instead of the traditional clear-glass container, the milk would retain its nutritional value longer. Experiments with riboflavin — better known as vitamin B2 — led to the painted milk bottle idea. Riboflavin and food investigations by R. C. A. F. doctors and the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children established the fact that the riboflavin essential to good health could best be obtained through milk and dairy products. Also established was the fact that milk exposed to sunlight loses its riboflavin fairly rapidly.

The Banting Laboratories idea, then, was not prompted by any desire to bring milk bottles into line with the current surroundings. Rather it sprang from scientific investigation indicating that milk in colored bottles would tend to be a more health-giving drink.

Suspend Maximum Prices on Seeds.

Maximum prices have been suspended on all seeds, except seeds of field peas and field beans, other than those of registered or certified seed, by the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Wartime Prices and Trade Board have announced.

Reason for this action is because supplies of practically all kinds of seeds are sufficient to meet Canadian requirements and some European countries are now offering for export seeds from the 1946 crop which has taken an indication that the general seed supply situation is safe. Canadian requirements will, however, be protected by the export permit policy.

Since the price control regulations have been lifted, the Special Produce Board will not now be the sole exporter of all seeds of alfalfa, red clover, alsike clover, and alsike-white clover mixture, nor will it provide for the sale of participation certificates. The Seed Export Office at Lindsay, Ont., to which the Board has operated since the fall of 1943, will be closed by August 31st next.

Travelling First Aid Instructors

Women in the isolated communities of Beauport, McLean, Humber Beach and Richmond Landing have availed themselves in large numbers of the opportunity of learning knowledge of First Aid, announced Miss Margaret Dumlague, Director of Home Nursing and the Reserve Officer Division Red Cross. This has been accomplished through the travelling First Aid instructor, Miss Helen Anderson, who returns to Ontario Division Headquarters next week after spending six weeks in each of these communities.

Miss Dumlague, with District leaders of the Reserve has presented 13 reservists with pins which signify that the wearers have completed six months of fitting them to give nursing care; for volunteer service in civil hospitals and to assist with various activities in health agencies. Among the centres where Reservists have qualified during July and June have been Toronto, Hamilton, Burks Falls, Caladonia, Sault Ste. Marie, Sharnburg and Timmins.

Future Milk Bottles to be Gaily Painted.

Now it's painted milk bottles. Toronto's Banting Laboratories suggest that if a red or green bottle were used instead of the traditional clear glass container, the milk would retain its nutritional value longer.

Experiments with riboflavin — better known as vitamin B2 — led to the painted milk bottle idea. Nutritional and food investigations by R. C. A. F. doctors and the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children established the fact that the riboflavin essential to good health could best be obtained through milk and dairy products. Also established was the fact that milk exposed to sunlight loses its riboflavin fairly rapidly.

The Banting Laboratories idea, then, was not prompted by any desire to bring milk bottles into line with the current surroundings. Rather it sprang from scientific investigation indicating that milk in colored bottles would tend to be a more health-giving drink.

Corporations and You.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

There is a closed season for moose and deer and pheasants and bass and beaver, but no one has thought of a closed season for corporations. Indeed, no one except the parties concerned seems to worry about what might happen if the sniping should stop. Yet we might get along better if the moose joined the dod as a museum piece than we would if interest-earning corporations, or their equivalent, were to disappear.

To many people a corporation is a soulless monster that fattens on the public and secures its unholy gains by flattening their faces in the dust. That is a rather distorted picture, as you might realize better if in place of the corporation you supplied the name of yourself or your neighbour. A corporation is only a composite of individuals who invest their savings in a common undertaking in the hope of profit. Of course there are wealthy investors who have their thousands of shares, and tens of thousands of little investors who have their four or five shares. Each has an equal part in any profits. The millionaire's dollar is as important as the poor man's penny. The only ones who profit more than that are the book-keepers, the executives whose industry, initiative, and knowledge are devoted to the task of making these profits possible.

As only a fraction over 1 per cent of all the earners in Canada have an annual income of over $10,000, and less than 5 per cent of all taxable people earn over $5,000, it should be fairly evident that these corporations couldn't possibly represent aggregations of millionaires bent on pyramiding their profits, but are mainly you and me trying to use our savings in such a way that we can protect them and possibly make them grow year after year. The corporation is a device of the law of supply and demand for some years back, the opinions of bureaucratic experts as to what sugar prices should be. Output has therefore sunk to a low point and it will take some time and higher prices to bring sugar back. In Canada we have been even greater failures than elsewhere because our policy is meant to subsidize sugar imports while neglecting the possible increases in domestic output which would have come if prices had made beet sugar production more attractive.

The laid-down price of Cuban sugar at Montreal, duty-paid is $5.51 with exchange at par. It is estimated that the Canadian public is paying more than $8,000,000 to maintain the present ceiling price of $5.89 net Montreal on refined sugar. How does that affect beet sugar production in Ontario? The industry has been slowly throttled and is further threatened because the overseas processing company had severe losses in processing costs in the last three years and may suffer greater losses as costs are advancing fast. Output here is curtailed, there is an excise tax of $1 per cwt., and the ceiling prevents domestic sugar getting its usual protection based on the laid down cost of raw cane sugars, including duty, plus the cane refiners' spread.

During the war the following assistance was given: Dec. 31st, 1941, removed sugar administrator's levy 33 1/3 cents; Feb. 16th, 1942, excise tax reduced 50 cents; Sep. 1st, 1943, excise tax reduced, 50 cents; 1946, increase in net return for beet sugar on sale of 1946 output, 60 cents; a total of $1.94 per 100 pounds refined. Of that $1.69 went to farmers to boost their sugar beet price and the 25 cents which went to processors is said to be entirely too small with labor costs higher by 112 per cent over 1941 and without protection. Actually the government has collected and retained $6.1 million on the sales of Ontario beet sugar since 1939 and its assistance by the measures indicated above totaled $2.4 million. So the assistance has really been backward.

Under a free market, of course, this very important food product would be expected to take care of itself and to pay its share of taxes. But under price control which produces losses, production can only be kept at proper levels by giving as much as a free market could reasonably be expected to provide. Anything less can only lead to further declines.

Obviously measures should be taken in the public interest to assure maximum beet sugar production to Canadian plant capacity. In order to get 45,000 producing acres at work in 1946 the Dominion Government should have followed the United States policy of levelling out inequalities due to geographical locations by making its benefit payments to growers and processors alike. Failure to do that resulted in 26,000 acres being the total acreage in Ontario.

The wholesale list price of refined sugar in New York is $6.10, less 2 per cent. The Cuban price is hatched to the retail index of prices in the United States and may vary upwards considerably. Canada may face the brunt of runaway prices in the United States. The Cuban contract also calls for a 1947 price at the highest quarterly price paid in 1946.

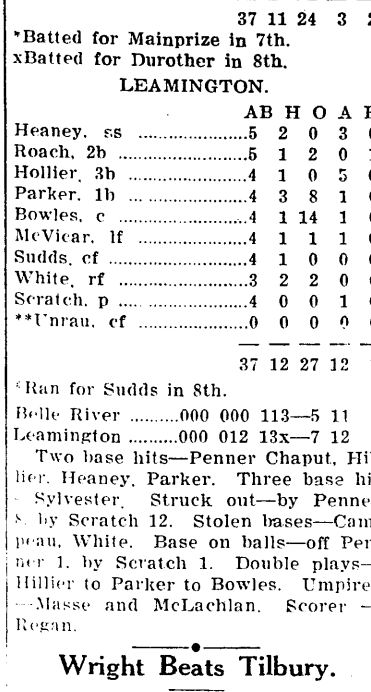

Fire Consumes Wealth.

Of all peacetime Canadian manufacturing industries, pulp and paper stands first in employment, total wages paid, export values, net value of production, and in capital invested. This industry depends on the forests. Care in the woods will help prevent forest fires.

Essex Juniors Lose at Tilbury.

Essex Juniors journeyed to Tilbury on Sunday and went down to their second defeat of the season. From the start it was apparent the Essex boys had the jitters, for Tilbury jumped into a four-run lead in the opening inning, and scored three more in the second. From then on it was a good ball game.

Wes Garrod set Tilbury down with one hit in the next two innings. Lefty Loebach came in to start the fifth and pitched fine ball, allowing three hits and one run in the three innings he pitched, but it was evident his mates gave him better support than Garrod received. Pete Ross made a fine stop in the seventh off Wilson, robbing him of a two base hit, and Wes Garrod made a sensational catch in the same inning when he misjudged a fly ball and then grabbed it over his shoulder with one hand. Essex got only four hits, but two of them were doubles. Nabhatt and Trudell each getting one.

Chevalier played a fine game at short for Tilbury, handling seven chances without an error. He also was the hitting star of the game, with four for five, including a double, the only extra base hit Tilbury got.

Tilbury has a very fine team and were just a little too good for the Essex boys, but the local lads should give them a battle when they play them on the Essex diamond. Essex plays in Harrow next Sunday, August 10th.

J. A. Hanrahan Appointed Inquiry Commissioner.

Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, announced on Thursday last week, the appointment of J. A. Hanrahan, Police Magistrate of the City of Windsor, as Inquiry Commissioner to investigate, with a view to settling the dispute which led to the present strike at the Brunner-Mond Canada, Limited, Amherstburg, Ontario.

The appointment was made as a result of representations made by Hon. Charles Daley, Minister of Labour for Ontario.

This strike, which began on July 12th, cuts off the supply of soda pop to manufacturers of glass containers necessary for the canning industry, and the Labor Department points out that as containers are needed urgently for the canning of the tomato crop in Southeastern Ontario, this stoppage of work is very serious.

The workers are members of the International Union, United Automobile Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, Local 89, and have made demands regarding wages, hours of work and other matters.

Mr. Mitchell explained that any tentative agreement on the subject of wage rates by direct negotiation must later be considered by the Regional War Labour Board for Ontario.

Wilfrid Brockman Marries.

At St. Mary's Church, Maidstone, on Saturday morning last, Wilfrid Brockman, one of our up and coming young men about town, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brockman, became the happy husband of Miss Virginia Kavanagh.

Mr. Brockman was the perfect picture of Mr. Canada, in his impeccably cut suit of navy blue, the tiny pin stripe design neatly nipped at the waist to make him look athletic. His broad shoulders were padded, but they looked quite nice. He wore black shoes with black laces, diamond pattern socks and no spats, owing to the warm weather. His tie, the traditional length, was of turquoise blue, featuring an all-over design of spirals and curly-ques. In his buttonhole was a single white carnation, and he carried a small black prayer book.

Assisting him was the best man (the best man, because the best man always wins) Kenneth McDonald, also in pin stripes, his shoes, too, being black, matching the bridegroom's. The ushers, Jerry Frocker and John Kavanagh, likewise wore pin stripes in navy blue, and a chic black respect-ively, their suits cut in similar lines to those of the bridegroom, double-breasted, with buttons down the front, and on the cuffs. They sported matching ties in fuchsia, mickey mouse design. All the attendants wore white carnations.

After the reception the bridegroom left on his honeymoon, travelling in the same blue pin-striped suit, with a fresh carnation in his buttonhole. The bride accompanied him, carrying a beautiful Roger Electric radio, her gift to the groom.

English War Bride Arrives.

Mrs. Albert Tessier has arrived on the "Aquitania" to join her husband, who returned to Canada some months ago after serving three years in the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps. Mrs. Tessier is the youngest daughter of Bennett Dunne, of Manchester, England, and the late Mrs. Dunne, and was married in that city on September 18th, 1945.

Mrs. Clarence Tessier has also arrived from England to join her husband, who served in the Essex Scottish Regiment for more than five years. She travelled on the "Aquitania" with her daughter, Angela, three years old, and son Danny, a year old. Both Clarence and Albert are sons of William Tessier and the late Mrs. Tessier of the 10th concession, Gosfield North.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tessier are residing in McGregor.

Kavanagh-Byrne Nuptials.

One of the nicest weddings of the season took place recently in St. John's Church, Woodlee, when Rev. Father Doe united in marriage Miss Bertha Kavanagh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Byrne, of Woodlee, and John M. Kavanagh, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Kavanagh of Oldcastle. Given in full page by her father the bride was lovely in a traditional gown of white dotted organza with a bouffant skirt and tiers of ruffles edged in lace entering into a train. Similar ruffles entered from the shoulder to the waist edging an inset of marquisette. Around her neck she wore a pearl sunburst. Her finger tip veil was edged in lace and held in place by a Queen Anne headress. She carried a white satin prayer book cornered with gardenia from which fell white streamers with knots of bouvardia.

Miss Mary Charlotte Byrne the bride's sister as her only bridesmaid wore pink dotted organza with lace sheer dress and a long blue streamer to match the streamers in her prayerbook. Her flowers were tea roses.

Mr. Charles Collins, cousin of the bridegroom was best man. The ushers were Mr. Louis Byrne and Mr. Barney Kavanagh.

Being a child of Mary the couple were married in the sanctuary and after the ceremony the bride accompanied by her bridesmaid placed a bouquet of flowers at the feet of the Blessed Virgin. During this Lawrence Dunn, brother-in-law of the groom sang "Mother at Thy Feet is Kneeling". The couple left the church to the strains of "On This Day O Beautiful Mother" also sung by Mr. Dunn accompanied by Mrs. John Dunn.

A wedding breakfast was held at Sewells, Essex, for seventy-five guests. From 3 to 5 a reception for 300 guests was held at the home of the brides' parents, the bride's table being centred with the wedding cake flanked by an attractive arrangement of guillardi and chassa daisies. Mrs. Byrne chose for her daughter's wedding a gown of powder blue with black accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses. Mrs. Kavanagh wore a figured blue dress with white accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Kavanagh left later on a motor trip to Sarnia, Toronto and Ottawa, the bride travelling in pale green gabardine with red and white accessories. She wore an emerald filigree bracelet, a gift of the groom. Her corsage was of red roses. The couple will reside in Oldcastle.

Few School Staff Changes.

There will be few changes in the staffs of the Essex schools when they reopen September 3rd.

The high school staff adds one new teacher, W. J. Meehan, of Ridgeway, who will teach agriculture. The other members of the staff are Principal H. W. Hall, H. F. Smithendoff, J. H. Rapsey, Earl Reeb, Mrs. Retta Chapman, Helen Murphy, Bessie Stewart, Catherine Platt, Mary Rowe and Charlotte McDonald.

Mrs. Lawrence Johnston, of Essex, is the new member on the public school staff, taking the place of Miss M. Miller, who has retired. The rest of the staff is J. A. Dowsell, principal; Edward Gray, Alex. Dubs, Miss H. Quigley, Miss Eunice Paxton, Miss Flossie Higgins and Miss Alice McMill.

Fr. Gleeson's Mother Passes.

Mrs. Mary Grace Gleeson, aged 85, one of London's pioneer citizens, died Tuesday at her home on Wellington street, in that city.

She was the widow of the late P. P. Gleeson, and had lived in London for 75 years.

She is survived by two sons, Rev. J. P. Gleeson, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Maidstone; P. J. Gleeson, on the staff of the Leamington High School; seven daughters, Mrs. P. R. Healey, London; Sister M. Grace, of St. Joseph's Collegiate, Windsor; Sister M. Kathleen, principal of St. Michael's School, London; Grace Gleeson, on the staff of the St. Thomas High School; Margaret, at home.

Funeral services will be held from St. Peter's Cathedral, London, on Friday, at 10 a.m. A private requiem mass will be held in the chapel of St. Joseph's Hospital at 7 a.m., prior to the funeral, with her son, Rev. J. P. Gleeson, officiating.

Essex Town Council.

Wednesday, August 7th. Council met in the Council chamber, in special session, at 8 p.m., with Mayor Linton, Reeve Irwin and Councilors Shaw, Lee, Francottle and Chase present.

George R. Weller dropped in and reported re drain on Station street, alongside his property.

Mr. Lee stated he had told the men to go over and repair same and thought this had been done. He told Mr. Weller he would look into it.

Council then went over with Mr. Jarczak his proposed sub-division on Arthur avenue. The sub-division, as laid out, gives 30 lots, 50 ft. by 100 ft., with four facing Arthur avenue and the other 26 facing new street.

As Council has to approve of same before the Department of Planning and Development at Toronto will grant their approval, a lengthy discussion followed with Mr. Jarczak, who was willing to enter into an agreement with the town.

On motion of Messrs. Francottle and Shaw, the Mayor and Clerk was given authority to sign an agreement with Mr. Jarczak providing he fulfills the following terms: (1) construct a 66 ft. street through center of sub-division, as per plan; (2) cause an 8-inch sewer to be laid on each side of proposed road, 12 feet from lot line on each side; (3) all trees planted in subdivision to be inside of street line; (4) as soon as any lot is sold facing new street, that sewer must be laid full length of sub-division, a distance of 768 feet southeasterly from Arthur avenue.

The Clerk was instructed to advise Mr. Jarczak the terms reached and have him draw up necessary agreement. On motion, Bylaw No. 1128, re granting use of end of Fox street for a railway spur to Essex Farmers, and O. A. Whitall's lot, was passed.

Council adjourned.

Next regular meeting of Council on Tuesday, August 27th.

Base Ball.

Joe Gentile's CKLW team, of Detroit, one of the leading junior teams of that city, all of the players being 18 years or under, again showed their superiority over the Essex Maple Leafs, by winning 5 to 1, behind the steady four-hit pitching of Koscinski, one hit in each of the first four innings. The Leafs scored their lone run in the eighth, without a hit, I. Ross first up, walked, went to second on a passed ball, stole third while Hebert held the ball, and scored on Queen's hit to Shoemaker, on which the Detroit third baseman made the visitor's only error. Penner pitched good ball, except for the third inning, when the Detroiters garnered four hits, which, aided by two errors and a home run by Lombardo, the hitting star of the game, with 3 hits in four trips to the plate, was good for four runs. They scored their other run in the eighth. Shoemaker popped to Brackell; Lombardo singled, and when I. Ross, trying to pick him off first, threw into right field, the Detroit star went all the way to third, from where he scored on Costa's line single to center.

It was a good ball game. There were three fast double plays and several exceptional fielding plays — Brown's stop of Hibom's grounder in the first; Penner's catch of Hebert in the 6th; I. Ross' catch of Hibom's foul in the 7th, and Jack Murray's grandstand, gloved hand catch of Sauer's liner, as it was sailing over his head in right, in the 8th, while for Detroit, Saunders robbed Brown of extra bases in the sixth.

Conservation of Soil.

Immediate action is needed to preserve millions of acres of Canadian land from ruin by wind and water erosion, is the warning given in The Royal Bank of Canada Monthly Letter for August.

Within reach of everyone, east and west there are evidences of irreparable loss of topsoil, and unless the world is to go in for soilless culture of crops it is time for a big effort using all the resources of modern science and ingenuity.

The article continues in part: "The population of the world has increased from 465 million around the year 1650 to somewhere about 2,200 million. That means, if everyone is to have three meals a day, an additional drain on farm land of 1,900,000,000,000 meals out of every year's crop of grains, vegetables, livestock, fodder, and all the other things which contribute to human diet. Yet in 1941 there were more than 4 million acres of abandoned farms in the Prairie Provinces, an acreage which, at the long-time average yield of 15.6 bushels per acre might produce 62,400,000 bushels of wheat a year if the land had been saved."

"While the tragic history of a few decades has focused attention on sections of the Canadian West, the need for preservation and restoration of crop-growing soil in eastern Canada is also pressing. The 'Garden Province' is being washed away, little by little. Workmen had to go through 90 feet of mud to reach a solid foundation for bridge piers at Charlottetown, 'mud' which was once the fertile topsoil of crop-growing acres. In New Brunswick it is reported that one week of high water in the Saint John River carries down as much silt as would cover more than 2,000 acres to a depth of one inch. Ontario is exercised because not only are good agricultural lands being swept away, adding new devastation to the abandoned lands which should never have been opened to agriculture, but the rivers are being spoiled because silt injures the chances of breeding and feeding fish."

Quebec has set aside a ten-year fund of ten million dollars to be spent on approved schemes of land utilization. "Soil erosion has been called a 'creeping death.' It is not only fatal to growth of plants but to the development of man. Concurrent with a farmer's realization that his farm is being washed or blown away, with consequent loss of growth and revenue, there comes loss of morale. A rural population of prosperous and contented farmers is an asset every country needs, but if morale is destroyed, and farmers become apathetic, the whole country suffers. Prosperity on individual farms brings with it benefit to neighbouring merchants, distant suppliers of farm machinery, and factories all over the Dominion. These successful farmers contribute to the national income, and they provide exportable goods which increase Canada's world trade, with consequent raising of the standard of living throughout the country."

"Under conditions of low productivity, not only the farmer and his family are affected, but the whole community. A rural municipality, like any other, requires steady taxpayers. The whole countryside suffers, through lack of funds for education, road building, health care, construction, and many other necessary and desirable projects, if the tax-paying ability of those who live there is reduced. "The level of employment in manufacturing is affected by the purchasing power of all the people, and farm people make up 27 per cent of Canada's population. If the living standard of 17 per cent of a country's population is at a low level, from whatever cause, it is obvious that the standards of living will be depressed everywhere in the country."

"In one small area in Ontario there are 75 farm buildings classed as fair or poor, while 44 buildings have been abandoned or levelled, every one an unwritten story of hope, toil and disappointment. In some cases the land was good to start with, but it was farmed without foresight. The plow made it ready for carrying away by wind or water. Productivity declined, income decreased. Sons and daughters went away to cities. A farm which housed, fed and clothed a big family only a few years ago supports no one, and is a menace to its neighbours. Once it deposited money in banks, bought machinery, was the mainstay of local retail business and a customer of the mail order houses. It helped feed cities. Today it buys nothing, pays no taxes, produces nothing to add to the national income or welfare of the country, feeds no one."

After describing the causes and evidences of erosion, the article continues: "The problem is immediate. Two English scientists, G. V. Jacks and R. O. Whyte, joint authors of the book 'Vanishing Lands,' have reported: 'As the result solely of human mismanagement, the soils upon which men have attempted to found new civilizations are disappearing, washed away by water and blown away by wind. Today, destruction of the earth's thin living cover is proceeding at a rate and on a scale unparalleled in history, and when that thin cover—the soil—is gone, the fertile regions where it formerly lay will be uninhabitable deserts.' Does it, then, seem far-fetched when the Farm Equipment Dealer reports that about 14 per cent of the land on this continent has already lost all of its crop-growing capacity? Or when Professor A. F. Coventry of the Department of Zoology, University of Toronto, says there are in the agricultural part of Ontario some 5 million acres, about one-sixth of the whole, unfit for anything except trees, but lacking the trees? Soil drifted from one acre, to a depth of one inch, is equivalent to the removal of about 700 pounds of nitrogen, 155 pounds of phosphorus, and 5,380 pounds of potash. This amount of phosphorus alone, says a pamphlet distributed by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, is equal to that removed from the soil in the production of 485 bushels of wheat. Dr. Wyatt, of the University of Alberta, is quoted as saying it would take from $200 to $350 per acre in commercial fertilizer to restore these wasted minerals."

How long can this go on? Scientists tell us that it takes nature about five hundred years to make one inch of good topsoil, but this precious source of food and living is being washed from beneath our feet or blown into the air at terrific rates. Look at China, where topsoil has become so precious in the washed-out sections that men have been known to slip from their homes during the night and steal soil by the handfuls from neighbours, so as to have enough to grow beans to feed their families. The millions of tons of Canada's fertile topsoil which have been washed into the ocean cannot be replaced, and certain natural processes of erosion cannot be completely stopped, though the losses can be reduced to moderate proportions. The Palliser triangle will not be safe until dust storms cease there, the land nailed down by the roots of grass and scientific mechanical usages. But there is still time, if Canadians take notice."

A report is given of the work done under the Prairie Rehabilitation Act, and the letter concludes: "Intelligent planning, organized attack is required. It might very well stem from the farmers' level and make itself felt in requests for advice and assistance and guidance of government departments. A committee of men and women intensely interested in the well-being of their farms can sit around a table and set forth what they hope for; then look to the experts for details of how it is to be done. Discussion between groups, in an unselfish spirit of sharing knowledge and experience for the good of all, will be effective in keeping down waste due to misplaced effort or amateurish planning. Consultation between individuals, farmers' associations, universities, county councils, Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture and Agricultural Improvement Associations as to the best way of proceeding should go far toward building effective control programmes and co-ordinating them in a comprehensive plan that will benefit all."

Cash in on Lambs Before September 1st.

In view of the facts that the present lamb carcass ceiling price expires on August 31st next, and live lambs marketed after that date may sell from three to four cents per pound live weight, less than under the present ceiling, lamb raisers are urged to take advantage of the market previous to September 1st and make an effort in connection with the feeding and finishing of the lambs.

While the ewes are still nursing their lambs, lamb creepers may be provided into which the lambs may pass and feed upon specially prepared concentrate without being molested by the older sheep. A creep is simply a slatted pen with slats sufficiently far enough apart to permit the lambs to go through but close enough to prevent the larger sheep from entering.

Following the weaning of the lambs, they should be treated for internal parasites and dipped for eradication of external parasites. They should then be placed on fresh pastures, such as meadow aftermath or rape, and given access to a trough in which at the beginning of the feeding period whole oats should be placed. Later some barley and oil cake may be added in the proportion of one part barley, one part oil cake, and one-half of one part. Where salt is provided under shelter from the weather, a mixture of ten pounds salt to one pound phenothiazine may be supplied. Fresh water should be available at all times, and during extreme heat, provision for shade will add much to the comfort of lambs and sheep.

In the special pamphlet, No. 67, "The Prevention of Disease in Sheep," full directions are given concerning the control of internal and external parasites in sheep and lambs. A copy of the pamphlet may be obtained from the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, on request.

Fat for Britain.

As in Canada, farm women in Australia take a keen interest in increasing the food supply to Britain. Throughout New South Wales, more than 350 branches of the Country Women's Association have distributed 4-gallon cans, to be filled with fat for the Australian Food for Britain Appeal. The appeal for fat has been launched by the Association in conjunction with the Graziers' Association and is directed mainly to country housewives on farms and properties which kill their own meat. When filled, the cans are mailed free to Sydney and kept in cold storage until shipped.

Woodmen Eat Well.

Canada's pulp and paper industry pays annually $7 million for food for its woodworkers, who consume 8,000 tons of meat, 11,000 tons of potatoes, 7,500 tons of flour and 300 tons of cheese.

Stop Waste of Wealth.

Canada's forests yield a perpetual harvest of wealth, until destroyed by fire. Helping to prevent forest fires is a duty of every Canadian.

It is good forestry practice to cut small trees and brush. Such small trees and brush reduce the value of the timber. It is good forestry practice to cut small trees and brush. Such small trees and brush reduce the value of the timber.

Crop Rotation and Weed Control.

Rotation of crops accompanied by use of pure seed, is the most effective means yet devised for keeping land free of weeds. No other method of weed control is so economical or so easily practiced as a well-arranged sequence of tillage and cropping, including hoe crops. While this is not a cure-all, weed problems are likely to be least severe under such crop rotation.

Noxious Weeds.

A few noxious weeds such as field bindweed, Canada thistle, quackgrass, leafy spurge and Johnson grass are able to survive this method. A few annuals such as wild oats and crab grass are also on a well organized, diversified farm. Most are annual plants, depending upon their seeds for reproduction.

Cutting them close to the ground before the seeds ripen destroys them. In a rotation of cultivated crops, grain crop and meadow, several opportunities occur to do this.

Weed Combating Crops.

Alfalfa is the best common crop suited to compete with noxious weeds. Its frequent cutting and heavy growth help prevent weeds seeding. The best cultivated crop for weed control is sugar beets. Frequent cultivation, and the plowing out of the crop prevent weeds from producing seed, and also provides a serious setback to the deep-rooted noxious perennials.

Winter wheat and winter rye are excellent cereal crops for checking weed growth because they come on fast in the spring and provide late summer cultivation.

Best Time to Fatten Poultry.

The question as to when poultry of different classes should be fattened depends for a satisfactory answer upon several factors, states the Dominion Department of Agriculture publication "Fattening Poultry for Market." Of these factors, the price paid is one of the most important. Broilers should be fattened as early as is consistent with their being large enough, because prices for early broilers are much the best. Fryers, being considered as light chickens, command a relatively low price.

With heavy roasters, full prices are relatively stable and the time to fatten for market depends largely on the relationship between the amount of feed consumed and the gain being made. The time will arrive, usually at from 24 to 26 weeks of age, when gain has slowed down to a negligible amount but feed consumption will remain high.

Economy demands that when this condition is reached, the bird should be fattened for market. This class of bird should not be left too late, because, as they reach maturity, they develop heavy muscles and are classed as stags, for which a lower price is paid regardless of whether they are fattened or not. Types of poultry stock that require fattening are cockerels of all ages, whether marketed as broilers, fryers, or roasters. Capons require little if any fattening, being usually sufficiently fat and soft fleshed, if killed off range. The labour and cost of fattening roasters, pullets, and hens is rarely justified. Cockerels of the light breeds, such as Leghorns, are uneconomical if fattened after broiler age and are discriminated against on most markets.

Further information, including methods of pen and crate fattening, equipment, selection of birds, fattening feeds, management and handling the birds after fattening, will be found in the publication (No. 745, Fattening Poultry for Market, a copy of which may be obtained on request from the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Disabled Workers.

Workers with physical disabilities need not be handicaps, either to themselves or their employers, points out the Industrial Hygiene division of the Department of National Health and Welfare. The division states: "If a man or woman is correctly placed in a job, such a worker may have an even better record of safety, attendance and production than the average of workers without disability." Surveys on this continent have proven this.

Bees Signal Corps Always on the Alert.

Bees have a highly developed code of signals by which they communicate quickly with one another, as for instance in passing the word that the way is clear for plundering a certain hive. During July and August, a shortage of nectar secretion in flowers causes the field bees to stay around the apiary. Should the beekeeper in a careless examination of his colonies leave the supers or hives exposed for some time, the bees from the strong hives will steal the nectar. These robber bees at once pass the information to the field bees in their own hive. Then the reinforced troops go on a robbing spree and, if the robber bees can overpower the guards of a weak colony, they will remove 30 to 50 pounds of honey in two or three hours, leaving the inmates of the hive and their queens to starve to death.

A desultory honeyflow in any year has a tendency to cause robbing, and says the bee experts at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Brandon, Man., beekeepers should exercise care to keep the supers covered as much as possible when examining colonies and avoid scattering honey from shaken frames on the grass. When robbing has started in an apiary, all colonies should have their entrances contracted to allow passage for only one bee at a time, and it is sometimes wise to put out a solution of sugar syrup a short distance from the apiary to attract the robber bees. The sugar solution is gradually reduced in strength until conditions in the apiary return to normal.

Revival of Clock Industry.

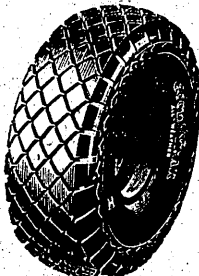

The watch and clock industry, now being revived in the United Kingdom, is the first for which the Ministry of Education are starting a National College. The industry now has ten thousands employees, and hopes to manufacture this year a total of two million clocks and watches, with plans to produce next year 5 million. In the next four or five years it is expected the industry will have built up to 25,000 employees directly concerned with watch and clock making.

The objective of the corn breeding program at the Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, is to develop hybrids which will compete successfully in the more fertile soils of the north or prove more suitable to conditions in Western Ontario than the American hybrids now grown in this program area. The first three phases of the program are selection, crossing and multiplication. The breeding work consists of isolating new inbred lines and combining them to make successful hybrid combinations. The foundation of any corn hybrid is the component inbreds. It is essential that any outstanding inbred line be developed to a high level of purity and vigor before it is crossed to produce a hybrid. The first step in the development of an inbred line is the selection of the best types from existing open pollinated corns. The best types are being tested by the parents of the first inbred lines for groups of traits. Many of these are being discarded when they have the traits not

Mr. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, stated that so far measures taken to meet shortages of farm workers throughout Canada appeared to have proved adequate. "We are as content as during war years that all Canada's crops shall be harvested this year," he said. "While peak demands for farm labour will probably not confront us for about another month, we have already had some rather difficult situations to face. The machinery set up under the Dominion-Provincial agreements for the transfer and placement of labour is working very well. The training of officers of the several Provincial Governments with the National Employment Service and the Agricultural Division of the Labour Department, has been able to handle matters so far, and has plans to deal with the heavy demand in another four or five

The harvesting of small fruit is about completed in the Province of British Columbia, but large fruit crops in the Okanagan and Kootenay valleys are expected in the case of the tree fruits. This will mean that additional workers will be required. Sixteen hundred men are now employed in the Province, moved to British Columbia by the Government for the fruit harvest, and have given considerable assistance on the early fruits, and will shortly start moving into the areas where the later fruits are grown. Also, in British Columbia, many workers from the cities of the United States as well as some who went on their own from the Prairies, have helped out.

Canada has undertaken to supply the British market with 350 million lb. of bacon in 1947 and 400 million in 1948.

The normal annual bacon consumption in the U. K. is approximately 1,200 million pounds, which means the Canada in 1948 intends to supply one-third of this total.

U. S. G. L. MacDonald, Canadian Trade Commissioner at London, has sent a special report on the U. K. bacon situation to the Department of Trade and Commerce in Ottawa.

To maintain the post-war demand for Canadian bacon on a profitable basis and at a low level approaching cost, says Mr. Gornall contends that producers in this country must exercise every effort to increase the number of Grade A hog carcasses yielding Wiltshire sides of sizeable weight.

Thanks to her forest resources, Canada produces as much newsprint as all other countries combined. Fire is the greatest enemy of this important industry. Prevention of forest fires checks needless destruction.

Albana W. A. Bazaar August 24th.

Mrs. Albert Congdon, 9th Concession, Gosfield North, welcomed the members of the Albana United Church Women's Association at the August meeting, 17 members and guests responding to the roll call. Mrs. Walter Congdon was named convener of the visiting committee for August, and Mrs. Charles Jackson for September. Plans were made to hold a bazaar of fancy goods and home baking in Leamington on August 24th.

The president, Mrs. Charles Jackson, conducted the worship service, assisted by Mrs. Ray Congdon and the Rev. Stanley R. Johnston. Mrs. Gerald Carder presented the topic, "Our Blessings," calling attention to the many blessings which are taken for granted, such as home, work, harvest, the beauty of the changing seasons, and good health.

"Gratitude is an attitude, but gratitude is valueless unless expressed. In the matter of gratitude, it should be remembered that there is no neutrality, we are either grateful or ungrateful. Gratitude costs no one anything—just a thank you—so simple—so easy—yet so deeply appreciated by the one deserving it."

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Dovilla Simons, 8th Concession, Gosfield North, October 3rd.

Albert E. Church Arrives.

After serving the Lord for twenty-one years in the country of Africa, and more recently a double term on account of the war, Major Albert E. Church arrived home today (Thursday). He will be in the sun parlour of Canada (Essex) at the home of Mrs. Roy Ellis, for a few days and then intends to go to the lake for a well-earned vacation. While there he wants to get around to see the boys of 14 years ago.

A series of special services at the Salvation Army may be arranged later on to give the people the opportunity of hearing him. Major Church and his family will also be present, it is expected, at this Sunday's meetings in the Arthur street Citadel.

Jackson-Trudell Nuptials.

In St. Francis Roman Catholic Church, Tilbury, Miss Florence Trudell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Trudell, of Tilbury, was recently married to Leslie Jackson, of Essex. The Rev. Fr. A. J. McNabb was the officiating clergyman. Miss Marguerite LeMire played the wedding music and Miss Mary Deigneau sang "Ave Maria".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white slipper satin gown made on princess lines with a square neckline trimmed with ribbon velvet, long fitted sleeves and a three-quarter length veil of illusion arranged with a wreath of carnations. She carried red roses.

As maid-of-honour, Miss Marguerite Trudell, sister of the bride, was in pink lace and wore a tiny pink hat with a matching shoulder veil. Her bouquet was of red roses. The bridesmaid, Mrs. Keith North, chose a pink gown, a small pink hat with shoulder veiling and yellow roses. Mr. North was best man.

The bridal party were entertained at dinner at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Essex, and the evening reception was held in Tilbury.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Trudell chose a lime-green dress with a gray hat and accessories, and wore a corsage of red roses. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Jackson, wore a light blue dress, a white hat and accessories, and her corsage was of yellow roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will take up residence in their new home in Essex.

Registration forms have been sent out for the Baraca-Philthaea convention, to be held here over Labor Day week-end, at the United Church. Final arrangements are under way, and the local committee asks the co-operation of all the townspeople to make this event a success. Lets clean up our homes, our yards and our streets. Delegates will be here from many parts of Ontario and the U.S. Let's show some good old-fashioned hospitality to these strangers so that they may spread a good name wherever they go for our old home town.

Shepley-Deslippe Wedding.

A quiet, but lovely wedding was solemnized, recently, at Harrow United Church manse, when Rev. J. A. Walker united in marriage Miss Helen Veronica Deslippe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Deslippe, of Trenton, and Glen Murray Shepley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Shepley, of New Canaan.

The bride was lovely in a street-length dress of old rose Jersey and white accessories, and wore a corsage of pink roses.

Miss Evelyn Beaudoin, as her only attendant, chose blue jersey, made similar to the brides, wore white accessories, and a corsage of red roses and sweetpeas.

Jack Pickett was best man. The young couple left later for a trip to Trenton, and on their return will reside in New Canaan.

Wilson-Loucks Nuptials.

At a quiet ceremony recently performed in the Ruthven United Church parsonage, Rev. P. E. James united in marriage, Everett R. Wilson and Miss Janet Loucks, of Maitland Township.

They were attended by Miss Evelyn Clifford, of Union, and Richard Little, of Maitland.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served to the immediate families at the Clifford home. The young couple leaving later to spend a week at a cottage at Ipperwash Beach.

On arriving home the following Saturday evening, they were tendered a reception by Garnet and Etta Wilson, at which they received many lovely gifts. They have started house-keeping on the groom's farm on the Wilson Shieroad, Maitland Township.

Should Get Busy.

We notice, in reading the report of the Kingsville Council proceedings, in the Reporter, the following item: "The Engineer's report covering the total cost of resurfacing Main street, was received, the amount owing Sterling Construction Co. being $32,991.90. The amount due from the Provincial Department of Highways is $21,226.59."

If Kingsville, on a little used highway, can get a grant of practically two-thirds cost of resurfacing Main street, possibly it would be a good idea if Essex Council got busy about resurfacing Talbot street. No. 3 Highway, from Windsor to Leamington, is possibly the heaviest travelled highway in Canada, and is at present being resurfaced, but the Department is not resurfacing that part through town. We are of opinion the total cost of this work, especially the travelled portion, should be borne by the province, but even if the town has to pay a share, it should be much less than the one-third Kingsville paid.

Essex Wins Protest.

The Essex Leafs won their protest against the Kingsville ball club playing Bechar, a native of Detroit, on the grounds that he is not a resident of Essex County. Following is the report of the executive:

Essex County Baseball League
Re Essex Protest.

Gentlemen:

The following decision, re Essex protest against use of Bechar, by Kingsville, said player being ineligible, according to residence rule, was given at a meeting held at the Aberdeen Hotel, Essex, on Thursday evening of last week, August 8th, 1946.

After four hours of debating, the following statement was given the secretary to mail to each club in the league:

"We, the executive of the Essex County Baseball League, are in opinion that, according to rule 2, Clause (g) of the Essex County League Constitution, and a statement in hand, from the Canadian Immigration at the Port of Windsor, dated August 2nd, 1946, and signed by O. G. Adams, inspector-in-charge, Joe Bechar, of the Kingsville Baseball Club, is not a resident of Essex County and only allowed to enter, by the Immigration Authorities, as a visitor.

"We, as your representatives of the league, in fairness to both clubs, have agreed upon the following decision:

"The game of July 7th, played at Essex, and which the Essex club protested, will be given to the Essex club, and their $15 protest fee shall be refunded.

"Due to the regular schedule shortly drawing to a close in the league, we agree that Joe Bechar shall be allowed to play in the remaining games, with the Kingsville club, under no protest from any club of this league. Due to the league being newly formed, and the constitution of the league not being forwarded at the proper time, we give this decision.

"In future, if any player, at any time, in this league, is found guilty of violating the residence rule we, the executive, shall automatically declare the player ineligible and forfeit all games he participated in."

Signed,
ESSEX CO. BASEBALL LEAGUE
EXECUTIVE.

Mrs. Joseph Holt Dies.

Mrs. Alice Emily Holt, wife of Joseph Holt, of Cottam, passed away in Grace Hospital, Windsor, on Tuesday, following a lengthy illness. She was 77 years of age.

Surviving are three step-daughters, Kathleen (Mrs. Geoffrey Law), of Gosfield North; Alice (Mrs. Halcomb), and Annie (Mrs. Harold Evans) both of Detroit; and a stepson, Alfred Holt, of Cottam; also a sister, Mrs. Adelaide Cappers, of San Bernardino, Cal.

Resting at her late home, Cottam, where a short service will be held at 2 p.m. on Friday, thence to Cottam United Church at 2:30. Burial will be in Evergreen Memorial Park, Leamington.

Quick-Fick Nuptials.

At a quiet afternoon ceremony at the United Church parsonage in Cottam on Wednesday of last week, the Rev. Stanley R. Johnston united in marriage Miss Anna Louise Quick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Quick, of Harrow, and Arthur Fick, of Union, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Quick, of Essex.

The bride chose a long, flowing, white, with a detachable collar and a long train, with a blue ribbon sash, and a corsage of pink roses.

The bridegroom's sister, Miss Sylvia Quick, who wore a white dress, and a corsage of pink roses, and a corsage of pink roses, and a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Quick will reside in Essex.

O'Neil Family Reunion.

The 11th annual O'Neil reunion was held at Savelle Park, Leamington, on Saturday afternoon, August 10th, with 115 members of the family in attendance. Members were present from Paquette, Windsor, Essex, Arena, Detroit, Port Huron, Dearborn and Flint, Mich.; Woodstock, Kingsville, Leamington, Toronto, Auld and Roseland.

The afternoon was spent in sports and races, which were enjoyed by all. The oldest lady present was Mrs. Jessie Rocheleau, of Auld, the oldest man, William West, of Leamington, and the youngest child, Arthur Thompson, of R. R. 7, Woodstock.

Six o'clock found the group reunited for supper. Following the supper hour John Shuel presided over the business meeting. Officers elected for next year are: President, Lloyd Shuel, of Detroit; vice-president, Bruce O'Neil, secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Clifford O'Neil. Eugene O'Neil, Herbert Banwell, Lloyd Shuel, Harry O'Neil, William West and Clyde O'Neil then addressed the gathering. Mrs. Helen Whitson, of Leamington, then read the following poem, which she had composed, in tribute to the O'Neils:

Three cheers and hooray
For the tribe of O'Neil!
Three beers and away,
If that's how you feel.

But they're really a temperate Godly crowd,
And to be their friend, I'm very proud.
The fathers came from Ireland, I'm told,
And to fight and win, they were brave and bold.

The families all own many acres of land,
Yet in town and city they take their stand.
To work by the day for a whole lot of dough,
I guess you will ever find it so.

With grand old fathers and mothers to thank,
We have yet to find a coward or crank.
They've lived pretty much in the same neighbourhood,
And helped to make it honest and good.

I visit one family as oft as I can,
They're only two daughters, but a whole lot of men.
This family is very fond of good books
And certainly have their share of good looks.

One went overseas, his country to serve,
And from his duty know not how to swerve.
The wife is my cousin, of whom I am fond,
But I like it better when Harry's around.

He's a friend of my girlhood, and we love to chat,
When we talked years ago, neither one was so fat.
My cousin landed him, got her a man!
And so she became as one of the clan.

Another family I used to know,
Lost two sons in the other war, long ago.
Another family moved to the city, and left their farm.
It still seems a pity.

Still another O'Neil moved away,
And Harry lives on his farm today.
Another family down the road seemed ever to carry a heavy load.
The father was sick for so many years,
'Twas a burden to bear, and no doubt caused many tears.

The eldest son wed — I liked him best,
But I really didn't know the rest.
Descendants? Yes, a very great crowd,
And once a year, they are allowed
To meet together in some beautiful park
To hold a picnic, and hear a lark.

But now I must bring this verse to an end,
I hope they will ever call me their friend.

What Did You See This Morning?

By R. J. Deachman.

It's amazing how many things we could see if only we kept our eyes open. Then too there are the eyes of the mind. Let us use both to make life fuller, richer, happier.

It was quarter to eight as I came out of the apartment block where I lived. The night had been hot, the pulse of a tired city throbbing slowly back to life. Birds chirped their morning notes. A black, spotted dog leaped out of the shadows of the street. A car honked its horn. A man in a white shirt and dark trousers walked briskly towards me. A woman in a blue dress and white blouse walked away from me. A man in a white shirt and dark trousers walked briskly towards me. A woman in a blue dress and white blouse walked away from me.

Farmers Are Prosperous in Britain.

By Lewis Milligan.

Agriculture is perhaps the most prosperous industry in Britain at the present time. It was developed enormously during the war out of sheer necessity. There is more land under cultivation in that island than it has known since it "rose from out of the azure main." Large estates, which had been from time immemorial the preserve of the aristocracy, have been released to the farmer and are producing crops of grain, fruit and vegetables, and cattle are grazing everywhere. England has often been described by visitors as a "garden," and at the present time it is a great "kitchen garden." In addition to the great estates, there are numerous small farms, many of which are owned by private individuals. There are also many small farms, many of which are owned by private individuals.

It is a country of small farms and the farmers are all individualists. In most of them, the farmer is very much of a family concern and it would seem that the one-time hired man has himself become a farmer.

The Cooperative relieves these farmers of the trouble of marketing. It can be handled by the Cooperative in various ways at the discretion of the grower. "On Commission" applies to certain markets where the Society has a definite arrangement with a grower. "On Account" is the grower's produce in samples provided with labels and the Society then collects and distributes the produce. The grower receives a cheque weekly for the net amount, after all other charges have been deducted.

City Contract, the produce, especially fruit, is often bought outright by the Society. This is necessary to ensure that the Society can make contact with the various growers, both British and foreign, with whom they do a large business.

At the disposal of the Society is another method in which case the growers send down their produce and give the Society a free hand to "do as they please." In cases where growers are unable on account of illness or shortage of labour to reap the crops, the Society sometimes buys the crop outright at a fixed price and does all the work, with the stipulation that the ground be cleared by a certain date.

It is specifically understood, however, that there is no compulsion for any member of the Coop to market his produce through the Society.

So far the fruit and vegetable growers have not linked up with the National Farmers Union, which is chiefly composed of "mixed" farmers. A special appeal is being made to bring the market growers into the Union. During the war the Government assumed control of agriculture and this necessity resulted in the control of prices and the guaranteeing of a market. It is contended that if the Government is to guarantee a market it must control prices, particularly of fruits and vegetables, from neighbouring countries, which might flood the market with cheap produce and thus reduce prices.

It is contended that this question was brought before the House of Commons in 1945 and that the Government decided to import from Holland.

The Government are being employed by the British Government. They are housed in camps and are being employed by the British Government. They are housed in camps and are being employed by the British Government.

They may be employed by the British Government. They may be employed by the British Government. They may be employed by the British Government.

35% of Your Dollar Comes from Exports.

Information on external trade of interest to every Canadian comes from the first August issue of the "Commercial Intelligence Journal" issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce. Shipments of pure bred cattle and other live stock are heavy: 180,000 head, 1,000,000 head and 12,000 head were shipped to Great Britain to a value of $1,000,000. Canada's reputation as a source of high-grade beef is being established in New Zealand and South Africa.

The "Foreign Trade Inquiries" section shows that business merchants are interested in purchasing from Canada such articles as hardware, tools, textiles, clocks and paper and in selling to Canada rice, cotton seed, oils, metal ores, rubies and other precious stones.

The "Sensing Danger" section shows that Canada has lost the leading role which it once had as a supplier to that country, having fallen to 7th place in 1944 from 2nd place in 1929. The Ottawa Bureau of Statistics figures for the first 6 months of 1946 shows a new increase of exports to that country this year and if this new rate is maintained, Canada may regain the lost ground.

The "Citizen" claims that within the union ranks there are "zealous followers of revolutionary discontent" who have forced labor unions into strikes "for more sinister purposes than to improve working conditions." Regarding the political party which it had supported the "Citizen" said A. Keresky element within the C.C.F. ranks would contribute to this end — and "Few C.C.F. leaders could afford to say that the Capitalist system would be made to work better... It is the business of Class War Incendiarists to see that the C.C.F. members are constantly prodded into taking sides with the militant strikers... irrespective of the merits of the case."

The "Citizen" thinks that it should be possible for good men and true in the several parties to get together to achieve better results without wrecking the capitalistic system — a system which permits private as well as public ownership.

Losing Public Support. Other signs that public sympathy is being forfeited because of suspected ulterior motives in certain labour leaders are becoming clear. Last week in Parliament, D. Croll — lone Liberal member from Toronto, and an outstanding fighter for the cause of labour — speaking on the bill setting up a Corporation to promote external trade, criticized severely both management and the labour leaders. He said: "We have always relied, in this country, upon experts to give our people jobs and profits and a reasonable sort of living... there is no production in an idle factory... management has not been too greatly concerned with strikes in its plants... Labour has failed to appreciate that the picket line at the closed plant today may well be the forerunner of a jobless tomorrow."

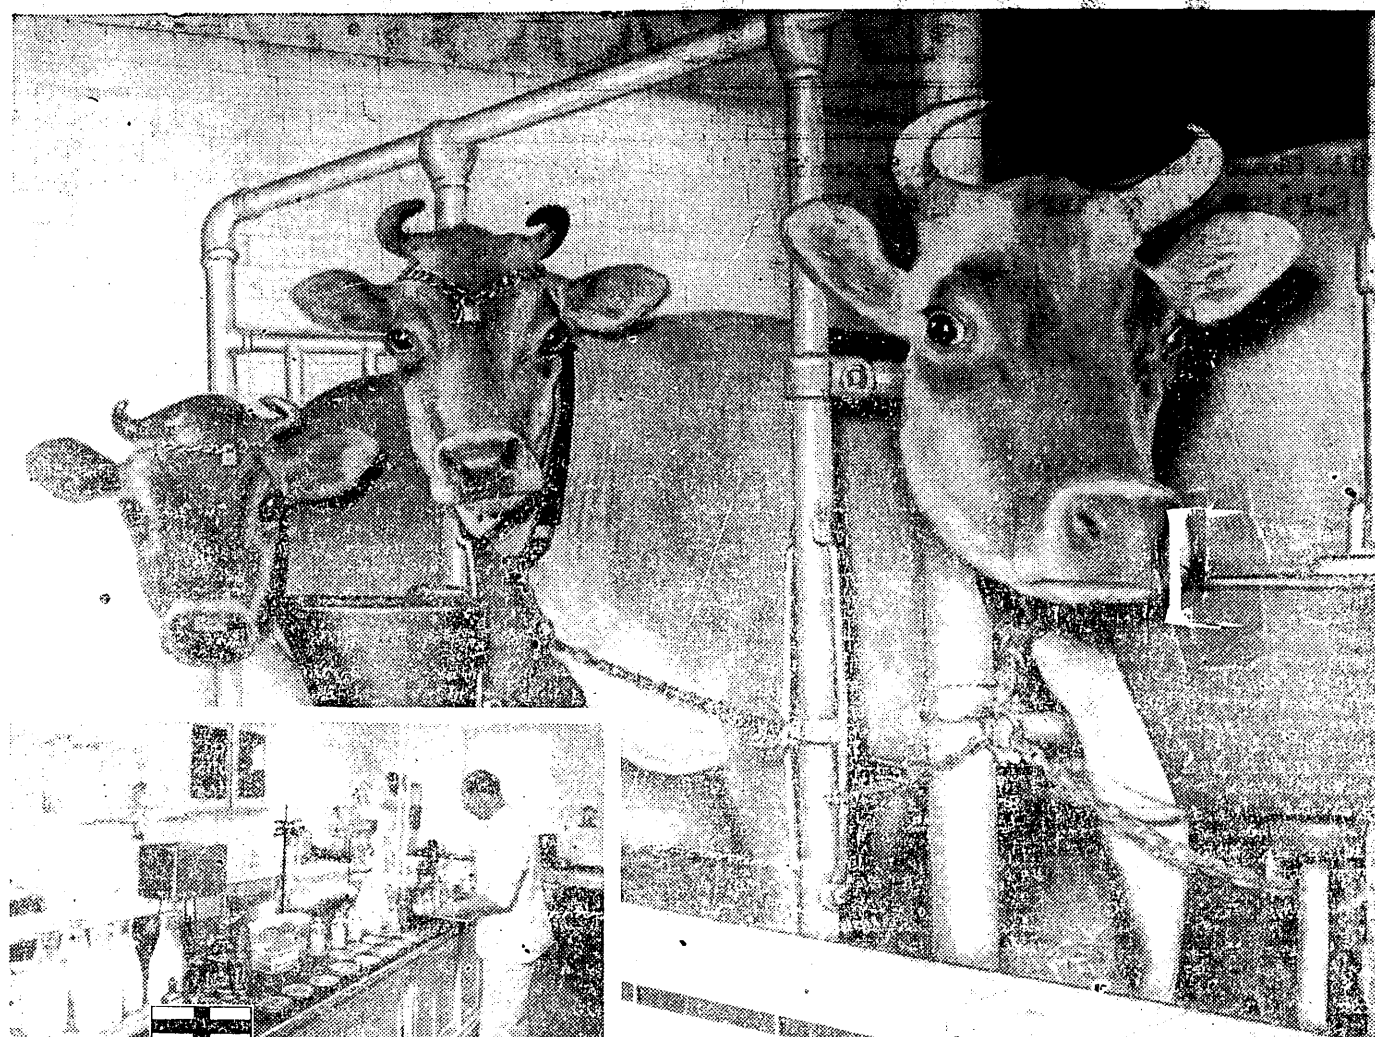

Perhaps the most severely criticized by large sections of labour and the most vulnerable, is C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the steel workers union and a prominent official of the C.C.F. political party. His attitude before the parliamentary committee that labour's demands were being made regardless of their effect on the price structure put labour in a bad light and put a weapon in the hands of Canada's Tories. No one knows better than the labourer that inflation is a game at which he can only lose, and there is a call for labour leaders who will work in the interests of labour rather than for the promotion of a political "system."

A Great National Service. The weekly press of Canada is by far the most important factor uniting influence in the country and, without doubt, more carefully read and considered than other publications. The "Rosetown, Eagle" as Saskatchewan is to be commended for the campaign it is now running urging Canadians to think of fellow Canadians of foreign birth or extraction as fellow citizens.

THE PROVINCE OF PROMISE...

Central ONTARIO'S rich pasture lands have, from the earliest days of settlement, sustained larger herds of dairy cattle than were necessary to the Province's own needs. In these 'earliest' days, which were not much more than a century ago, dairy production was exceedingly primitive, but the 1891 census disclosed the existence of 1,565 cheese factories in the Dominion, of which Ontario had 893. Today, this great showing is paralleled in every branch of Canada's dairying industry... Tomorrow, the Province's facilities will be more than equal to the demand for milk and its growing diversity of products.

Published by THE BREWING INDUSTRY (ONTARIO)

A CORNER ON CONES

Nearly six billion pounds of milk are consumed or processed annually in Ontario; the yearly value of Ontario dairy products runs around $140,000,000; Ontario butter and cheese production is about 200,000,000 pounds a year. The chief credit for these fat figures, which are about one-third of the totals for the entire Dominion, goes to Ontario's 1,200,000 milk cows — themselves a third of Canada's dairy herds. The Province's 8,000,000 gallons of ice cream, however, amount annually to 50% of the nation's "sundae" — which may explain the noticeable cone-consciousness of young Or.

Leafs Start Too Late.

After being held to four hits and no runs in seven innings, by Jerry Gouin and his hapless ball, the Leafs finally found their batting eyes and, aided by six errors, scored five runs in the eighth and ninth innings, but they had been too generous earlier, practically handing Tecumseh all their 7 runs, the first in the first inning, when Brackell was slow in throwing to A. Miller on Bruneteau's easy bouncer. In the third Brackell again made an expensive error on Jackson's sharp ground, when he would have had Robinet trapped off third for the second out, which would have saved two of the three runs scored. In the fourth, after Lappan tripled, Gouin hit to Brown, whose throw had Lappan beaten easily, but L. Ross tried to block Lappan and he found out the difference in weight was too much and he dropped the ball. Parent's two base error on Robinet's single helped score the other two runs. All Essex fielding wasn't bad, however as Parent and Loebach, especially the latter, made several fine catches. Loebach possibly set a league record for an outfielder, by having seven putouts in left. Jackson was the fielding star for the home team, with 15 putouts without an error.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of a dear husband and father, William Nelson, who passed away 6 years ago, August 17th, in his 59th year.

We cherish him with love sincere, And one that we will never forget. We miss his love, his cheery ways, With him we spent our happiest days. We miss him when we need a friend, On him we always could depend.

—Sadly missed by his wife and family.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of my dear son, Lorne Taylor, who passed away 11 years ago, August 17th, 1932.

Thank God for the faith that teaches, When the struggles of life are o'er, We shall meet again our loved ones, And know them all once more.

What matter though life be weary, And we tread its path alone, If, when the journey is ended, In heaven we'll know our own.

—Sadly missed by his mother.

"I Have It!" - "Have You?"

Have you the time "NOW" to apply for the additional Life Insurance you want before "YOUR" rate goes up?

"Wise men should think of opportunity and not of time."
Disraeli.

You may not want more Life Insurance right now, but all men have certain deep desires in common.

YOU MAY WANT TO PAY YOUR OWN BILLS . . . YOU WANT TO SEE YOUR CHILDREN THROUGH HIGH SCHOOL and perhaps COLLEGE. YOU WANT TO LEAVE YOUR WIDOW A LIFE INCOME . . . YOU WANT TO MAKE YOUR OWN OLD AGE SECURE. . . Let your dollars DO DOUBLE DUTY through Life Insurance:

- (1) PROTECT your family if you don't live;
- (2) BUILD your old age income if you do.

Have You Financial Security?
Do You Know Of Any Easier Way
To Security Than Through Life Insurance?

It's a good idea to apply today when you are in perfect health. Tomorrow a physical check-up may reveal impairments . . . entirely unsuspected by you . . . which would bar you completely from the protection of Life Insurance.

I HAVE TIME to discuss these matters with you:

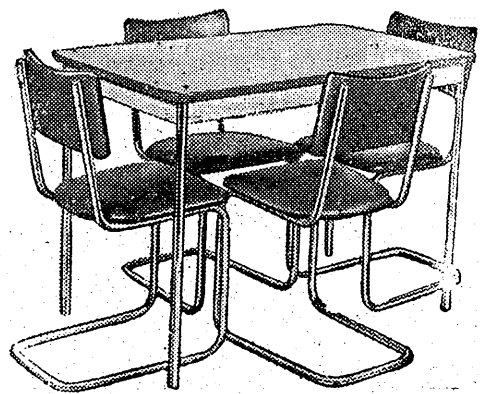

An inquiry from you will receive courteous attention.

Winter Wheat in Ontario.

It is time to plan the seeding of winter wheat this fall, states the Central Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. It is wheat is to follow soil ploughing should commence early enough in order to prevent compaction from crasses. Many wheat fields are ruined by heavy growth of timothy or other grasses. Make sure the soil is in good till. Winter wheat responds to good fertility and often will benefit by applications of manure or fertilizers or both.

Use only good seed. Winter wheat seed should be thoroughly cleaned and all diseased and diseased seeds removed. Fusarium head blight, commonly known as wheat scab, produces shrivelled kernels which should be removed by a strong blast on the fanning mill. This disease is quite common in areas where corn is produced as it harbours on old corn stalks or stubble.

Seed wheat should be treated with Crocassan at the rate of 2 ounces per bushel or as recommended on the container. This treatment not only controls stinking smut but will lessen damage from root rots including scab. Loose smut has been a troublesome disease in winter wheat and it is not controlled by ordinary seed treatment.

The first aim is to secure seed free of this disease. If this is not possible, then a portion of the seed should be given the hot water treatment. If any seed plot should be established some distance away from the other wheat crops and separated by a field of another crop. About an acre should be enough seed for 15 acres the following year. Drop one drill row every drill with 15 seeds a path for a rowing. At heading time, run a roller on the matured plants and place them in a paper bag being careful not to discharge the spikes. This must be done before flowering as it is at this time that infection takes place.

all the seeds of one being, if it has any force, not come from within.

What is Power?

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 228): "There is no power apart from God. Omnipotence has all-power, and to acknowledge any other power is to dishonour God."

God made everything good, as the Bible declares; hence evil, no matter what it claims may be a false suggestion, and is powerless to injure the real man. The recognition of this fact is our protection from all that is unlike God, good.

Christian Science teaches and proves on the basis of the words and works of Christ Jesus, that the power which reforms the sinner likewise heals the sick and protects from every threat of danger.

Not long ago a woman known to the writer had a heartening proof of the efficacy of Christian Science in healing quickly a case which, according to common belief, would have required surgery.

She gained much inspiration from Mrs. Eddy's reassuring statement (Science and Health, Preface, p. xi): "The physical healing of Christian Science results now, as in Jesus' time, from the operation of divine Principle, before which disease and sin lose their reality in human consciousness and disappear as naturally and as necessarily as darkness gives place to light and sin to reformation." After she had spent some hours in earnest prayer, or spiritual realization of man's inseparable oneness with God, the growth disappeared, and in a few days the healing was complete.

We need never fear that God's power will diminish, or that Spirit will ever be less than All. He who protected Daniel from the lions, delivered the three young Hebrews from the fiery furnace, and guided the children of Israel through the Red Sea, will never fail to sustain and maintain His children. Armed with spiritual understanding that God is the only power, we can trust and not be afraid. Paul declared (1 Timothy 1:7): "God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." Christian Science Monitor.

The shortest and surest way to live with honour in the world, is to be in reality what we would appear to be. Socrates Amherstburg on Short End.

A pitcher's battle as Belle River stopped Amherstburg, 4-1. Penner allowed but three hits and struck out nine, while Bussey gave up four hits and fanned eight. Both hurlers walked three.

The Belle River nine won with two runs in each of the fourth and seventh innings, while the Danes countered its lone marker in the sixth stanza.

Kingsville Beats Tilbury.

Kingsville scored two runs in the seventh inning to pave the way to its 3-2 win over Tilbury. The score was tied 1-1 going into the inning and errors permitted both runs. Duncan singled to left to score J. Howe with the winning run.

Tilbury threatened in the ninth inning, but the rally was cut short at one run when Koele made a nice running catch of Pendergast's long drive to right to end the game.

Leamington Loses to Harrow.

The Leamington-Harrow contest featured a pitcher's battle between Cy Scratch, of the Barons, and Reese, of the ultimate winners. Reese gave up but seven well-scattered hits, while striking out ten and walking three. His opponent yielded a total of 11 hits and struck out five, while walking none. Reese's fine control when men were on base paid off in the victory for Harrow.

The Harrow nine won the game with two runs in the sixth inning. Webster opened with a sharp single to centre and reached third when Bob Wright was safe on Hillier's error at third. Jack Wright hit to Hillier at third and Webster was out at the plate. Hillier to Bowles, with B. Wright taking third and J. Wright holding first. B. Wright then scored and J. Wright took second on a wild pitch. J. Wright then scampered to third on a passed ball and scored on Sinasac's single to left.

HOME CANNING.

Suggestion is offered by the Department of National Health and Welfare to all home-makers to go in for canning of fruits and vegetables this year. Not only does this provide a handy stock of healthful food, but the nutrition experts of the department point out, it will make food available for shipment to more needy people.

Arrange Now for Planting of Bulbs for Spring.

September and October are the months in which spring flowering bulbs should be planted to bring best results. During the war bulb production in British Columbia increased substantially and the Netherlands are again in a bulb exporting position for the first time since 1939, says R. W. Oliver, Division of Horticulture, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Contrary to expectation, the Dutch bulb industry was not completely ruined during the war. In order to eat down acreage many old varieties were discontinued, but many beautiful new varieties have been originated or increased. Early singles are being superseded by later flowering varieties. This means that, for most gardeners, tulips move from the annual flower beds to the middle or back of the perennial border, where their untidy foliage in June can be hidden by the leafy growth of later flowering perennials.

Cottage, Triumph, Darwin and Breeder tulips, daffodils and other varieties of Narcissus create gay patches of colour in the border in May and early June, when colour is a welcome break after winter's monotony. The bulbs should be planted in clumps of a dozen or more of one variety, with the bulbs spaced 6 to 9 inches apart and covered to a depth of 4 to 5 inches. All bulbs require good drainage and will rot under waterlogging conditions. In heavy clay soil it is advisable to place an inch or two of sand beneath them, but this is not necessary in average soils.

The later flowering tulips multiply more rapidly than the early singles. It is necessary to dig them up every second year about the end of June to keep them from crowding and the flowers from becoming smaller. There is also danger from the disease known as "fire." If they remain year after year in the same soil, bulbs should be stored in a dry darkened room at a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees until late July or August, then cleaned and graded. Any bulb over 7-8 of an inch in diameter will flower well and should be planted back in the border in September. Small bulbs may be sown in a furrow in the vegetable garden to increase in size so that they can be used in the garden the next year.

The smaller flowering bulbs, such as Crocus, Scilla, Chionodoxa, Leucojum, Galanthus and Muscari (grape hyacinth) are all useful in clumps at the front of the border. They should be planted close together, 3 to 4 inches apart, and covered to a depth of 2 to 3 inches, according to size of the bulbs. These little bulbs can be left in the same spot for several years to thicken and spread into ever increasing mats of welcome, spring colour.

PEOPLE ARE ASKING?

Q.—My husband bought a second hand car three days ago. We have been told by the garage man that there is no ceiling price on the car as it is an old model—1934. Would you please let us know if this is correct?

A.—The garage man is quite wrong. There certainly is a ceiling price on this car. As you gave all particulars in your letter we have passed it along to the Motor Vehicles Division of the Board and they will let you know the correct ceiling price.

Q.—Last summer we spent our holidays at a summer cabin. When we applied again this year we were advised that the rent would be four dollars more a week. Is this allowed?

A.—Certainly not, summer accommodation comes under the Rental regulations the same as any other type of living accommodation. Owners are not allowed to increase the rent unless they have secured permission from the Rentals Administration.

Canadian films for industry now cover such subjects as personnel selection, vocational training, plant safety, industrial nutrition, and production committees.

More than one for every second of the day and night!

Can you imagine the expense to taxpayers if this money had to be distributed in cash through thousands of special pay offices... and the inconvenience of having to go to such offices to get your money?

Taken in Stride

Your bank performed many such public services throughout the war and is continuing to do so. It is taking these additional tasks in stride... competent to play its part in meeting Canada's needs of the future.

ried American Beauty roses.

A reception for 50 guests followed at the home of the bride's parents.
The bride's table, being decorated with a three-tiered wedding cake flanked by white gladioli and tapers. Miss Phyllis Little, Miss Annie Fisher, Miss
Marjorie Burger and Miss Beatrice Rondy, all of Windsor, assisted in serving.

Mr. and Mrs. Drennan left later on a trip to Toronto, the bride travelling in a fuchsia crepe dress, over which she wore a gray shortie coat, with black accessories. Upon their return they will live in Kingsville.

Receives Letter from Poland.
The following letter, dated Pias-egno, Poland, June 20th, 1946, was received by Mrs. G. Webster, of Paquette:

Piasegno G/Warsaw,
St. Janiska 16, Poland.
Dear Mrs. Webster:
Owing to "Charitas" Religious Polish Association, I got a splendid dressing gown for my husband, and in its pocket I found your address.

I am hurrying to express you my most sincere thanks. We are from Warsaw. We have lost all still in 1941 — where my husband, a lawyer was arrested, and our lodging had been confiscated by the Gestapo.

During these terrible years of war
we have passed a hell on earth.
The Warsaw Tumultulism 1944 was top of all a man can surpass.

My husband, after three years spent in German concentration camp, has

Essex Loses Out in 12th.

Jack Murray pitched by far the best game of his career, on Sunday, but in spite of hurling two-hit ball for nine innings, lost out in the 12th, by the score of 1 to 0. His teammates had five chances to win the game, in the 10th, 11th and 12th, but didn't have the necessary punch when a hit meant a run. In the 10th Parent, first up, walked and stole second. This would have been a perfect place for a sacrifice to advance him to third, from where he could have scored on Loebach's fly to left, but Parent never got past second; in the 11th, I. Ross could no doubt have scored from second as Garton was taking care of Brown's slow roller along the first base line, but he stopped at third, thinking he had no chance, but Parker wasn't on first to take the throw and Garton had to beat the batter to the bag and would have been in no position to throw to the plate; in the 12th the Leafs again had men on third and second, with only one out, but failed to score.

First Inning.

Leamington — Heaney and Roach both grounded out, third to first; Hillier hit one in front of the plate and was thrown out by Ross.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Queen grounded out to Parker, unassisted; Brown was thrown out by Scratch; A. Miller drew a base on balls, but Parent struck out.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Second Inning.

Leamington — Parker struck out; Gresswell was tossed out by Murray; MacVicar struck out.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Roach took Brackell's high fly in short right; Loebach's high infield fly was taken by Hillier; M. Miller flied to left.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Third Inning.

Leamington—Bowles was called out on strikes; Sudds flied to Parent in center; Scratch, after fouling off five pitches, popped to Murray.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—I. Ross struck out; Murray beat out an infield single to second base; Queen grounded out, pitcher to first; Murray moving up to second, Brown popped to Roach.—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Fourth Inning.

Leamington—Heaney singled to deep short, and when Queen threw badly to first, Heaney took second on the error; Roach walked; Hillier flied to M. Miller in right; Parker grounded advancing; Murray threw out Gresswell.—0 run, 1 hit, 1 error.

Essex—A. Miller struck out; Roach took Parent's easy fly and Brackell struck out.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Fifth Inning.

Leamington—MacVicar drew a base on balls; Bowles, attempting to sacrifice, popped to Murray; Art Miller made a nice catch of Sudds' foul fly near the Essex bench; Scratch lined a moving over to third; Scratch took the second and Heaney walked to fill the bases; Parent made a nice catch off Roach in short centre.—0 run, 1 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Loebach lined to left; M. Miller hit an extremely long line drive to Sudds in center; MacVicar made a fine running catch of a line drive off I. Ross in left center.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Sixth Inning.

Leamington—Hillier flied to M. Miller; Parker hit through the box for what looked like a sure single to centre, but Queen reached the ball with his gloved hand and threw the batter out, on a close play; Murray threw out Gresswell.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Hillier threw out Murray; Queen struck out; Brown lined to Heaney.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Seventh Inning.

Leamington—MacVicar was called out on strikes; Ross dropped the third strike but threw him out; Hillier and Sudds were out, pitcher to first.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—Art Miller walked; Parent attempting to sacrifice, popped to Scratch; Brackell sacrificed, Bowles to Parker; Loebach hit a liner to Heaney.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Eighth Inning.

Leamington — Art Miller knocked down Scratch's hard hit grounder and beat him to first; Queen made a fine running catch off Heaney in short center; Roach was called out on strikes.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—M. Miller flied to Roach; Scratch tossed out I. Ross; Murray popped to Roach.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Ninth Inning.

Leamington—Brown timed Hillier's line drive perfectly and came down with the ball; Brackell robbed Parker of a hit by a fine stop of a hard hit ball; Gresswell hit to third and was safe when Brackell threw into the dirt; MacVicar hit to Brackell, who tossed to Brown to force Gresswell.—0 run, 0 hit, 1 error.

Essex—Queen flied out to left; Brown flied to Parker and Art Miller struck out.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Tenth Inning.

Leamington — I. Ross threw out Bowles; Sudds was safe when Queen couldn't cut throw with his easy ground; a ball Murray should have taken; Scratch was called out on strikes; Sudds stole second, but Brackell threw out Heaney.—0 run, 0 hit, 1 error.

Essex—Parent walked and stole second; Brackell flied to Sudds in short center; MacVicar took Loebach's fly in left; M. Miller flied out to Roach in center.—0 run, 0 hit, 0 error.

Essex—A fly from the bat of I. Ross fell safely between Hillier Heaney and MacVicar, along the foul line in left; Murray laid down a sacrifice, Scratch to Parker; Queen lined a single off Scratch's glove, Ross holding second; Garton replaced Scratch in the box for Leamington; Brown hit along first base line, Garton flied the ball and had to run to beat the batter to the bag; I. Ross stopped at third on a play on which he might have scored as Garton was running away from the diamond; Art Miller fanned.—0 run, 2 hits, 0 error.

Twelfth Inning.

Leamington — White, batting for Gresswell, lined a single to center; Parent made another fine catch in short center, this time off MacVicar; Bowles lined to left; White stole second and moved over to third on a wild pitch; Sudds lined a ball toward center, Parent got to it but couldn't hold it and Sudds got credit for a double, White scoring; Garton struck out.—1 run, 2 hits, 0 error.

DIED

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. J. J. Vance, who died 15 years ago, August 21st, 1931.

A leaf in the book of memories
Is gently turned today,
Our thoughts are of you, dear mother,
You are never far away.

—Lovingly remembered by her family.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear loving mother, Ella Mae Eldridge, who passed away two years ago, August 25th, 1944.
Our mother has passed on, we say,
But in our hearts she lives each day,
She left us on one dark grey morn,
The rest of us so sad and torn,
Her cheery smile we loved so well,
On us behind no more does dwell,
That tired, soft step we hear no more,
As she went about doing many a chore,
'Tis two years now since last we saw,
That dear sweet soul we called our
'Ma.'

But some day, God grant, we all shall see,
Our loving mother that dwells with Thee.

—Sadly missed by husband and all the family.

Honeymooners Delayed by Accident.

A honeymoon trip from Providence, R.I., to Niagara Falls ended suddenly, on Monday, for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mattiace, when their car swerved out of control one mile south of the village, on No. 3 Highway, and crashed into the home of Orville Hickmott.

Badly Shaken Up.

The two received minor cuts and were shaken considerably in the accident. Three hitch-hikers in the car were uninjured.

Mr. Mattiace, driving west, swerved onto the shoulder of the highway to avoid a truck which was coming head-on as it passed another truck. In attempting to turn back onto the road, the car went out of control and plunged off the road, through a fence, down a grade into an old gravel pit, up a three foot incline, then through another fence, and travelled quite some distance more, before crashing into the glassed-in porch of the Hickmott home.

Mr. and Mrs. Mattiace were married Saturday. They spent the week-end in Niagara Falls and were returning to Rhode Island via Detroit.

Provincial Constable C. F. Elford, Leamington detachment, investigated the mishap. He said there were no indications of reckless driving or of the car having been driven at an excessive speed.

The damage to the house was estimated at $80. The car was damaged considerably.

The couple, driven to Windsor, will stay in Windsor until the car is repaired and can resume the trip home.

Nelson-Robinson Nuptials.

Grace Episcopal Church, Mt. Clemens, Mich., was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding, on Saturday afternoon, August 24th, at 2 o'clock, when Doris, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Robinson, formerly of Sandwich South, was united in marriage to Thorwald J. Nelson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thorwald J. Nelson Sr., of Mt. Clemens, Mich. The ceremony was performed by the rector of the church, Rev. Geo. A. Merfield, and was witnessed by the immediate families and a few close friends.

The bride was lovely in an aquamarine wool suit, with wide bands of gray fur on the three-quarter-length sleeves, with black accessories, and a corsage of white roses. Her attendant, Miss Irene Kila, cousin of the groom, wore a similarly styled suit of fuchsia tulle. Her accessories were black, and she wore a corsage of red roses. Jesse D. Robinson, brother of the bride, assisted the groom as best man.

The bride's mother chose black and white printed sheer and wore a corsage of white gardenias, while the groom's mother wore black crepe, with a corsage of yellow gardenias.

A delicious supper was enjoyed at the Ingle-side Inn, Mt. Clemens, after which a reception followed in the evening at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Wm. Bridgion, of Essex, at which about 50 guests attended.

The happy young couple had been previously honoured at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thorwald J. Nelson Sr., on August 17th, by a miscellaneous shower. They will make their home in Mt. Clemens.

Hruska-Anger Wedding.

A recent wedding of interest was the double ring ceremony at St. Rose's Church, Detroit, when Miss Kay Anger, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Anger, and Andrew Hruska, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hruska, of Detroit, were united in marriage.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a white embroidered net gown of satin, fashioned with a fitted bodice, sweetiepea neckline and short sleeves. She wore long lace mitts. Her fingertip veil was held in a tiara of seed pearls and she carried a colonial bouquet of white tea roses and shasta daisies.

Miss Mabel Anger, sister of the bride, as maid of honour, wore a duchesse satin gown of aqua blue, her hair being of pink sequins and blue tulle and she wore pink lace mitts.

Miss Pat Hruska, sister of the bridegroom, as bridesmaid, wore a gown of blue sequins and pink tulle and her gloves were of blue lace. They both carried mixed colonial bouquets.

Frank Hruska, of Detroit, was best man, and Cliff Newneighbour and Frank Kalkier were ushers.

The church organist played, and a soloist sang "Because" and "Oh Promise Me" during the signing of the register.

A lovely wedding breakfast was served by the bride's grandmother, of Detroit, for the wedding party.

A reception followed in Canada at Elmstead hall for 200 guests.

Mrs. Anger chose for her daughter's wedding a blue polka dot sheer with white accessories. Her corsage was of mixed summer flowers.

Mrs. Hruska chose a blue linen with black accessories and her bouquet was of mixed summer flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Hruska left on a week's trip to Clear Lake, Mich., the bride travelling in pale pink linen trimmed with medallion buttons, over which she wore a white flannel shortie, pink poke bonnet and white accessories. They will reside in Detroit.

Essex Town Council.

Tuesday, August 27th. Council met in regular session, as per adjournment, with Mayor J. C. Linton, Reeve Irwin and Councillors Leo Chase, Shaw, Francotte, Bruchett and Pulleyblank present.

Minutes were read and adopted, on motion of Messrs. Francotte and Leonard Boos addressed Council requesting their influence with the Public Utilities Commission to get him water to his house on Brock street. He had been unable to get any satisfaction from the Commission. He asked if there was any law prohibiting him from drilling a well.

Mayor Linton advised Mr. Boos that this was a matter entirely in the hands of the Commission.

F. B. Geddes advised Council he had agreed ready for Mr. Jarczak to sign. He had agreed on all the terms.

Norman Hogarth, the newly appointed Chief of Police, met each Councilor personally and addressed Council, drawing their attention to the hazard of double parking, especially on Saturday nights. He also thought cars were allowed to park too close to the corners at Talbot. Another thing he noticed that very dangerous was riding bicycles on sidewalks.

A lengthy discussion on dogs and other police matters followed.

C. Tully and C. Jones, of the public school board, addressed Council re condition of toilets at Fair Grounds. They stated that the School Board were going to have a field day on September 20th, while they understood there was to be a district field day, sponsored by the Essex Rotary, on September 26th, and that some repairs should be made prior to these days.

On motion of Messrs. Francotte and Lee, the request was left with the Property Committee, with power to act.

Mr. Pulleyblank stated that both buildings were repaired two years ago by the Legion, but that he would see that they were in good shape for the field days.

The Clerk was instructed to advertise for tenders on McEntee drain.

Mayor Linton stated that as Wm. Andrew was the Town's appointment on the District High School Board, Council would have to make a new appointment to fill out Mr. Andrew's term.

On motion of Messrs. Francotte and Shaw, John A. Naylor was appointed to the High School Board, replacing Mr. Andrew, resigned.

Mr. Francotte reported that Jack Naylor had spoken to him about the drain on Wilson avenue. He stated that sewer crock must be plugged from M. C. R. spur to Arthur avenue, as after a freshet the water flooded their mill yard.—Left with Drainage Committee.

Mr. Francotte stated that there was a gore at the rear of his lot, owned by the town, evidently a blind end of Wigle street, which he would like to have closed. It has never been opened, in fact he had used it for a garden for years.

On motion of Messrs. Shaw and Lee, the following resolution was passed: That the clerk of the Town of Essex insert in the Essex Free Press, in four consecutive issues, commencing the 30th day of August, 1946, a Notice that the Town of Essex intends to pass a by-law at a special meeting, at 8 o'clock in the afternoon, on the 1st day of October, 1946, to provide for the stopping up, sale and conveying to Sidney O. Francotte, of the Town of Essex, of all of Wigle street extending from the southerly limit of Maidstone avenue to the northerly limit of A. Plan 178, in the Town of Essex, and that the Town Council will at such meeting hear any person who claims that his lands will be prejudicially affected by such by-law, and who applies to be heard.—Car.

P. W. Lee reported Mrs. Stimers would like a tile from her place to the townline.—Left with the Drainage

Mr. Lee also advised Council that the ditch bottom on Victoria street was very uneven and that the eye in the Hanlan and Victoria street bridge was not near deep enough. The only remedy he could see was to get some gravel and level the bottom of the ditch before the sewer crock were laid.

On motion of Messrs. Pulleyblank and Chase, these matters were left with the Drainage Committee, with power to act.

Mr. Francotte stated he had gone down the Colchester-Gosfield Township line and finds that the bridge into Roberts Bros. property is acting as a dam and needed immediate attention.

Mr. Lee reported to Council that the George Weller drain was completed.

Mr. Lee also stated that he thought Council should take some action to have Talbot street, at both ends of town, resurfaced.

Conclusion.

In view of the importance of corn to the economy of Southwestern Ontario and the outstanding contribution which Ontario corn producers have made towards Canada's program of price control, it is recommended that the Windsor Chamber of Commerce, in line with its traditional efforts on behalf of agriculture in this area, should lend every possible assistance in obtaining every reasonable consideration on behalf of Ontario corn growers.

New War Medal Announced.

The recently announced War Medal of 1939-45, which has been instituted to commemorate the victorious conclusions of hostilities is being adopted for issue to members of the Canadian Armed Forces, the Merchant Navy and a few classes of civilians. It was announced today jointly by the Defence Departments. It will be upon the ribbon of this Medal that the bronze oak leaf emblem denoting the Mention in Despatches or the King's Commendation will be worn by those to whom either of these awards was granted.

Orders are being promulgated by the three Services setting forth the regulations in connection with this Medal, and including also changes in the qualifying period of the Campaign Stars and the Defence Medal.

While the ribbon for the new War Medal is not yet available for issue, it is expected that supplies will be ready for distribution shortly. The ribbon is in red, white and blue. There is a narrow central red stripe with a narrow white stripe on either side. There are broad red stripes at either edge, the two intervening stripes being in blue. The actual medal, however, has not yet been struck and will not be available for some time.

The War Medal will be granted to full time personnel of the Forces, and of the Merchant Navy wherever their service during the war has been rendered. A twenty-eight day period of service, September 2nd 1939, to September 2nd, 1945, inclusive is required. In the Merchant Navy it will be a requirement, that the twenty-eight days should have been served at sea. The classes of civilians eligible are: accredited Canadian War Correspondents, members of the Canadian Red Cross, St. John's Ambulance Society, V. A. D's and the Corps of Canadian Fire Fighters, provided they served overseas as full-time uniformed workers and their qualifying services comply with the regulations. Briefly, the changes in the time qualifications of the Campaign Stars and the Defence Medal are as follows:

(a) Service at Sea: (i) For the France/Germany Star, it will not be a requirement that the 1939-45 Star be first earned; (ii) During the last six months in the Pacific area, up to and including September 2nd, 1945, the Pacific or Burma Stars may be earned without the prior qualifications of six months (or the award of the 1939-45 Star); (iii) Atlantic Star—While twelve months at sea is still required to qualify for the award of this Star, any six of the twelve months served in the Atlantic will be held to qualify.

(b) Service on Land: (i) For the Pacific, Burma, Italy and France/Germany Stars, the qualification is entry into the appropriate theatre of operation in entry into the appropriate theatre of operations on the strength of a unit in that theatre.

(c) Service in the Air: (i) For the Pacific, Burma, Italy and France/Germany Stars, the qualification is one operational sortie over the appropriate theatre of operations while on the strength of a unit operating over the prescribed areas; (ii) For the Atlantic and Aircrew Europe Stars four months operational service is still required, but any two of the four months in the appropriate area will be held to qualify.

1939-45 Star—The six months qualifying period is unchanged, although there have been added territories in the Pacific operational area. Defence Medal—(i) This medal will now be awarded to personnel who have had a total of twelve months service in a non-operational area outside Canada, i.e., Newfoundland, West Indies, U.S.A., etc.; (ii) Personnel who have served overseas in a non-operational area, subject to air attack or closely threatened, will now be awarded this medal for six months of such service.

Officials of the three services requested that the point be stressed to all ex-service personnel that as ribbons and medals are not yet available, although manufacture has been started, there would be a considerable lapse of time before deliveries could be effected. Several million medals will be issued to Canadians and the task of processing applications will be a lengthy one. It is proposed at a later date, when medals become available, to widely publicize the method of making application by those entitled to awards by virtue of their service during the War 1939-45.

Oats for Pasture.

During the past ten years it has been proved at the Division of Forage Plants, Experimental Farms Service, that oats are among the most important species for summer pasture in Eastern Ontario. Because of that fact, a large number of varieties and strains of oats are tested for that purpose every year. The main characteristics considered are early growth, leafiness, recovery after grazing or mowing, and total annual production. The Roxton and Ripon varieties of oats were outstanding in the production of pasture.

Happiness in this world, when it comes, comes incidentally. Make it the object of pursuit, and it leads us a wild-goose chase, and is never attained.—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Barons Defeat Belle River.

Leamington Barons moved into a first-place tie with Tecumseh Indians in the Essex County Baseball League standings, beating Belle River 8-3, on Sunday afternoon, at Belle River. Harrow defeated Tilbury 12-4, at Tilbury, in the league's only other game.

Elmer Scratch tossed 8 1/2 ball for the victors, while his mates were getting 11 bingles off Joe Penner's slants. Scratch fanned 10 to Penner's 6, and walked one to Penner's two.

The game was won as early as the third inning, when the Barons came through for four runs. Suds reached second on a two-base hit by George, and went to third when Penner erred on Unrau's effort. Scratch went out, Penner to Hargreaves, with the runners holding their bases. Suds counted and Unrau went to third as Hargreaves grounded out, George to Hargreaves. Rouch then singled to score Unrau and went to third on Hillier's single. Both counted on Parker's hit.

Harrow Defeats Tilbury.

By beating Tilbury 12 to 4, Harrow clinched third place in the standings as Gordie Wright tossed a three-hitter, striking out 19 and walking one.

Harrow scored four runs in the second inning, on five hits, a fielder's choice and an error. In the third, the victors came through for two more runs. Hits by Sinasac, J. Wright and B. Wright and an error produced the runs.

The winner's outfield did not have a single put-out to make, while Ted Daigneau, at short for Tilbury, and Askin, at third, starred afire.

"In this particular case there is a situation in which it seems clear that one of the parties to the dispute sought to dominate the other, and unfortunately both parties seem to have ignored the interests of the state and of the public."

This was the revealing statement in a report on a strike of Winnipeg printers by W. D. Card, of Portage la Prairie. The report was written by Mr. Card as industrial commissioner in an impartial report to the Dominion Minister of Labour.

Hon. C. D. Howe, Canada's Minister of Reconstruction, also spoke out forcefully and clearly on the events of the last six weeks when he opened a high-level powered radio station at Sudbury, Ontario.

"The problems of postwar reconstruction in Canada are being made as possible by labour disputes."

"The differences between labour and management are far too small to warrant the time lost by the workers."

"It seems to me to be impossible that this senseless strike in Canada's basic industry can last much longer."

What is the answer?

While this column is being written, parliament is discussing the report of its committee on industrial relations which sat for three weeks and heard evidence from all sides. Labour, industry and elected representatives of the general public. One thing emerged clearly from the evidence and the debate: there is no single or simple solution to the problem. Some indication of where we must look for an answer did appear:

1. The interest of the general public (consumer) must be the first and paramount consideration and labour and management must both recognize this. Both ownership and employment must be considered a public trust.

2. That employees must have full and fair opportunities to enter into managerial positions, to have a voice in deciding working conditions, and to know the facts and problems of the business in which they are employed. Many contend that if labour were given, in addition to its wages, a share in the profits it helped to create it would be an effective step in this direction.

Politics and Personalities. Not everyone is interested in the prospects of Walter Tucker, M.P., in his new role as Leader of the Liberal Party in Saskatchewan but all or almost all are interested in a leading article which Saskatchewan's largest daily, the "Regina Leader-Post," runs on Mr. Tucker's family.

On the fourth trip which Mrs. Tucker and family took from Rosthern to Ottawa the Leader Post says, "Traveling on a train for two days and two nights with nine children would be a harrowing and nerve-racking experience to most people; but not to Mrs. Walter Tucker. The answer is that she loves children, the more the merrier." Meals must be prepared for 12 in the Tucker home. "It keeps me busy and I enjoy it," Mrs. Tucker told the Reporter. "You wonder how you are going to get along with nine youngsters but things seem to fit in."

Two base hits—T. Daigneau. Hits off—Paquette, 11 in 7; Benoit, 2 in 2. Struck out—by Paquette 3, by Wright 19. Base on balls—off Paquette 2, off Wright 1. Umpires—Renaud and Mosher.

and everything works out pretty well." Mrs. Tucker laughed as she reeled off the names and ages of her family. They are three girls and six boys, the oldest sixteen, the youngest two.

Careers for Women.

Of interest to young women who are considering the question of a career, is a study of the directory of personnel of the Civil Service in Canada.

There are, of course, thousands of clerks in the service, and these come and go—or remain doing a necessary job. But in this service also are, or have been, women with special training, doing good work along special lines, of whom little is known.

There was recently, for instance, in the department of External Affairs, a young woman lawyer, acting as junior legal adviser.

With the Justice Department is also a young woman lawyer and others are working as solicitors in the Department of National Revenue.

With Mines and Resources, in the Forest Products Division a woman is doing work in Timber Pathology and another in the same department is engaged in fossil research.

With the National Film Board are women editors and research workers. A woman is in charge of rural distribution of films and one of the best producers is a woman.

The Department of National Health and Welfare are most anxious for more qualified social workers, and for graduate nurses.

Perhaps to our surprise we find in the Department of Transport a woman in charge of Marine agencies and other the chief registrar of shipping. In other departments are qualified women statisticians and economists, and a field is open here for those with special training.

What happiness is, the Bible alone shows clearly and certainly, and points out the way that leads to the attainment of it—Coleridge.

The strength and the happiness of a man consists in finding out the way in which God is going, and going in that way too—H. W. Beecher.

When the mortal man blends his thoughts of existence with the spiritual and works out yea God works, he will no longer grope in the dark and cling to earth because he has not tasted heaven.—Mary Baker Eddy.

HOW TO JUDGE CORN'S RIPENESS

Your corn is ripe when: the silk is dry and black, the ear feels plump and firm. To check further, open husk a little, carefully, and observe condition of kernels. The corn borer (see inset) burrows through ears and stalks. The worm may be detected by presence of detached or broken tassels. To eliminate—remove and burn corn stalks at harvest.

Imperial Oil Leases Property

in Maidstone.

Imperial Oil Limited has leased oil and natural gas rights on 1,375½ acres of Maidstone Township from 15 separate owners, a search at the Registry

Office disclosed over the weekend.

Must Drill in Year.

Consideration paid was 50 cents per acre, with the lease running for ten years. Each lease provided that if drilling operations were not commenced within a year, the lease would end unless the company paid a further 50 cents.

It could be extended under these terms year by year.

Gas Provisions.

Royalties of one-eighth of the crude oil will be paid each owner if oil is discovered. The natural gas provisions are more complicated.

Those are, (amounts yearly)

$100 each well producing 500,000 cubic feet daily.

$150 each well producing 500,000 to one million cubic feet daily.

$250 each well producing one million to 2,500,000 cubic feet daily.

$350 each well producing 2,500,000

to five million cubic feet daily.

$500 each well producing over five million cubic feet daily.

These sums will be paid in advance

each year from the time each well is completed. On each year the payment will be made on or before October 20th, based on flow taken during August or September, the lease stated.

Will Pay Damage.

The leases also made provision for payment of damage to crops or to the building of roads to the wells, if they are successful, with $100 per acre to be paid for operations, including well sites, tanks and other installations.

It was said there would be more leases taken up by the company.

Farmers Return from DeKalb

Experimental Fields.

Messrs. Francis Morand, of Tecumseh; Leon L. Emery, of St. Joachim;

Millard Lawhead, of Maidstone; Walter Crabbie, of Cottam; W. J. Calhoun, of Essex, and R. J. Joffe, of DeKalb, Ill., where they had the opportunity to visit the vast corn breeding projects of the DeKalb Agricultural Association. In DeKalb they saw the work of inbreeding and crossing of corn that is nearing completion for the year on the DeKalb experimental fields.

One of the most impressive features

according to them, was the immense amount of detailed work that is carried on in a breeding project of this kind.

Hybrids that are crossed to make new varieties are developed by making hand pollinations. According to the men in charge of this research work, 41,000 of these pollinations were made this season to produce new in-breeds and crosses for next year's research work. Over 7,000 different kinds of corn are on test in an effort to find better varieties. While most of this corn is developed from strains of corn originally grown in the United States, they stated that they saw varieties of corn growing at DeKalb that came from Italy, Czechoslovakia, Japan and Rumania.

Another interesting part of the trip was the tour through the DeKalb Agricultural Association's poultry project, where research men are working to develop improved kinds of chickens by using inbreeding and crossing methods that have been so successful in developing better corn.

Priest Charles Mousseau, of Detroit, will be in charge of this ordinance. The Ordinance of the Blessing of little children will also be a part of the service of this hour (note this is not the baptism of little children).

For "behold I say unto you, that he that supposeth that little children need baptism, is in the gall of bitterness, and in the bonds of iniquity; for he hath neither faith, hope nor charity; therefore, should he be cut off while in the thought, he must go down to hell." "For awful is the wickedness to suppose that God saveth one child because of baptism, and the other must perish because he hath no baptism. Woe be unto him that shall pervert the ways of the Lord after this manner, for they shall perish except they repent." (Excerpt from The Book of Mormon, page 770, par. 15, 16, 17). J. W. Kettlewell, pastor.

C stands for Children. O stands for Old People; M stands for Middle-aged people; E stands for Everybody. A man has deprived himself of the best there is in the world if he has derived himself of the knowledge of the Bible. I would be afraid to go forward, if I did not believe that there lay a foundation of all our schooling and all our thoughts — the incomparable and unimpeachable Word of God.

—Woodrow Wilson. All welcome at the Tabernacle.

Celebrates 91st Birthday.

Mrs. D. B. LaBarre celebrated her 91st birthday on Sunday. Her niece, Mrs. H. J. Rowe, of Detroit; Mrs. Earl Taylor, of Leamington, were dinner guests, along with friends from town.

Mrs. Wm. Wardle, Mrs. S. Damm and Mrs. Roy Ellis, also her granddaughter, Mrs. Newton Chilcott, and husband, Mrs. LaBarre came to Essex in 1879, with her husband and one child.

Matlack-Brown Nuptials.

In a setting of colorful gladoli at Grace United Church, Essex, Rev. Harold Vernon, of Toronto, united in marriage Helen Mary Brown, only daughter of Mrs. Wm. Brown, of Prince Rupert, B.C., and the late Mr. Brown, to George Elmer Matlack, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Matlack, of Essex.

The bride chose a grey crepe afternoon dress, trimmed with silver sequins and wore orchid accessories, with a corsage of tallman roses. The matron of honour, Mrs. Philip Abbott, sister of the bridegroom, wore a coral alpine dress with brown accessories and her corsage was of roses. The best man was Marvin Matlack, and the ushers were Lewis and Delbert, brothers of the groom.

The wedding music was played by Miss Marjorie Allen, and during the signing of the register Miss Amy Affleck sang "I Love You Truly."

Following the ceremony a reception was held for forty guests, at the home of the bridegroom's parents. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and the room was lovely, decorated with pink and white streamers and beautiful gladoli. Mrs. Roy Hillman, Mrs. Philip Wagner, Mrs. G. R. VanEnoo and Mrs. Lewis Matlack assisted in serving.

Mr. and Mrs. Matlack left later for a trip to Niagara Falls and points east. Upon their return they will reside in Essex.

TO FOOT AND LEG SUFFERERS:

In 1943 I was in a very bad condition and was very discouraged. My feet were all out of shape, legs pained, cords were all tightened up, back and hips pained me all the time so bad that I couldn't work. I was advised to go to Mr. Morden, which I did, and this year I have taken full care of one hundred acres without any outside help. He also took care of my wife's foot trouble, and my son's, and I cannot say too much in favour of this method of taking care of foot and leg troubles. If you suffer from poor circulation, foot and leg trouble, go and have a free consultation and I know you will never be sorry.

Cottam Legion Field Day.

The first annual Field Day, sponsored by the Canadian Legion, and held on Thursday of last week, at Ridgeview Park, was attended by a crowd of about 1500 people.

The afternoon started off, as usual, with a drawing match, and a record entry of 12 teams. After three hours of spirited competition, the winner once again turned out to be Mr. LaPorte, of Comber; 2nd, Don Raymond, of North Ridge; 3rd, Charles Armstrong, of Woodville; 4th, Jeff Thompson, of Tilbury. Other contestants were: Art Hamick, of Tilbury; G. Hicks, and Orlin Hicks, of Leamington; Earl Davidson and Wm. Hoeser, of Cottam; Ivan Finner, of Ruscomb; Norm MacIntyre, of Staples; Richard Hillman, of Leamington, and Lloyd Colford, of Rythoswood.

Baseball.

The ball game between the Harrow and Kingsville teams, of the Essex County League, was well played and closely contested, with Harrow scoring the winning run in the 8th inning.

to come out on the front end of a 3 to 2 score. The teams threatened in the first inning to make it a free-scoring contest, but after both hurlers had been nicked for two hits, they settled down and pitched excellent ball, as did their relief hurlers.

The Kingsville club scored in the first on a single by Ruscher, he stole second and then scored on Bechard's single to right, who took second on the throw to the plate; J. Howe walked but Duncan and B. Howe were easy outs; in Harrow's first, Cornwall got credit for a triple on a long liner to left, when the Kingsville left fielder slipped and fell on the dry grass. He scored a moment later when Reeves dropped Sinasac's fly to right, J. Wright followed with a single, but Butler struck out to end the inning, after T. Howe had picked Sinasac off third.

Kingsville scored their second run in the third, on Ruscher's ground rule double to left, an infield out by Bechard, and an error by Hendershot on J. Howe's grounder to third. Kingsville never threatened from the third to the ninth. In the sixth, for Harrow, Butler led off with a walk, stole second and third, as Lonsberry and B. Wright struck out, and then scored on Brush's double; then in the 8th Butler again first man up, got on by singling, he once more stole second, took third when J. Howe threw into centre trying to pick him off second, and then scored as Tom Howe threw out B. Wright, Vance's throw having him beat at the plate, but he slid away and under Howe's tag.

Detroit Man Drowned.

The body of Joseph Montrose, aged 34, of 4153 Commonwealth avenue, Detroit, drowned off Point Pelee Sunday, was washed ashore by heavy waves about 3.30 p.m., an hour after he disappeared.

Mr. Montrose, accompanied by Mrs. Roberta Walker and her son, Harry Rooks, both of Detroit, were spending Sunday at Point Pelee National Park. About 2.30 Sunday afternoon, Mr. Montrose and Rooks went for a swim. Montrose, who was a strong swimmer, swam out some distance and disappeared.

Neither Rooks nor Mrs. Walker thought anything of it at first but they soon became alarmed when they failed to see Mr. Montrose and sought help.

Heavy seas made the launching of a boat impossible and within an hour the body of the drowned man came in to shore. Provincial Constable Ford Thurston was called and he notified Dr. E. K. Lyon, coroner for the Leamington district, who attributed death to drowning. The body was taken to the Smith Funeral Home in Leamington and was later transferred to Detroit.

Paul Deak Dies.

Paul Deak, aged 53 years, passed away at his late farm home, the Hermon Farms farm, R. R. No. 1, Arner, on Thursday of last week, following a brief illness.

Funeral services were held from the J. H. Madill Funeral Chapel, Harrow, on Sunday, in charge of Rev. J. A. Walker, and burial was in Colchester Memorial cemetery.

The Deak family lived in Essex the past few years, purchasing the Ferriss farm late last spring. Surviving are his widow, Magdalene Sipos; three daughters, Mrs. Esther Leclair, Mrs. Lillian Jacob, of Windsor, and Edith at home, and a son George.

Kinsmen Hold Ladies' Night.

The local Kinsmen's Club held their first Ladies' Night, at Sewell's, on Tuesday evening, with a real good turnout. Following a toast to the ladies, by Kinsman Harold Parr, and also a toast to Kinsman Art Hussey and Mrs. Hussey, on their 27th wedding anniversary, the meeting was turned over to D. Davies, of Windsor, who entertained the gathering with many feats of magic and several imitations.

It is the hope of the local club to form, in the near future, a Kinsmen's, the lady's branch, of the Kinsmen.

It has its own value. Unless we can provide for a retiring age very human tendency is to retain office when physical or even mental powers have declined. The Apathy of Citizens to Local Government.

By Major Gordon Rife.
Introduction.

The subject which has been assigned to me "The Apathy of Citizens to Local Government," is one which is deserving of a prominent place in our agenda, and a great deal of thought by all serious-minded citizens. It attains such importance because, unless some method is found to bring the people of this country to a realization and performance of their duty on municipal election day, our whole democratic system of government is in danger of being undermined and chaos will become king. The initial foreshadowing of such a condition is only too apparent at the present time. Unless immediate and constructive steps are taken on can easily envisage the day when such a state of affairs will become an accomplished fact. Surely apathy toward local government is the indicator of and the leading ground for apathy toward all levels of government.

Statistics show that only about 20 to 40 per cent of those entitled to vote in Canadian municipal elections do so. The remainder are apparently content to let this small percentage determine who shall be their municipal governors and control the spending of the taxes which they must all pay. That this is anything but a healthy state of affairs goes without saying. It is a serious condition, and if nothing more were accomplished in these meetings than the discovery of some means which may lead to an improvement in it, the convening of this convention will have been fully justified.

Present General Conditions.

At the outset it is necessary for us to have a full and clear understanding of contemporary conditions. The fact that we live in turbulent times is often pointed out and then glibly passed over, without any true evaluation of conditions. It is beyond the scope of today's subject to give a detailed account of present conditions, but the fact that they must be understood by each and every one of us cannot be overstressed. A thorough recognition and a thorough understanding of the causes underlying the present unrest is necessary before any constructive steps can be taken. Sometimes we in public office lack this historical knowledge and so, unwittingly, mistakes are repeated—an outstanding example of this was the terrific tangle in which the three levels of government became involved during the depression. It is quite obvious that such unwitting mistakes on our part are not conducive to an increased pole on election day, and so we may see that the general apathy toward municipal voting is not entirely one-sided. In all sincerity, gentlemen, I suggest that the responsibility for acquainting ourselves thoroughly with present conditions must rest heavily upon each and everyone of us.

We appear to be living in an age of irresponsibility; everyone seems to be striving to escape responsibility, a phenomena more commonly known as "passing the buck." For example, the parent who seeks to escape his responsibility to his child; the child, in turn, who seeks to evade his responsibility to society; the politician and those in public office who seek to circumvent their responsibility to the public or at best try to get by with a bare minimum performance of their duties. Is it at all unreasonable that this trend toward irresponsibility should be found in the field of municipal relations, that the average citizen seeks to evade the responsibilities of voting on election day?

The reason for this trend toward irresponsibility, the underlying causes, are many and varied, in fact, their name is legion. The fundamental cause, however, is perhaps to be found in the rapid and colossal progress which science has made since the turn of the century. The art of living, including the art of government, has not kept pace with scientific progress. For example, consider the comparatively recent advent of the social sciences in our Universities—sociology, political science, economics, General Eisenhower recently stated in his address to Convocation in Toronto, that unless the art of human relations draws abreast of scientific progress and at least stays level with it, the history that in many places, it is the educated portion of the community which is most lax in carrying out its civic responsibilities.

Practical Suggestions in Conclusion. In conclusion, gentlemen, I would like to make some practical suggestions.

Education.

Following the foregoing line of thought, the first of these suggestions concerns our educational system. At present the young Canadian has to wait until he is of University age before he can begin to learn about the government of his country. It is almost a truism to point out that by far the larger percentage of our population never attends University, and so the average Canadian youth never receives any formal education at all on the important subject of municipal government. He must depend upon what knowledge he can gather in his home and from his friends, and if they should be uninterested or unenlightened upon this subject, the chances are 100 to 1 that he will follow in their footsteps. Perhaps he will turn to the medium of the press, a medium which at no time has ever claimed or attempted to undertake a comprehensive and cohesive programme of education upon this subject. But in this light the question to be answered is not why so few people vote on municipal election day, but, rather, why do so many find their way to the voting booth on election day.

In the U. S. it has long been a policy of the educational authorities to include, in the secondary schools' curriculum, courses of instruction on the constitution and government of the country. That the time is long since past when similar steps should have been initiated in our Canadian educational system is only too obvious. A few years ago a survey of teachers in our public and high schools was taken and it appeared that over 90 per cent had never even seen or read a copy of our Canadian Constitution. The British North America Act. If such a state of affairs is true of those directly responsible for the education of our youth, how much truer it must be of Mr. Average Citizen! Both teacher and citizen alike are the end product of our own educational system. May I be allowed to state a further truism, the only lasting road to progress is the path of education. If that path is blocked or missed the final result is inevitable. Surely, we need no further demonstration of this than the saga of Nazi Germany.

However, the path of education is at the best a slow one, and so I place another suggestion before you. In Australia voting is compulsory. If a citizen fails to cast his vote he is liable to be fined. The serious consideration of some similar system in Canada might well prove beneficial to the country's general well-being. At the very least, it would serve to take up the time lag which would occur between the inclusion of instruction on Government in our secondary schools' curriculum, and the beneficial results which would eventually emanate from such an educational policy.

Advertising and Publicity. As a second main suggestion, I benefit of him and his neighbours, and that he protects himself by safeguarding the public treasury, the golden age will begin to dawn in municipal affairs.

The impact and influence of the individual citizen should be brought to bear not only in the ballot box on election day, but he should also verbally, or by letter, or through the medium of the press, communicate to his elected representatives his views on important questions which arise from time to time. Then we would have the essence of true democracy.

When we consider that the majority of house owners in a city have invested a large part of their savings in their homes, it becomes a matter of amazement that they should be so lacking in interest and foresight in the things that so directly concern them, that on the average not more than one-third of the possible municipal vote is polled, and it is a sad commentary that in many places, it is the educated portion of the community which is most lax in carrying out its civic responsibilities.

That the time is long since past when similar steps should have been initiated in our Canadian educational system is only too obvious. A few years ago a survey of teachers in our public and high schools was taken and it appeared that over 90 per cent had never even seen or read a copy of our Canadian Constitution. The British North America Act. If such a state of affairs is true of those directly responsible for the education of our youth, how much truer it must be of Mr. Average Citizen! Both teacher and citizen alike are the end product of our own educational system. May I be allowed to state a further truism, the only lasting road to progress is the path of education. If that path is blocked or missed the final result is inevitable. Surely, we need no further demonstration of this than the saga of Nazi Germany.

benefit of him and his neighbours, and that he protects himself by safeguarding the public treasury, the golden age will begin to dawn in municipal affairs.

The impact and influence of the individual citizen should be brought to bear not only in the ballot box on election day, but he should also verbally, or by letter, or through the medium of the press, communicate to his elected representatives his views on important questions which arise from time to time. Then we would have the essence of true democracy.

When we consider that the majority of house owners in a city have invested a large part of their savings in their homes, it becomes a matter of amazement that they should be so lacking in interest and foresight in the things that so directly concern them, that on the average not more than one-third of the possible municipal vote is polled, and it is a sad commentary that in many places, it is the educated portion of the community which is most lax in carrying out its civic responsibilities.

Practical Suggestions in Conclusion. In conclusion, gentlemen, I would like to make some practical suggestions.

Education.

Following the foregoing line of thought, the first of these suggestions concerns our educational system. At present the young Canadian has to wait until he is of University age before he can begin to learn about the government of his country. It is almost a truism to point out that by far the larger percentage of our population never attends University, and so the average Canadian youth never receives any formal education at all on the important subject of municipal government. He must depend upon what knowledge he can gather in his home and from his friends, and if they should be uninterested or unenlightened upon this subject, the chances are 100 to 1 that he will follow in their footsteps. Perhaps he will turn to the medium of the press, a medium which at no time has ever claimed or attempted to undertake a comprehensive and cohesive programme of education upon this subject. But in this light the question to be answered is not why so few people vote on municipal election day, but, rather, why do so many find their way to the voting booth on election day.

In the U. S. it has long been a policy of the educational authorities to include, in the secondary schools' curriculum, courses of instruction on the constitution and government of the country. That the time is long since past when similar steps should have been initiated in our Canadian educational system is only too obvious. However, the path of education is at the best a slow one, and so I place another suggestion before you. In Australia voting is compulsory. If a citizen fails to cast his vote he is liable to be fined. The serious consideration of some similar system in Canada might well prove beneficial to the country's general well-being. At the very least, it would serve to take up the time lag which would occur between the inclusion of instruction on Government in our secondary schools' curriculum, and the beneficial results which would eventually emanate from such an educational policy.

Advertising and Publicity. As a second main suggestion, I

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our dear brother, George Bedell, who passed away one year ago, September 4th, 1945.

As long as we live we will cherish his name.

In memory we see him, ever the same; Still in our hearts he is living yet, For we loved him too dearly to ever forget.

—Ever remembered by his brothers, Harry and Ern, and sister Annie.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of P/O W. N. (Bill) Billing, who was missing after air operations over Italy, on August 31st, 1944.

There are many doors that open into Paradise.

But none so lit with glory as the door of sacrifice.

The golden door through which all heroes pass triumphantly

Out into the rich reward of God's Eternity.

Higher no man can aspire, and more no man can give,

To die that others might be saved, to die that they might live.

To him no declining years, no long and weary span,

But going out with honor, like a soldier and a man.

—Sadly missed by his family.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of E. J. Cunning- ham, who left us September 4th, 1941.

He just walked out one morning, Without a word of farewell.

His counsel and advice we all miss so, How much no tongue can tell.

But some day we hope to meet him, When parting and trials are o'er.

On that beautiful Isle of Somewhere, Upon that golden shore.

Clarify Slaughtering Regulations.

Because of a misunderstanding of the slaughtering regulations the regional office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, issues a statement clarifying these regulations which are defined in Board Order 615.

Board officials said that a farmer may slaughter for himself but when doing so he must register with his local ration board and surrender coupons for the meat that he has obtained from the slaughtering.

It was pointed out that if a farmer does not do the slaughtering for himself and wishes to have it done for him he must have it done only by a slaughterer holding a W.P.T.B. permit.

If a farmer has his slaughtering done in this way he must secure a special authorization from his local board of health or from the regional office, before the slaughterer may kill for him. As when he slaughters for himself he must register with the local ration board and surrender ration coupons for the meat.

A farmer cannot sell meat which he has slaughtered for his own use except to a neighbour farmer who purchases for his own use or for the use of his family. The neighbour farmer must submit ration coupons for meat to the farmer from whom he gets the meat. Board officials said.

Ceiling Prices on Oranges.

Canadian ceiling prices have been re-established on oranges, due to the O.P.A. increase in orange prices, according to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The prices are based on the current O. P. A. price plus transportation prices and mark-ups, which are controlled by the Prices Board.

It is expected that there will be no increase in Canadian prices from those prevailing in June since the O.P.A. adjustment will be offset by the saving resulting from the parity of the Canadian and U. S. money.

Mechanization.

Farm mechanization, to be practical, must meet three requirements: 1. Farm machines should be considered an investment; and their initial cost, upkeep and depreciation kept within practical limits.

2. Machines should be purchased with the thought of how many different jobs they can perform.

3. Records should be kept of the costs of doing farm jobs with hand machines, and the costs of doing the same jobs with hand labour.

Certainly the time has come when the farmer no longer should consider man-hours as a gauge to his production, but the amount of power at his command in the form of machinery.

He should also give full consideration to his crop yields as obtained with mechanization, compared with yields obtained through hand labour. Sometimes mechanized farming results in poorer yields (although the reverse may be true). But a slightly lower yield can be tolerated if the costs of farming have been reasonably lowered through mechanization.

New Developments.

The ordinary disc cultivator has been put to a new use in southwestern Ontario with excellent results. It is being employed for cross-blocking sugar beets and numerous tests have shown that the system is entirely practical. It has proven a great time, labour and money saver. Using a different spacing of discs and weeding knives the cultivator is driven across the rows, resulting in evenly-spaced plants. Further, touching-up thinning can be left to inexperienced hands.

Increased Yields.

Similar development in Western United States have reduced man-hours to only 3 per cent of requirements for hand blocking. Fields using machine cross-blocking actually showed a greater yield than those done by hand.

Low-Slung Wagon for Stone Removal.

In cases where land contains relatively small stones, the removal involves considerable hand work. As yet there appears to be nothing better than a stone boat or a slow-slung wagon for the job, states the publication of Land Clearing issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. A stone boat made from wood or a sheet of steel can be loaded easily and will carry about one-half ton of stone. Because the stone boat carries a relatively small load, it is suitable only for hauling short distances. As the length of the haul increases, the advantage of easy loading becomes less important and it is desirable to use a wagon to remove the stone efficiently.

A low-slung, home-built wagon is made from the axles and wheels of an old wagon by suspending two logs 11 feet long below the axles and about 8 inches from the ground. At the front the logs are bolted together and suspended from the centre of the front axle with a chain. At the rear, the logs are spread to the width of the rear axle and supported by two heavy pieces of strap iron which go over the top of the axle and fixed to the logs at either side. Wooden blocks are then fitted between the logs and the rear axle. A plank floor is built on the top of the logs. When loading heavy stones, a stout plank may be used for rolling the stones onto the floor which is only about 14 inches above the ground.

The old practice of building many stone piles in the fields is obsolete because by such a method the stones are merely shifted and the stone problem is not solved. Numerous stone piles and stone fences, other than line fences, restrict the use of labour-saving farm machinery. Almost any farm has a ravine or depression where stones can be deposited and covered with earth, if desired.

Grade 3 Peaches Abolished.

On recommendation of the Ontario and Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers' Associations, provisions for Grade 3 peaches under the Farm Products Grades and Sales Act have been abolished. This was announced at Queen's Park this week by George Wilson, Director of the Fruit Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The new regulation stops all movement of peaches of this grade.

Grade 3 peaches are now recognized as a menace to the sale of quality fruit. Growing conditions have been very favourable this season and a large peach crop of good quality is in prospect. Coupled with this, the new departures in packages and rigid inspection have been instituted, and growers are going to increase consumer confidence in their product, Mr. Wilson stated. In addition to the abolition of 3 peaches, Mr. Wilson also announced a new Domestic Split-Case Peaches of this grade, which will be 1 in size and of domestic origin. It will be marked as "Domestic Split-Case". The purpose of this is to allow the grower to sell good quality, split pit peaches. Wilson explained.

Tecumseh Tops Belle River.

The Belle River-Tecumseh tilt was a wild affair with the Tecs winning on the basis of a three-run uprising in the eighth inning, when the Belle River nine was leading 3 to 2. Hal Jackson bested Joe Penner in a tight mound duel, with neither pitcher walking a single batter.

Tecumseh drew first blood in the scoring columns with a single run in the second inning on two errors but Belle River tied the count when George singled to right. The Tecs moved back into the lead in the last half of the fourth inning on singles by Gerry Cecile and Dom Papineau, a fielder's choice and another error.

In the top half of the seventh inning, Belle River broke through for two runs to take the lead, 3-2. Durocher opened with a single to left and took second when Hargreaves singled to left. Penner's big bat scored both with a line-drive double to right centre. Jackson got George on an infield roller and struck out Parent to end the inning.

The game was enlivened somewhat when Manager Bert Lacasse of the Tecumseh nine was tossed from the game after shoving Umpire Harry Burt around in the seventh inning after Burt had called a play at first base.

People Are Asking?

"If a tenant gives notice to 'quit' the 15th of the month what is the time he must leave?"

The tenant must leave on or before the 15th of the month in which his notice to leave is received.

Always paid $1.75 for a cleaner to spot covers. Last time a different cleaner charged me $3. Is there a price on cleaning?

There is a controlled price on cleaning services. Cleaners are allowed to charge the same price as they were during the basic period September 1 to October 11th 1942.

It does not mean that all cleaners charge the same price. If you want to know the name of the cleaners to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, they could be checked for you.

Why should a person charge for cleaning the room and board for a night, when I supply the laundry necessary first aid?

A cleaner should be charged for similar services. You should charge the same for cleaning your neighbourhood or a similar purpose.

To the River Bed.

Four hundred years ago the waters of the Aral Sea flowed into the Caspian Sea through the Kara-Kum Desert. Then a fertile valley, the River Bed, was shifted, so the sea now empties into the Aral Sea.

One of the year plan of the Soviet Union is to revive the Kara-Kum Desert to its former fertility.

Leamington and Tecumseh Win Play-off Tilts.

The Leamington Barons and Tecumseh Indians, the teams that finished one-two in the Essex County Baseball League during the regular season, started the semi-final playoffs off right Sunday with victories over Harrow and Belle River, respectively. Leamington took the measure of the Harrow crew at Leamington, 2-1, while the Tecumseh gang was stopping Belle River, in Tecumseh, 5-3.

Elmer Scratch, leading pitcher in the Essex County League this year, pitched a five-hitter against Harrow to best both Gordie Wright and Ronnie Reece in the pitching department. Besides allowing five hits, Scratch struck out five and walked only two. Wright gave up eight hits in the six innings which he worked, striking out six and walking none. Reece yielded two more hits in the last two innings, and fanned two.

Harrow scored its only run of the game in the second inning, when Jack Wright doubled to left centre, advanced to third on an infield out, and scored on another infield out.

Leamington scored its two runs in the fifth stanza when after White had batted for Unrau and struck out, third when Heaney hit a Texas League double to short centre. Roach grounded out, Clark to J. Wright, with Scratch scoring and Heaney taking third. Hillier came through with a line single to centre and Heaney scored with the winning run. Parker doubled to left to put Hillier on third but Sudds struck out to end the inning.

The rival shortstops, Heaney and Clark, turned in fine performances, but it was Butler, Harrow centrefielder, who turned in the best play of the game when he ran a good 50 yards to haul down Roach's long fly.

New and Different Desserts.

Looking for something new and different in the way of desserts? Something to pep up that summer menu? You don't have to look very far now that banana flakes are back on the market.

Yes, housewives all across the country are welcoming the return of banana flakes from their wartime duties, back to peacetime use. During the war these tree-ripened, dehydrated bananas served the countries at war in overseas parcels to fighting men in Red Cross shipments to convalescent hospitals. But now that shipping is almost back to normal, large quantities of banana flakes are being shipped monthly to Canadian markets from Brazil.

With their return have come new and exciting recipes like banana muffins, banana cakes, banana jelly, banana cream pie or pudding, banana marshmallow dessert, and other appetizing dishes.

The recipe with perhaps the most summertime appeal is banana ice cream, the favourite of young and old alike. It is not only simple to make, but it is economical, too. Clip out the directions and keep them handy in your kitchen, so that the next time you want something different for dessert, you have an ideal suggestion right at your finger-tips.

BANANA ICE CREAM.

1 cup banana flakes, moistened with 1 cup milk; add 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 1/2 teaspoon salt; add 2 egg yolks, well beaten. Add the above combined ingredients to 1 cup cream, whipped. Beat the whites of 2 eggs until stiff and add 2 tablespoons sugar. Fold into the above mixture and put into refrigerator tray. Set control at cold and stir gently once or twice during freezing. Serves five persons.

Children love the creamy banana richness of this new ice cream, and wise mothers know that with ice cream made from nutritious banana flakes, they can't go wrong. For summertime freshness and taste appeal, banana ice cream tops the list. Try it today.

Gosfield North Council.

Regular meeting of the Council, with all members present.

Minutes of last regular meeting and special meetings of August 20th and 23rd, read.

Charles Garlick brought to the attention of the Council that they had gone further with the survey of the Scott Taylor drain than the original survey, having extended the survey on onto the Award drain, which was noted and corrected.

A petition was presented and signed by the ratepayers of the Talbot Road lots, requesting Council to appoint an engineer to make a survey for a new outlet for the s w pt 271 s 1/4 272 and s e 1/4 273 northerly to the 10th Con. drain.

Moved by the Reeve, seconded by Mr. Dewhurst, that the petition be accepted, and the Engineer, C. B. Allison, be notified to make a survey and report.—Car.

The Reeve stated that the Women's Institute had asked to have some of the top soil from the gravel pit to level up some of the grave lots that were sunken. On motion of Mr. Dewhurst and Mr. Stevenson, this was left with the Reeve.

Moved by Mr. Ash, seconded by Mr. Goodburn, that the Road Superintendent send the Department the account of road expenditures up to date and ask for the interim subsidy.—Car.

According to the 1946 Statutes municipalities are required to pass a by-law to license public halls. Moved by Mr. Goodburn, seconded by Mr. Tully, that the Clerk prepare a by-law to license public halls in the municipality.—Car.

Court of Revision on Bylaw 278 for repair of the outlet of the Centre Branch drain.

On motion his assessment was reduced from $88 to $44. The appeal of Mrs. Howard Ross, as being too high according to the use made of the drain was dismissed.

Moved by Mr. Dewhurst, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, Court of Revision be closed.—Car.

Court of Revision on Drainage Bylaw No. 279, for repair of the McInteer drain, convened. The Clerk reported no appeals.

Butter production again declining.

The dry weather during July severely curtailed butter production and has dispelled the hopes that they were indicated in June that the production might approach that of last year during the summer months, reports C. E. Lackner, Director of the Dairy Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture. Production now appears to have settled back to the decline indicated for the first half of the year, from 10 to 15 percent. With the decline in production, butter prices climbed to the ceiling during the middle of July, something unprecedented for this date since ceiling prices were introduced. Butter grading figures released for June show an improvement in quality of approximately 12 per cent over the same period of 1945.

Recent Developments in Corn Situation.

Introduction.

There has been big news during the last few weeks which, when interpreted, can have a far-reaching influence on the future for the corn growers of Southwestern Ontario. First, there was the passing out of the plea of the O.P.A. in the United States at the end of June in so far as the marketing of corn and most other grains is concerned. Second, but by far the most important, was the announcement of Administrator's Order No. A-2030 of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board from Ottawa which came into force on June 29th, 1946.

Removal of Corn Ceiling in U. S.

In our first bulletin we referred to the fact that on May 13th, 1946, ceiling prices on corn in the United States had been raised from $1.16½ to $1.46½ Chicago basis, with very little corn coming from the farms at the higher price. Following the removal of ceiling prices at the end of June the price of corn advanced 80 cents per bushel within a few days to $2.25 per bushel at Chicago. A period of uncertainty then developed until a definite decision was made as to whether or not corn would be included in the rejuvenated O.P.A. Now that it has been definitely decided to leave all grains, with the exception of soy beans, free of control, the price of corn has steadied at around $1.95 per bushel at Chicago.

The above applies to the balance of the 1945 crop which remains to be marketed. The latest estimate of the 1946 crop predicts a record for the United States at 3,442,000 bushels based on conditions on August 15th. As a result of such a huge crop in prospect new crop futures in the Chicago market have been running at about $1.35 per bushel.

Special Re Argentine Corn.

On August 21st the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced that shipments totalling 50,000 tons (2,000,000 bushels) of Argentine corn are on their way from Argentina to Canada to fill the needs of corn industries until the new crop of Ontario corn is available.

More and More Subsidies.

After allowing for the increase of fifty cents per bushel in the base price of imported corn (compensated by the higher ceiling prices of corn products covered by Trade Release No. T-741, referred to in our first bulletin) it is probable that subsidies of around 50 cents per bushel will still be paid on this Argentine corn now enroute. That will mean another million dollars of Canadian taxpayers' money to be paid out in the form of subsidies to corn producers in Argentina. Draw your own conclusions Mr. Farmer, but we think it is about time that the whole corn picture in Canada be given a thorough but quick survey and plans should be mapped out with the interests of Canadian corn producers being given from place consideration.

As a first approach to the subject it is necessary to have in mind the structure of the corn economy in Canada during recent years. From statistics taken from several issues of "Canadian Coarse Grains" published quarterly by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics the commercial utilization of corn in Canada in the years 1942 and 1943, the high and low, inclusive, has been as follows:

	Bushels	1942	1943
Starch and glucose	5,011,177	4,830,250
Milling and feeds	1,267,178	2,340,415
Distilleries	1,700,817	232,745
Breakfast Foods	681,935	755,915
Others	59,884	61,295
Total	11,720,991	8,270,620

A second step shows the relative proportions of Canadian corn and imported corn in supplying the above trade to be as follows:

	Bushels	1942	1943
Canadian	8,310,465	$4,056,650
Imported	3,410,526	4,213,970
Total	11,720,991	8,270,620

By percentages over the year period 1942-1943, inclusive, Canadian corn accounted for 70 per cent of the amount used by industries and over the four year period 1941 to 1944, inclusive Canadian corn accounted for 66 per cent of the amount, the decline in 1944 being the result of a short crop in Ontario in 1943.

TO FOOT AND LEG SUFFERERS:

In 1943 I was in a very bad condition and was very discouraged. My feet were all out of shape, legs pained, cords were all tightened up, back and hips pained me all the time so bad that I couldn't work. I was advised to go to Mr. Morden, which I did, and this year I have taken full care of one hundred acres without any outside help. He also took care of my wife's foot trouble, and my son's, and I cannot say too much in favour of this method of taking care of foot and leg troubles. If you suffer from poor circulation, foot and leg trouble, go and have a free consultation and I know you will never be sorry.

the profits of management. There is any wage agreement that is simply out of line with the earnings of the vast group of unorganized workers, bound to end nowhere. The monetary prosperity of one group, forces prices upwards until they beyond the reach of all other groups, will also result in killing the golden egg.

The principle of equal pay for equal work, one of the tenets of organized labor, is applied to all labor, then will be well, for then these unorganized groups that represent about four-fifths of the total workers in Canada will be able to consume the surplus of goods beyond its own needs that organized labor can produce. But if we permit a sharp disparity to arise between the two groups so that the unorganized worker cannot purchase the high-priced goods that high-priced labor can provide then there will be jobs to pay these wages.

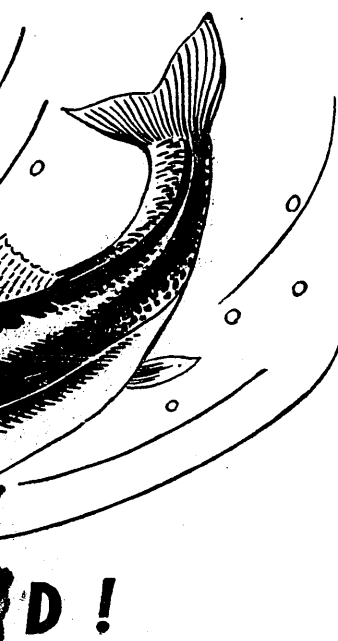

For their own protection then, Cap-Management and Organized Labor, any agreement, must have a clause that the average man's dollar will not lose its relative parity with wages that organized labor is demanding or the profit margins that management seeks. The little man calls the tune in watching—Lib-ty Magazine.

There is nothing more to be esteemed than a manly firmness and decision of character.—Hazlitt.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1946.

A Taxpayer Looks at Local Government.

By Thomas C. Boushall.

You recall how Mark Antony stood at Caesar's bier and said, "I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him." I have not come here to praise municipal government, nor indeed have I come here to bury it. In fact, I am no Mark Antony either. Mark Antony did refer to Caesar as an ambitious man, and I have no doubt that every municipal government is ambitious in more or less degree on many and varying counts.

As I view municipal government, it is the organized form in which a community of a few hundred million people band together to do things jointly that can not be done economically or done at all by the individuals who live in the determined area that makes up a village or a metropolis.

In its true sense there certainly should be no relationship between national or state or county politics and municipal operation. A city or town is purely the business end of providing streets of ingress and egress to the people in their homes and places of work, worship, or pleasure; of providing water supply and sewerage disposal; fire and police protection; health measures, and education for youth and adult.

There is no question of import duties for protection or for revenue that once was the division in the national parties. There is no question of central government and state rights that again divided us. Most cities are agreed that anyone 21 years of age and older can, if he will follow the rule of registration, vote on how the city government shall be conducted and by whom.

Occasionally we run into an issue of the city's owning and operating the water supply system, gas or electric power. But no one seems to feel that such decisions hold success or failure for the human race. Rather, does the operation of this or that public utility seem a proper thing for the people to do together or shall it be left to a private company under a strict agreement and monopolistic franchise?

Shall we have cheap water or light or gas and higher taxes, or lower taxes and pay what the water or gas or light really costs? Well, those are not issues of such importance as to split communities into political factions for long periods of time, even if had by any other business in the community, or anywhere else for that matter.

And here I come to the crux of what I want to say to you gentlemen of the Municipal Finance Officers' Association.

The government and conduct of the affairs of an incorporated village, town, or city, are the private property of no individual or group or party. It is a trusteeship derived from the people. It is not a license to steal the cities' accumulated tax money, or to sell one's power of purchase or employment, or to let contracts for private payment to the officer or officers in power. It is a trust by which the people expect to get the most benefit at the least cost.

Nor is it a club into which one may invite all his friends, nor a family performed and which we can not perform for ourselves nor turn over in most cases to a private firm to do for us.

For example, there are the indigent that develop from any grouping of people, the physically and mentally ill, the incompetent, and the drunkards, with consequent widows and orphans. They are indeed a community problem and one we share among ourselves with the state, and now with the Federal government. We can not call on a private firm to render the service of seeing to the needs of these people. But we all agree that their minimum needs must be met, and by our city governments as a beginning.

It shall not go through the category of all services rendered by the city. I use this one merely to illustrate my point. We want the unfortunate looked after as best they may be cared for without an unreasonable charge on the community and in turn on the individual taxpayer.

The next point is that we incorporate villages, towns, and cities. In fact, New York City sells corporate stock when it puts out what the rest of us perhaps improperly call bonds. It's a nice point and could be enlarged into a whole speech in itself.

But my point is that we create an artificial body (a corporation) through which we may manage our joint affairs of living together in a community of health, comfort, and prosperity. We set the rules by which all must be governed, and hire police, establish courts, and appoint judges to see to it that we all live up to the rules and pay our proportionate part of the cost of the program.

Organization.

Then we must choose officers to execute our wills through a group of employees. To determine how far these officers shall go in various programs of service, we elect a board of directors—whether a council, or aldermen, or by whatever name the delegated body may be called. It is in effect a board of directors of the corporation. It certainly should never in any sense be thought of as a political body if we use that term in respect to a state legislature or our Federal Congress.

That's the way I, as a taxpayer, look at my city government.

Now what do I expect of that program?

(1) Efficient and business-like dispatch of all essential services.

(2) The execution of these services at top quality and rock-bottom cost.

(3) The payment of salaries to executive officers and personnel of all divisions and departments that will bring to these jobs as able a staff as can be had by any other business in the community, or anywhere else for that matter.

And here I come to the crux of what I want to say to you gentlemen of the Municipal Finance Officers' Association.

The government and conduct of the affairs of an incorporated village, town, or city, are the private property of no individual or group or party. It is a trusteeship derived from the people. It is not a license to steal the cities' accumulated tax money, or to sell one's power of purchase or employment, or to let contracts for private payment to the officer or officers in power. It is a trust by which the people expect to get the most benefit at the least cost.

Nor is it a club into which one may invite all his friends, nor a family affair where one's relatives may find easy jobs and good pay with little or no work attached.

Imagine a railroad with the president getting a handsome endowment because he bought Jones' locomotives. Instead of Schermerhorn's. Imagine a chemical company's treasurer filling up his office with uncles, aunts, nieces, nephews, and sons. Can you think I'd long survive as president of my bank if I rode around in automobiles that the borrowers gave me, lived in a house that a corporation presented me because I bought their second-class bonds? What should I do if I found the cashier's and the comptroller's departments all filled up with incompetent relatives?

The answer is simple. The board of directors would fire us all and put honest competent people in our places. We in a bank are trustees of the people's money that they have accumulated out of their earnings. They expect to find it unimpaired when they come to get it to make use of it. Our time depositors expect 100 cents on the dollar, plus added interest.

Isn't that what we, as taxpayers, must and have a right to expect of our municipal, our corporate governments?

Some of you may think I sound pretty naïve and unsophisticated in talking of trusteeship and sweetness and light in running a city government which is vested in and out of office by the conglomerate people who make up a city here in our melting pot, America.

Well, I would be if I expected to get all this for nothing. I do not; and here I want to record my feelings as a taxpayer on the subject of municipal government.

Municipal Salaries.

I believe that we have made a great error in America by assuming that the honor of office would attract only our best and ablest citizens to the jobs. We have let men feel that they could take the jobs and find other ways than through salaries to get their compensation—what you might call a good old American custom of long standing and accepted practice.

I should like to see that era ended. I should like to see municipal government changed over to corporate practices and procedure. I should like to see the people elect a small board of directors of the ablest men, of the highest quality in the community, at no compensation. These men would accept this office and find their compensation in the honor of the office and the compliment of the trusteeship entrusted to them. They should be selected by reason of their established integrity and proved capacity. And they should be the only people chosen in a municipal election.

This body should then appoint a mayor or a manager, no matter the title, but the executive and administrative officer of the corporation. He should select his vice-presidents or department heads and have them approved by the board of directors.

Now these men should be selected for their proved competence, no matter where they come from in respect to their native city, state, or nation. They should be paid in keeping with the responsibilities they assume. If that be more than the President of the United States or equal to a Hollywood actor's salary, all well and good; for he will be cheap at the price. What if the mayor or city manager is paid more than the governor or a cabinet officer or a judge on the Supreme Court?

We in a corporation are seeking ability to administer huge sums of money on an honest, efficient, and effective basis.

Many of our cities are far bigger and more important corporations than most of our private corporations. Why shouldn't their officials be paid for competence, honesty, and efficiency?

Nor will well-paid, able men be subject to bribery and guilty of graft; nor will they hire relatives and friends to bog down their departments.

A taxpayer would like to see a new concept of municipal government, of putting the job of running it on a parity with other equal-sized corporations, with those paid in private business; with responsibility and responsiveness, efficiency and capacity, and results equally demanded; with turnover reduced to the lowest possible point commensurate with demonstrated capacity and efficiency from the top executive to the last elevator operator and messenger clerk on the municipal payroll.

A Career Service.

I should like to see municipal governmental and corporate activity as much a long-time career as that of any profession or business, with the same demand for efficiency, the same rewards for effectiveness, and the same penalties for incompetence and failure.

I guarantee to you gentlemen, and to the American people who live in incorporated towns and cities, that efficiency in city administration would rise in great measure and costs would fall in great degree, respite a very sizeable step-up in payroll.

A special point that I want to make is this: City governments are agencies of the people. You spend their money for their good and collect taxes with which to meet the costs.

Every large corporation has a public relations officer whose duty it is to tell the public what is going on, so that they not only understand it but like it as well. All too seldom reporters tell the story of some city undertaking in factual form, with the accompanying background, purposes, and goals. Surely the citizens and the municipal officers would be brought into closer contact, with a far better appreciation of the city's problems and solutions. A final point that a citizen looking at his city government would like to make is this:

When unemployment was rife, and we had succeeding crises, it was imperative that work be undertaken to give jobs and stabilize the economy. The Federal government offered grants to cities, counties, states, and other local units if they would undertake projects that created jobs. But today, in a world overburdened with orders and under-supplied with workers and materials, there is no occasion to repeat the grants of Federal aid to cities, counties and states.

If in our today's prosperity city governments have to be bolstered up with Federal funds, we have indeed lost first our perspective; second, our local self-respect; and third, we have surrendered our local sovereignty, with the consequent lack of local authority, independence, and power that an intelligent, honest people should possess. I, as a citizen, do not believe there is a scintilla of excuse for a local city government to seek or accept Federal funds for city purposes such as building streets, sewers, parks, or office or utility buildings.

As president of my bank, I might as well go to the Federal Reserve Board and ask that they grant me the money to buy a set of new buildings or to equip my establishment with new furniture and fixtures.

As a taxpayer, in summary, gentlemen, looking at the problem of municipal government, I want to see a modern corporate entity entirely removed from any political connection or association. I want to see these corporations put on a parity with private business; their conduct simplified to the nth degree; the board of directors paid no salaries, but chosen for integrity and accomplishment in their several fields; administrative staffs suited to the degree of ability called for to fulfill their tasks and paid salaries that would attract the ablest men.

Your positions would be enhanced in competition in dignity, in permanence, and in professional rank. I trust that the day may come when municipal government is a forgotten phrase but municipal administration is a profession of the highest calling.

Perhaps if we can achieve this ideal we could one day move on to a conversion of this kind in county government—in time to state administration—leaving in the dim future the rallying of our Federal administration to the ranks of high efficiency, high integrity, and high trusteeship that would assure to Americans the fullness of their lives in keeping with their desires.

I say to you gentlemen, in all earnestness, and in all sincerity, our democracy is in peril indeed if it is but an instrument by which the many may be exploited for the benefit of and by the few, whether that be at the level of a village, or a town, a metropolis, a state or a national government. And I say to you, in all faith in our American people, and their innate fairness and their common sense, that when our democracy is perverted by the able few for the benefit of the many less able, we shall rise above and beyond all nations and all people and be a guiding lamp to their stumbling feet.

May God speed the day when we may see the first steps of a fulfilling democracy inaugurated in our municipal administrations.

Royal Winter Fair to Reopen November 12th.

What may be regarded as one of the really red letter days in the year in the realm of Canadian agriculture will be November 12th. That is the date of the reopening in Toronto of the Royal Winter Fair, the leading Canadian Agricultural Fair.

It closed its doors following the 1935 fair as a result of the war, and since then until after the end of the war the buildings and grounds where the fair was held were a training centre for the armed forces.

From November 12th to 20th next, the Royal will be the mecca for livestock breeders, producers of field crops, fruits, flowers, vegetables either as competitive exhibitors or as interested visitors, with many thousands of persons from all walks of life not only from all parts of Canada, but from several other countries. The Royal is to Canada what the International Live Stock Exposition and Grain and Hay Show is to the United States. It is equally as international as the great exposition that has been held annually at Chicago since 1900, with the exception of the years 1942-45 inclusive. And this year the International is to be reopened at Chicago on November 30th and will continue until December 7th. Those who may be going to the 1946 International will miss the man who for 40 years was its Secretary-Manager B. H. Herde, best known as Barney Herde. He died recently and his successor, for the time being, is William E. Ogilvie, a son of the late Robert B. Ogilvie, who was well known to thousands of Canadian farmers.

The reopening of these two great agricultural fairs means prospects of greater progress for agriculture not only in both Canada and the United States, but to several other countries, too, for their influence and advantages extend over a considerable part of the world.

God reigns, and will "turn and overturn" until right is found supreme.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Accommodation still on the "Frozen" List.

Tenants of housing accommodation are still "frozen" according to W. Harold McPhillips, prices and supply representative of the Western Ontario region of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Tenants cannot be evicted for any reason if they pay their rent promptly and are in the generally accepted term "well behaved."

Misunderstanding regarding these regulations has arisen because of the slight change in the regulations respecting shared accommodation. Mr. McPhillips explained. Formerly a tenant could not be asked to vacate shared accommodation during the winter months, but now, under Board order 649 tenants of shared accommodation can be asked to vacate by the landlord giving six months' notice which may require the tenant to vacate at any time during the year.

Shared accommodation is accommodation where rooms are a part of the house of the landlord or the landlord's agent, and where a kitchen, bathroom or a similar type of facility is shared with the landlord. This is the only type of accommodation where tenants may be asked to vacate during the winter months.

No man for any considerable period can wear one face to himself and another to the multitude, without finally getting bewildered as to which may be true.—Hawthorne.

"...one of the least of these my brethren..."

Reconstructing lives is the Salvation Army's job—and yours

We cannot suffer little ones, born of their birthright by folly or neglect, to face a hopeless future. Canada needs all her citizens. Reconstruction of human lives is a "reconstruction" job.

Remember Him who said, "I have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Wherever there is an unfortunate child, an unwed mother, a prisoner anxious to be released, a wayward youth, a man or woman whose life has cast aside... there YOU can help in building a better Canada.

After war, the need for reconstruction in The Army's work on the Home Front is pressing. Give generously.

Lewis B. Williams Laid to Rest

The funeral of Lewis B. Williams, aged 77, who died suddenly on Thursday, September 5th, was held from his home on Talbot road, on Saturday, to Cottam United Church, at 2:30 p.m. Rev. Stanley R. Johnston, who officiated, was assisted by Rev. Harold R. Parr, of Essex United Church.

Mrs. Alvin Thorpe sang "One Sweetly by solemn thought," accompanied by Mrs. Edmund Pettapiece.

Speaking on the text, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth; yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them," Mr. Johnston said the church owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Williams for his long years of self-sacrificing service in the choir, as leader for many years; in the Sunday school, where he taught till the very last; in the community, where he brought messages of consolation and hope at so many funerals; church — he was a member of the Presbytery and in 1942 served as Commissioner at the General Council in Belleville. He never grew old, although advanced in years and his passing is a challenge to the younger men and boys, to take up the tasks he has laid down.

Mrs. Harry Newman presided at the organ.

The pallbearers were Clarence Higgins, Russell Higgins, Norman Dunn, J. Scott Foster, Byron Hunter and George Stockwell.

The members of the official board of the Cottam and Albion churches formed a guard of honour. Burial was in the family plot in Cottam cemetery.

Mr. Williams is survived by his wife, Isabella, his sister, Miss Cinda Williams; his brother, Edmund J., of Edmonton, Alta., and two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Plant, of Essex and Mrs. Frederick Gordy, of Cottam; also eight grandchildren.

Dr. Snider is Stricken.

Dr. Douglas Irvine Snider, well-known physician and coroner of Kingsville, died suddenly of a heart attack on Monday. He was 46 years old.

Dr. Snider was the son of Fred Snider, member of the Windsor Board of Education, and the late Mrs. Maud Snider. He was born at Smithfield, Ontario, where he received his primary education, attending high school in Windsor and graduating from the faculty of medicine, University of Toronto, in 1923. He practiced in Harrow for four years before taking over the professional services of Dr. J. P. Lee, in Kingsville.

In July, 1941, Dr. Snider was appointed temporary medical officer of health and became permanent M.O.H. in March of this year. He was a member of the Kingsville Lion's Club, ex-officio member of the Victorian Order of Nurses board, and member of the Essex County Medical Society and board of the new hospital in Leamington.

Surviving besides his father, are his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Pelton Snider; three sisters, Mrs. Andrew (Jean) Leishman, Windsor; Mrs. Douglas (Erma) Remington, of Preston; and Mrs. William (Bessie) Robinson, of Simcoe.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon, in Epworth United Church, Kingsville, in charge of Rev. J. T. Flemming. Burial will be today (Thursday) in Smithfield cemetery.

Gosfield North Public School Area.

All members of the Board, together with Robert A. Pierce, Inspector of public schools for Essex County, and J. C. McMullen, assistant Inspector, visited all schools in the area on Thursday, the 5th inst., and expressed themselves as very favourably impressed with the general appearance of all the properties. The redecorating and painting and sealing of floors in all schools was completed during the summer vacation, and teachers and pupils now enjoy clean and bright surroundings.

Regular monthly meeting of the Board, held at S. S. No. 8, North Ridge, on Thursday evening, with all members present, and J. C. McMullen, assistant Inspector, in attendance.

A letter was read from Thomas Wharf, secretary-treasurer of Public School Area No. 1, Township of Rochester, relative to children of four families attending S. S. No. 15, Rochester, who are non-resident pupils and properly belong to the North Gosfield School Area. Motion by Andrew Bridgen, seconded by Charles Jackson, that the secretary advise Mr. Wharf that the Board, after careful consideration and reviewing all the facts supplied from the Inspector's office, feel that the Rochester School Area must look to the parents of the children in question for reimbursement of any educational expense, or refer the parents to the North Gosfield Board for consultation.

Letter from George R. Brett, barrister, with reference to titles to the various school sections in the area, was demanded by the Department of Education. All titles appear in order, with exception, and the chairman, J. C. Montgomery, Harley Graves and the secretary were named a committee to interview the owner of the property in question.

Moved by Charles Jackson, seconded by Andrew Bridgen, that the action of the secretary-treasurer in hiring Wm. H. Lippert, of Essex, as handy man at 65c an hour and mileage, be adopted.

R. S. Bennett's offer to wire and install lighting facilities at S. S. No. 18 at a maximum cost of $280 was accepted.

The secretary was instructed to write all teachers requesting their co-operation in having pupils keep the schools clean and tidy, and it was agreed that the Board will offer for annual competition a trophy to be awarded for the best kept school in the area, and also other prizes in order of merit. Inspector R. A. Pierce and Assistant Inspector J. C. McMullen were named as judges.

On motion of Fred Totten, seconded by Andrew Bridgen, a vote of confidence and thanks to the secretary-treasurer, William H. White, was unanimously passed, for the efforts put forth and the splendid clean-up of all the school properties during the first six months of the existence of the Township school area. A hope was expressed that many of the parents of pupils will avail themselves of the opportunity to visit the schools and see for themselves the surroundings in which their children receive their education.

TO ETERNITY or Just Across the Street

Crossing the street? There's nothing to it. You do it a dozen times a day. Yet, 6,600 people were killed last year — just crossing the street. We can all make crossing the street something that's normal and safe. Drivers can drive a little slower, watch the lights, observe common courtesy. Pedestrians can look both ways. "Go with the lights," never jay-walk.

For safety on streets and highways — for safety in insurance, look to Lumbermen's. Lumbermen's unique Broadform "package" (including special personal accident policy) not only protects you against liability to others, but gives you needed security against loss if you are injured in an automobile accident. Ask us for the facts.

Armstrong-Carnes Wedding.

Essex United Church was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding, recently, when the Rev. R. H. Parr united in marriage Joy Lorraine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Armstrong, and William Harvey Carnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Brock Carnes.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length white crepe dress, with lace insets, a floor-length veil and carried a bouquet of red and white roses, with white streamers knotted with buds.

Mrs. Neil Dunlop, sister of the bride, as matron of honour, chose a blue taffeta gown and carried yellow roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Dorothy McKenzie, who wore a peach net over satin dress and carried red roses, both wearing shoulder length veils. Dorothy Armstrong, young sister of the bride, as flower girl, wore pale green taffeta with a shoulder length veil and carried a basket of white baby mums.

Gordon Carnes, of Toronto, assisted the groom as best man, and the ushers were Dick Little, of Maldstone, and Graham Armstrong.

Miss Marjorie Allen presided at the organ and Miss Marian Underwood, of St. Thomas, sang "I'll Walk Beside You" and "I Love You Truly."

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's table, centred with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom, and flanked with tall white candles. Four cousins of the bride assisted in serving. Misses Beth Cox, Katherine and Lois Cox, of Detroit, and Evelyn Myles, of Windsor.

Mrs. Armstrong chose for the occasion a flowered Jersey dress with brown accessories, and a corsage of white roses. Mrs. Carnes, mother of the groom, wore a navy suit with blue accessories, and chose red roses.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Carnes left by plane for Cleveland, the bride travelling in a brown gabardine suit, with brown accessories, and wore a corsage of red and white roses. On their return they will reside in St. Thomas.

Out-of-town guests were from Toronto, St. Thomas and Detroit.

Public School Field Day.

Dresser-Birch Nuptials.

At Calvary United Church, Windsor, on Wednesday, September 4th, Rev. Mr. Howes united in marriage John Dresser, of Cottam, and Miss Evelyn Birch, of Windsor.

A miscellaneous shower was held on Saturday evening for Mr. and Mrs. John Dresser, at the home of the bride's mother, on Pierre avenue, in Windsor.

Gesto Church Celebrates.

The Diamond Jubilee of Gesto United Church, held over last week-end, was one of the best attended even-ings of the church history. Th services on Sunday, at which Rev. Enos Hart, of Toronto, a former Gesto boy, was guest preacher, were services long to be remembered, while the hot chicken supper, served by the ladies, on Monday evening, was attended by over people.

Soloists on Sunday were Miss Mary Lewis, of Kingsville, in the morning, and Clarence Eatten, of Detroit, and Murray Kennedy, of Essex, in the evening.

One of the features of the Jubilee was the presence of Mr. and Mrs. George Hight, the only two present church members who have been connected with the church continuously since it was built in 1886; also the reading of several letters from old residents at a distance.

Due to holidaying last week a history of the church has been crowded out this issue, will appear next week.

Bridgen-Clark Wedding.

On Thursday afternoon, September 12th, at 2 o'clock, in the United Church, Union, Ont., Rev. J. Barnard united in marriage Merrill Elwyn Bridgen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bridgen, of Gosfield North, and Miss Catherine Delora Clark, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Clark, of St. Thomas.

The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with pink and white gladioli.

The bride was lovely in white silk crepe, with eyelid embroidery, and a shoulder length veil of white silk net covered with tiny white bows and fastened to her hair with a larger bow. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

The matron of honour, her sister, Dorothy, chose a dress of yellow silk mesh, with net, a shoulder length veil and she carried a bouquet of orchid gladioli, while the bridesmaid, Miss Mary Hepburn, wore blue net over taffeta, with matching veil and carried peach gladioli.

Each Bridgen, brother of the groom, was best man, and Lawrence Bridgen and Graydon Baines, of Toronto, were the ushers.

During the signing of the register Mrs. Arthur Clark, of Port Stanley, sister-in-law of the bride, sang "At Dawning" and "Through the Years," accompanied by Mrs. Johnston at the piano.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Clark chose a dress of black crepe, with black sequins and black accessories, while Mrs. Bridgen was dressed in black and white. Both wore corsages of red roses.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served in the church parlours to about fifty relatives and close friends. The parlours were decorated in pink and white, with lovely baskets of pink and white glads. A large three-tiered wedding cake centred the bride's table.

In the evening a reception was held in their honour, at the home of the bride's parents, when they received many lovely gifts.

Following a wedding trip east, the young couple have taken up residence in St. Thomas.

Miller-Bridgen Nuptials.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bridgen, in Amherstburg, on Monday, September 9th, was the scene of a lovely wedding, when their daughter, Margaret, was united in marriage to Hugh Miller, son of Mrs. Minnie Miller, of Gesto, and the late Mr. Miller.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. K. Ross, Thompson, of Amherstburg.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a dress of heavy white satin, with double net skirt, a finger tip veil, held in place by a band of flowers and she carried a bouquet of red roses. As bridesmaid, her sister, Lily Mae, wore white sheer, with silver sequins and matching veil, held in place by a band of tiny ostrich plumes and she carried a bouquet of pink roses. Murray Gee, of Colchester North, was best man.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Bridgen chose a lovely 2-piece dress of silk crepe, while Mrs. Miller was dressed in navy and white. Both wore corsages of red roses.

After the ceremony a dinner was served to about thirty-five immediate relatives and close friends, the table being decorated in white, with pink and white tapers, in silver holders at each side of a three-tiered wedding cake.

Later in the evening a reception was held in their honour. They are residing on Bathurst street, in Amherstburg.

Two Windsor Men Killed.

Two young Windsor men were instantly killed, shortly before 10 o'clock on Friday evening, last, when their car went out of control after taking the Taylor Curve, above town, and crashed broadside into a large elm tree in front of the Earl Levi property.

The victims were Robert Garnier, aged 21, of 1491 Hall avenue, Windsor, owner and driver of the car, a 1946 Monarch, and Robert Brumpton, aged 23, of 1438 Bruce avenue, Windsor.

The young men were on their way to Leamington, and evidently driving at extremely high speed, as it appears the car had made the curve but before Garnier could straighten it out he had struck the soft shoulder on the inside of the road. The machine then went completely out of control for it skidded sideways until striking and wrapping around the large tree, which is fully three hundred feet down the road from the curve.

For some unapparent reason this curve is extremely dangerous as cars, mostly eastbound, are continually leaving the pavement and going into the ditch. It wouldn't cost the Department very much to straighten the highway at this point and it should be done, more especially now that the road has been resurfaced and cars are naturally travelling over it at a higher rate of speed. Before winter is over there will no doubt be many more accidents there, some possibly fatal.

The Conflict With Costs.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.
It is rather strange that our Industrial Relations Committee and organized labor in the United States, starting with somewhat different points of view have arrived at approximately the same conclusions.

The findings of the committee were to the effect that higher wages and higher prices are inextricably associated. It is also found that the whole structure of price control hinged on labor's actions. If this committee has implied that labor has been ill informed and not too wisely led, it is scarcely more than American labor leaders have themselves implied.

In the United States this process of soul-searching has been given an impetus by the sudden withdrawal of OPA regulations. The familiar law of supply and demand has had an opportunity to take hold again. The way prices followed wage increases upward pointed sharply an unpleasant lesson.

Labor saw wage gains disappearing almost before they were fully achieved. It was faced with a new decision: either new wage demands, such as had already sent prices skyrocketing, or the more thoughtful course of making the best of what it had and devoting its energies to fighting these upward price curves, so that its gains might remain of value.

It was not management or even industrial relations committees that stressed this choice most pointedly. It was labor itself, in the person of Kermit Eby, director of C. I. O. education and research. He made the case to labor itself through the official organ of the C. I. O. Mr. Eby said, with unaccustomed frankness, industrial trends are "more swift and effective" — as a wage cutting device — "than any machinery we have yet discovered for raising wages."

In other words, labor leaders in the United States are realizing and publicly stating just what Canada's Industrial Relations Committee has said — that inflation can offset most effectively an apparent wage gain so that the net result is loss both to the public and to organized labor itself.

Again we quote from Mr. Eby's article, "Success in forcing prices down," he says, cannot possibly break the wage scale in existing contracts. What we gain will be a real gain. It is not so sure however, that widespread wage increases can be won at this time. If won they are likely to be promptly reflected in further price rises. Any stimulus to higher prices will be eagerly seized upon and multiplied by the speculative operators who now occupy the driver's seat. This is one of the facts of inflation that labor should reckon with in its fight to protect its standards of living."

Along with this is the recent address of Walter Reuther, stormy petrel of the automotive unions, urging a policy of greater production.

If labor thinks so, it is thinking in its own interest and in the interest of the public as a whole. For this thinking is based upon the unassailable. There is no sound way to higher wages and more generous life for all that does not involve the co-operation of capital, labor, and management. To provide new employment, capital must be interested in wider and more competent undertakings. Management must look for new technical skills and more economic methods. Labor must use these advantages to increase production. This is the only road to higher wages that is not blocked by the specter of rising costs—Liberty Magazine.

PEOPLE ARE ASKING?

Q.—I am a diabetic and require more butter. How shall I obtain an addition to my regular ration?

A.—Obtain a statement from your doctor outlining the exact amount of butter and diabetic fruit you require, then forward this and your number six ration book to the nearest branch office of the Ration Administration which in your case is in Kitchener.

Q.—Would you please tell me the ceiling price of potatoes?

A.—The ceiling price varies in different sections because of freight charge allowances. In your district, the St. Thomas area, the ceiling during September and October is $2.18 for a 75 pounds bag, 50 cents a peck and 33 cents for 10 pounds. These figures are for Canada number one grade.

Q.—If I buy turkeys for a raffle do I pay the wholesale or retail ceiling price?

A.—Any sales of more than two turkeys are considered wholesale transactions and wholesale prices are the ceiling. However, we would remind you that under present provincial permission must be obtained to deal turkey raffles. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has no jurisdiction over these raffles and does not issue permits. You should consult your local police.

Q.—Has the former ruling that an owner of a house could give a six months notice to a tenant to vacate if the owner wishes to live in the house again come into force. We have heard several times it has, but have not seen any story in the newspaper.

A.—There seems to be considerable confusion regarding this regulation. An owner may not give a well-behaved tenant six months notice to vacate if the owner wishes to secure permission for himself.

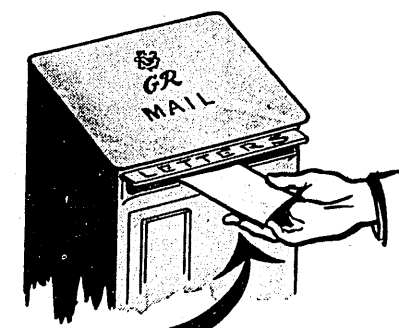

Q.—Why is jam rationed when sugar is so scarce?

A.—Jam is rationed because it is in short supply. The short supply is due in part to the shortage of sugar required in the manufacture of jam.

THEIR ROAD TO Enjoyment

Two million or more motorists from the States visit us each year... thousands for the sheer beauty of our countryside. Let's see to it that our hospitality matches the perfection of our lakes and hills.

WHAT CAN I DO?

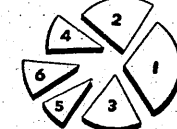

The answer is—plenty! Here are some of the things anybody can do. The suggestions come from a well-known Ontario hotelman.

1. Find out all about what your own neighbourhood offers and become a booster.
2. Write your friends in the States about Ontario, show them when they come that you're really proud of your province.
3. Try to make all our visitors glad they came, and be really enthusiastic about it.
4. If they ask for information or directions, take time to answer them fully and graciously.
5. In any business dealings you may have with them, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it all up, just follow the "Golden Rule!"

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS... it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! Actually, the Province of Ontario, in pre-war years, profited to almost the same extent from tourist business as it did from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that this business goes on growing.

This diagram, based on figures supplied by the Hotel Association, shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every tourist dollar is shared this way: 1. Hotels; 2. Retail stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

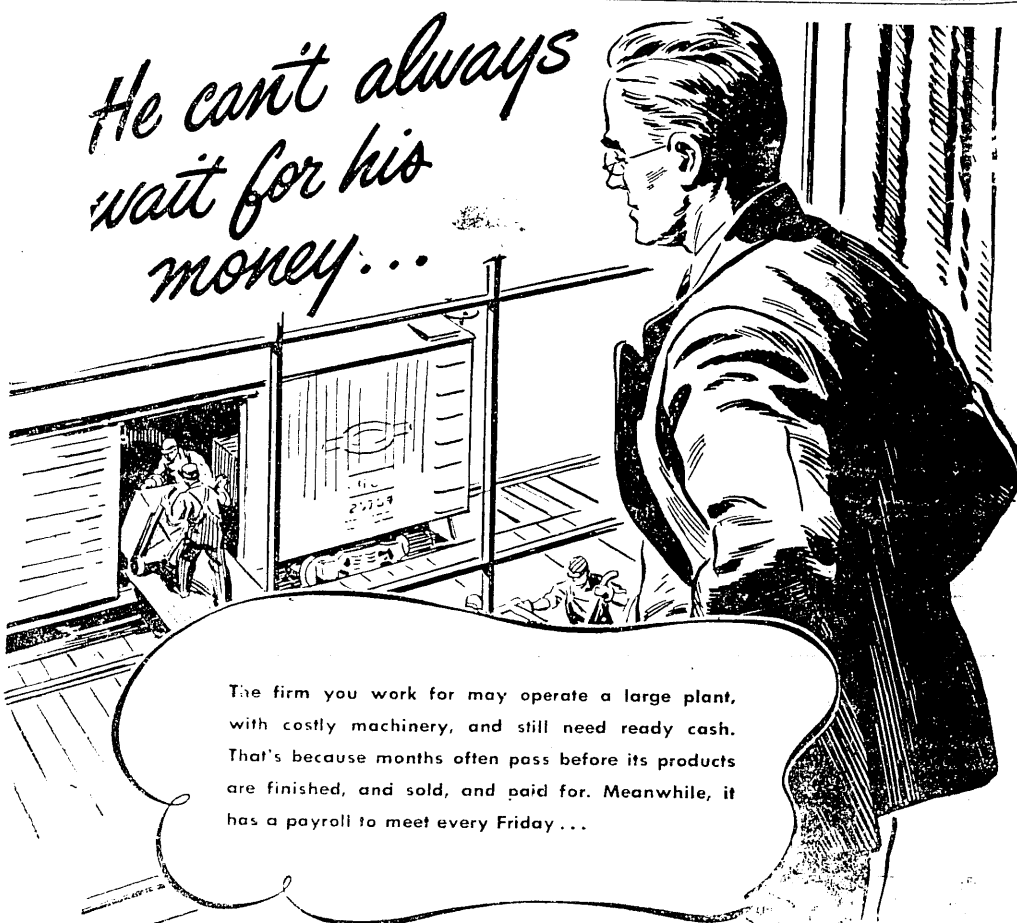

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them... we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday, so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend in Canada.

"Let's make them want to come back!"

BANK CREDIT BRIDGES THE FINANCIAL GAP

Every day, business firms make use of bank loans to keep men working, machines running, goods flowing. This bank credit may be used to meet continuing expenses while goods are being processed; to build up stocks of raw materials; to purchase component parts. As finished goods reach the market and payment is received, the loan is repaid.

Enterprising farmers, fishermen, merchants—all make similar use of bank credit to meet their short-term financial needs. Thus your bank helps Canadians maintain steady operations—to take advantage of market opportunities both at home and abroad—to grow. And this, in turn means more work, more goods, a higher standard of living for you and for every Canadian.

Cottam W. A. Hold Meeting.

Mrs. F. H. Call, of Windsor, Essex deanery president of the Woman's Auxiliary, was the guest speaker at the September meeting of the Cottam W. A., held recently at the home of Mrs. Muriel McLeod. Mrs. A. E. MacGill conducted the meeting and special prayers were offered for the commencement of the autumn work.

A moment of silence was observed for a revered member of the society, the late Mrs. Mercy Birch, and a special prayer was offered. Mrs. Sidney Wyatt led in the prayer partner's prayer. The Bible reading was taken by Mrs. Delbert R. Jones, and Mrs. J. H. Whealen led the litany. Roll call was responded to by 19 with the name of a favourite hymn.

Arrangements were made to entertain the Little Helpers and their mothers at the annual reception in Trinity Church on Thursday, October 17th.

Taking for her subject "The Don't of W. A. Work," Mrs. Call said: "At the beginning of another season's activity it might be profitable to point out some of the faults of our organization and try to rectify them. Don't regard the W. A. wholly as a sewing circle, nor a prayer meeting, nor a study group, nor a collection agency, but include all and make a balanced meeting."

"Some have a wrong idea that to become a member of the W. A. one must be a confirmed member of the Church of England. The only stipulation made is that a person desiring to become a member must be a baptized member of a church."

Mrs. Call urged the members to encourage new membership as, "unless a society grows and tries to win new members, it will eventually die out through lack of interest."

Mrs. MacGill expressed her regret at having to resign as president because she is moving to Amherstburg, and announced that the vice-president Mrs. Waverly Tully, would assume the duties of president until the end of the year.

Mrs. Stanley Fox, Talbot Road, will entertain the members on October 3rd. Mrs. McLeod served refreshments.

Olinda W. A. Plans Supper.

When Mrs. Jabez Sharpe, 5th Con., Gosfield South, opened her home for the September meeting of the Olinda United Church Women's Association, arrangements were made to hold the annual chicken supper and concert, on Thanksgiving Day, October 14th.

Mrs. Elliott Scott and Mrs. John Adamson were named as conveners of the program committee.

The Rev. and Mrs. R. E. James were welcomed by the members of the association, it being the first meeting they had been able to attend. Mrs. Charles Bruner, president, conducted the meeting and 21 responded to the roll call.

The devotional period was led by Mrs. T. D. Macdonald, who chose for her theme "Harvest Time." She was assisted by Mrs. Ray Lee and Mr. James, who offered prayer.

Plans were made to insulate the church and the members decided to take orders for Christmas cards.

The hostess was assisted in serving refreshments by Mrs. Samuel Saers, Mrs. Ernest Saers and Mrs. Alvin Stevens.

The Political Scene.

The political prophets and "dopesters" are still discussing last week's by-election in Pontiac, and its significance in relation to the hopes of our leading political parties. There is general agreement that it was a bitter disappointment to the three leading parties — the Liberals, because they lost a seat that was considered reasonably safe although held by a minority vote in 1945 — the Progressive-Conservatives, because, after an intensive and hard-fought campaign, they ran a bad third compared to their second place in 1945, the C.C.F. because of a substantial loss from the vote given to them in the previous election. What does it mean? Is the Social Credit becoming a fourth national party? Is there any hope of steady administration with so many parties? Is the socialism a spent force? What effect will this have on next month's by-election in Parkdale, Ontario, and Portage La Prairie, Man? Certainly the Social Credit Party is justified in its feeling of elation.

Straws in the Wind. Real Caouette, the winning candidate, has thrown some light on the question. His statement that he won the election by concentrating on local issues while the other parties talked in national and international terms, has created much interest. An analysis of the vote shows clearly that the vote of 4,485 which was given for the Bloc Populaire Canadienne, Quebec's Ultra Nationalist party, went solidly to Mr. Caouette. The Liberal organization certainly failed to get out all the Liberal vote; the total vote cast in this by-election, as compared with the general election of 1945, is down about the same amount as the Liberal vote is reduced. The Duplessis organization in Quebec has failed in its attempt to support the Progressive-Conservative Party. Real Caouette, the winner, was by far the best known candidate having campaigned in two previous elections in this large constituency which could not all be "covered" in one election campaign. The Progressive-Conservative Party is particularly downcast over its failure to gain from the government loss and the anti-Bracken forces within the party have been strengthened. They have additional ammunition in the Liberal victory in the last week's provincial by-election in Prince Edward Island.

Progress in Democracy. It is now possible to summarize all-Canada press comment on the last session of parliament. Perhaps the most general comment — emerging through much criticism of detail — was (1) that the work of the session showed the successful management, by the government, of the nation's business in this first difficult year of transition and reconstruction; (2) that the opposition in parliament, although much improved, is still woefully weak; (3) that the government deserves commendation for the extent to which it was able to maintain our price structure; (4) that the government took a bold step in offering separate tax agreement to the provinces — there was no general approval of the offer.

Almost all papers agree that a drastic revision of our parliamentary rules must be made if free democracy is to function at its greatest possibility. There is much agreement that the differences between our various political parties is more clearly defined now than ever before but most papers supporting the Progressive-Conservative Party see the Liberal Party veering sharply to the left. Some papers believe they see now emerging the issues on which the public life of Canada will turn for the next few years.

Major Trade Changes. The leading Canadian economists all agree, and our history confirms, that the national income of Canada — the measures of our collective standard of living — depends on the extent of Canada's external trade. There is general agreement too that so long as we retain our present climate, which is the factor governing our industrial and agricultural structure — no internal remedy, no political magic, can replace the stimulus of external trade.

For this reason, it is interesting to note the major changes in the trend of our trade. For British Empire countries there are substantial increases in our trade with Australia, Eire, New Zealand, South Africa, and the United Kingdom — decreases in our trade with British India, Ceylon, Newfoundland and Trinidad. For non-British countries we have increases with Belgium, Brazil, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, The Netherlands and many smaller countries — with decreases for Argentina, Columbia, The French West Indies, Morocco and Panama.

The crimes that are now being committed by man against man cry aloud not for vengeance, but for a complete change in our relationship one with another. — George Lansbury.

The beautiful is the most useful in art; but the sublime is the most helpful to morals, for it elevates the mind.

Ruscomb W. A. to Sponsor Supper.

At the September meeting of Ruscomb United Church Woman's Association, held in the church, plans were completed to serve a harvest home chicken supper, on Monday, October 14th, following the annual harvest home services on Sunday, October 13th, at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m.

The president, Mrs. Arthur Edmunds, was in the chair and the worship service was conducted by Mrs. Thomas Bates, assisted by Mrs. Ivan Fenner, who read the Bible lesson.

Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, Mrs. Earl Skidmore and Mrs. Russell Simons.

Poster Contest for Women's Institutes.

In commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the founding of Women's Institutes, the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario have launched a poster contest throughout the Province. The committee in charge asks that each branch Institute accept the responsibility of holding this contest in its own local community. The best posters submitted in each branch Institute will be sent on to the district committee for competition and judging. The districts will provide prizes for these competitions. The best district posters are to be sent on to the Provincial Board, to arrive not later than November 30th, 1946. Prizes will be provided by the Board for the best Provincial posters.

The posters for the competition are required to deal with the 50th Anniversary celebration, and must bear the date, June 18th, 1947; the place, the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and the celebration theme, "We Treasure the Past — We Face the Future," also the words "Women's Institutes." The sizes are limited to 14 inches by 22, or 28 inches by 22. Full details are now in the hands of all branch Women's Institutes throughout the Province.

...Music by the Mile...
Identifying Iodine... Saving Fence Posts!

Music by the mile! And recorded — believe it or not — on tapes of "Cellophane", 3 5/8" long and 1 inch wide with no less than 60 sound tracks. They provide music for hours with no stops for changing records. At present available only for commercial use, this type of recording may eventually find its way into the home.

Some farmers prefer an iodized salt block to the plain variety. The small but vital iodine content is not sufficient of itself to distinguish an iodine salt block from a plain one, so a harmless red pigment is added that makes identification easy.

Now Chemistry enables the farmer to put longer life into his fence posts by the use of Chromated Zinc Chloride solution. Green posts are immersed in the solution and the chemical is taken up by the sap stream to permeate the wood and make it resistant to insects and decay.

Pioneer Plowing and Methods Feature at International.

Demonstrations of how the pioneers of a century broke their land with a team of oxen and a primitive type of plow will be one of the features of the great International Plowing Match to be held at Port Albert Airfield north of Goderich, from October 15th to 18th. The team of oxen is being supplied by Hubert Caruthers, of Port Clinton, Ontario, who is bringing along a fine team which he actually used to obtain farm operations, such as lumbering in winter and clearing land in summer. At the match, Mr. Caruthers will demonstrate plowing with oxen with a two-furrow plow, and will also have his team hitched to a plow over 100 years old. One of the two oxen in this team bears a large scar on its side, a relic of a fierce encounter with a bear when it was two years old, in which it fought off the bear and escaped with a badly gashed hind.

In addition to the oxen demonstration, the plowing match will also feature an exhibit of many types of modern farm machinery and equipment.

Phosphorus Essential to Crop Production.

The Prairie Provinces' wheat crop removes phosphorus at an astonishing rate, and unless this is replenished yields must drop steadily, writes B. L. Ensie, in The C.M. Farm News Letter. He points out that if the fall wheat land in the three provinces were fertilized, even at a moderate rate, yield increases would rise by about 44 million bushels.

Low crop production is due more to lack of phosphorus than to deficiency of any other element of plant nutrition. Present in every living cell, it is vital for root, seed and fruit development in plants, and for bone building in animals. Lack of this element curtails growth and causes malnutrition in animals feeding on plants poor in phosphorus content.

Recent tests made by the University of British Columbia show there is a marked lack of phosphorus in the majority of B. C. soils. So serious is this deficiency that in some districts buyers reject hay grown in these areas. It is for these reasons that available phosphoric acid is the dominant ingredient in commercial fertilizers.

The Mightiest Ally of Russia.

By Lewis Milligan.

Twenty-five years ago Lenin said to his followers: "We have to use any ruse, dodge, trick, cunning, unlawful method, concealment, veiling the truth." Since then, and particularly in the last year or so, we have seen these tricks and unlawful methods in operation, and they have been so bold and transparent that they have deceived nobody, but the Russians veiling of truth, that too has been quite obvious and partly successful in the dropping of what Mr. Churchill referred to as the "iron curtain."

Three years after Lenin announced above political code of the Soviet Union, his successor, Stalin, declared that "The mightiest ally of Russia is strife, conflicts, and wars in every capitalist nation." Russian agents have ever since been organizing this "mightiest ally of Russia"—with the possible exceptions of the few years in supplying valuable war equipment to the Soviet Union. During those few years, the Soviet agents suspended their tricky and unlawful operations in capitalist countries but it is only a truce. That truce has been called off. The political skulduggery pronounced by Lenin and the campaign of strife and conflict in capitalist nations proposed by Stalin have resumed operation.

The mightiest ally of Soviet Russia, and the most insidious and deadly enemy of democratic nations today is the labor strike. It strikes at the very roots and lops off the branches of our social and industrial life. It impoverishes the workers and their families on the pretence of enriching them. It not only fosters class hatred and warfare, but sets worker against worker and would destroy individual freedom, which is the basis of democracy.

All this, of course, is in strict keeping with the teachings of Karl Marx, the father of Socialism, who declared that class warfare, followed by industrial and economic chaos, was the first essential to the setting up of the Socialist State. Soviet Russia came into being under such conditions, and as faithful disciples of Marx, the Soviet leaders are spreading the Marxian gospel of "World Revolution." They can hardly be blamed for this, for to them Socialism is a religion which they sincerely believe will save the world. But what can be said of the professing Christians who lend their support to the promotion of a religion which is based upon class hatred and which is being propagated by means of trickery, cunning, strife, lawlessness and concealment of truth?

Those things are the very opposite and utter contradiction of Christianity which is based on love, morality, righteousness and truth. Did Jesus tell His disciples to "Do evil that good may come?" He asked that good "Do men gather grapes off thorns or figs off thistles?" So far from resorting to lying and concealment of the truth, the Christian is enjoined to "speak every man truth to his neighbor, for we are all members one of another," and "the truth will make you free."

The late war was the direct result of political trickery, cunning, unlawful methods, concealment of the truth, deliberate lying, and the stirring up of strife within neighbor nations by Hitler and his Nazi gangsters. The peace conference in Paris will fail in its purpose of preventing another and worse world war unless it can expose and place a ban upon political trickery and unlawful methods and strip the veil from the truth.

Mankind will be God-governed in proportion as God's government becomes apparent, the Golden Rule utilized, and the rights of man and the liberty of conscience held sacred.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Program Marks Mission Rally.

Mrs. John H. McQuat, presbytery secretary of Mission Circles, recently conducted a presbytery rally of mission circles at Leamington United Church, with Mrs. Sidney Davison, Miss Melba Sherman and Mrs. A. J. Askew acting on the reception committee.

Mrs. J. T. Flemming, of Kingsville, guest speaker, gave a challenging message on the theme, "We are here under God to do something," and Mrs. McQuat conducted an open forum on "Mission Circle Work." Mrs. Norma Biggs, of Comber; Mrs. William Libby, of Maidstone, and Miss Kathleen Prophet, of Giles Boulevard United Church, Windsor, contributed to the discussion.

Mrs. J. C. Pennington, of Windsor, Presbyterial president, brought greetings from the Essex Presbyterial, and Mrs. Russell Raymond, literature secretary, introduced the new study books, "Our Country is India" and "Central India Now," and other supplementary reading material and devotional literature.

The worship service, the theme of which was "Grant Us Thy Peace," was conducted by the Ottawa United Church (Windsor) circle, Mrs. Jean Gill, Mrs. Marjorie Grant, Miss Helen Clarkson and Miss Aileen Doherty taking part. Leamington Mission Circle prepared and displayed an effective poster to illustrate the theme of the rally.

A period of games was conducted by Mrs. McQuat and a social half hour was enjoyed, during which the Leamington Mission Circle girls served refreshments.

More Help for Farmers.

According to a statement issued this week by B. G. Sullivan, Ontario Regional Superintendent of National Employment Service, many farmers in this region will soon have the opportunity of applying for sorely needed farm help from among the four thousand Polish War Veterans who will arrive in this country during September and October.

It is understood that the Polish veterans, now in Italy, are being "screened" by representatives of the Dominion Department of Labour as to their suitability for work on Canadian farms. The statement mentioned that between fifteen hundred and two thousand of these veterans will be placed in farm employment in Ontario. It was emphasized in Mr. Sullivan's remarks that only single men are being interviewed, preferably with previous farm experience. In each case the applicant must be under thirty-five years of age.

In further commenting on the recruiting of Polish Veterans to work on the farm, Mr. Sullivan stated, "With the arrival of these men from Europe, Canadian farmers will be in a position to augment their present labour help by applying to any local office of the National Employment Service. In this respect, farmers who undertake to employ a Polish veteran will be required to contract for at least one year's continuous employment."

"It is planned," continued Mr. Sullivan, "to properly equip each Polish farm applicant with suitable work clothes. This will be completed before arrival at his ultimate destination. Placement will be made by the National Employment officers in co-operation with the Provincial Department of Agriculture through the Dominion-Provincial Farm Labour Committee."

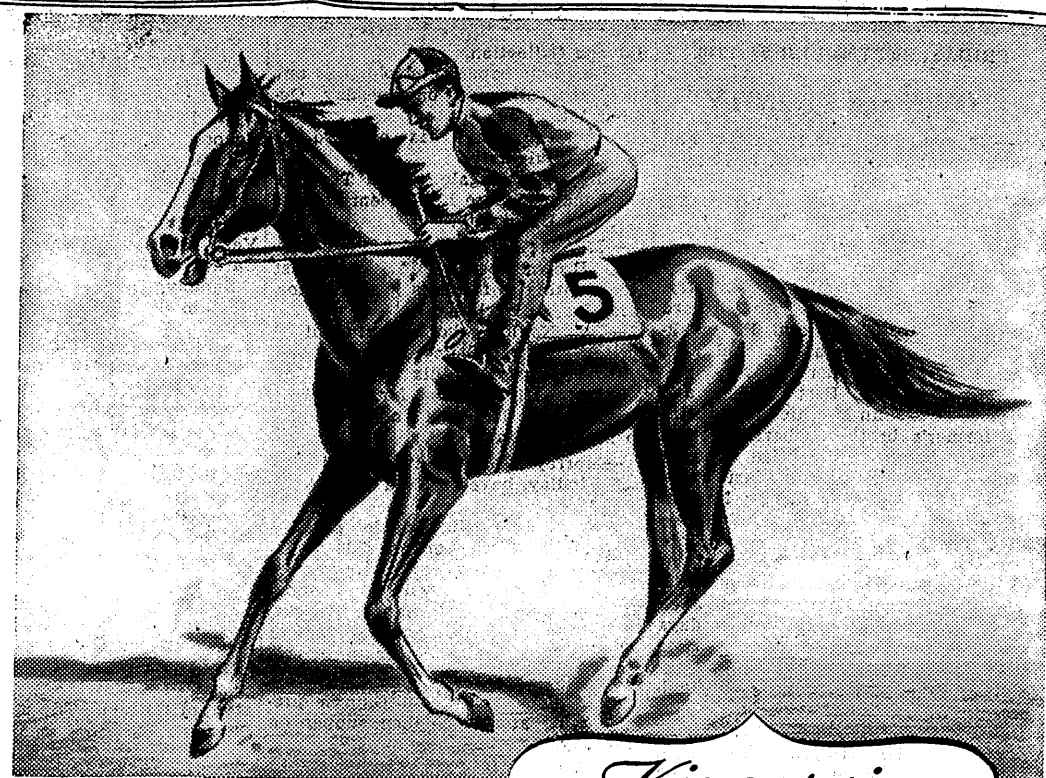

It has just been announced from Ottawa that 700 Polish war veterans will arrive in Ontario this month.

Keen Interest in International Match.

Everything points to the International Plowing Match, being held at Port Albert Airfield, north of Goderich, on October 15th, 16th, 17th and 18th, being the greatest event of its kind ever held in Ontario. Stimulated by the offers of free trips to Britain for the first and second prize winners in the championship classes, entries are expected to reach an all-time high for the 47 different classes of competition to be held. Of the 47 classes, 24 are in the international group, and will be held on the last three days of the match. On the first day, there will be twenty-three classes confined to local plowmen, ten being confined to farmers from Huron County, seven to farmers from Bruce and six to farmers from Perth. On the first day, there will be a special horse show, with the plowing teams being judged solely on their performance. The horse show for the international classes will be judged on conformation and quality and equipment as well as on performance.

Junior farmers are showing a specially keen interest in the Junior Inter-County team plowing match, and catching classes for farm boys are being conducted in many counties in preparation for this event. Expert tractor and horse plowmen are giving freely of their time and knowledge in conducting these coaching classes for the juniors, and a keenly-contested competition is anticipated.

The exhibits of farm machinery, equipment and supplies will break all former records. Four large hangers of the R.C.A.F. Airfield will be filled to capacity with these exhibits, which will also include exhibition of farm products of Huron and surrounding counties, government agricultural institutions and by the Junior Farmers Association of Ontario. clubs of the surrounding counties have arranged for special cattle shows.

All the leading farm machinery and equipment firms have arranged for demonstrations of the latest types of machinery, including jeeps warble by spraying equipment, weed control machinery and heavy machines for breaking and clearing land, cleaning out ditches and removing hedgerows.

These demonstrations will be conducted daily.

The formal opening of the International Match, at 2.30 p.m. on Wednesday, October 16th, will find His Excellency Earl Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, on hand to officiate.

This will be the first major agricultural event at which the Governor-General will take part since his arrival in Canada, and a huge crowd is expected to be on hand to welcome him.

Ample arrangements have been made for catering to feed the crowds, and a special billeting committee is organizing to have billets available in Goderich and the surrounding county for those desiring to stay over the period of the match.

Women Welcome at Plowing Match.

Special arrangements have been made for the comfort and convenience of farm women attending the International Plowing Match. In addition, the fact that the exhibits of farm equipment and supplies will be housed indoors, in four large hangars, will make it possible for the women to view these exhibits in comfortable surroundings. A special rest room for women, where tea will be served free of charge, will be one of the features of the 1946 match. Special entertainment is being provided for women visitors, including a motion picture theatre where continuous free shows will be provided. Women attending the match will find much to interest them while their men folk are taking in the plowing competitions.

In Greater Demand Than Ever

Today more people are using more telephones to make more calls than ever before.

More People—You'd hardly think it possible—in view of post-war shortages—but our greatest increase in any whole year before the war was 63,000 new customers while in the first eight months of 1946 we added 90,000.

More Telephones—Before the war we served 780,000 telephones. Now there are 1,140,000.

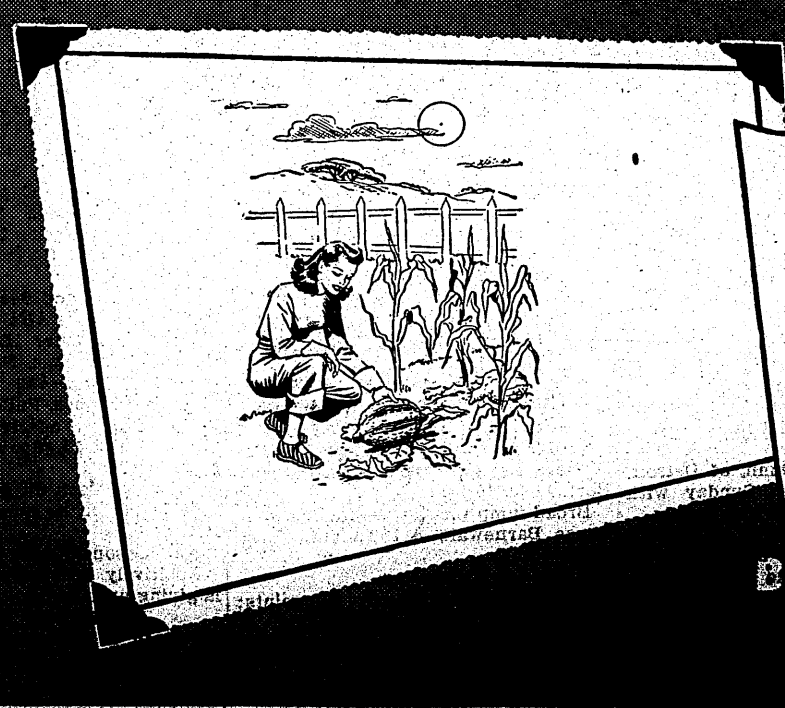

More Calls—The number of local calls has increased proportionately but Long Distance calls have gone up 300%.

Telephone Operators are doing a wonderful job with this new flood of calls, keeping a service standards high and delays to a minimum. But to put every call through as fast as we—and you—would wish, we must have new lines and switchboards. Our huge new extension program had to wait until service orders were finished. Now it is being rushed through as fast as the material situation will permit.

HOW TO HARVEST AND STORE LATE SQUASH

Garden space may be saved by growing late squash among rows of sweet corn. Top-dressing the soil with manure or plant food will increase the size of winter squash.

Cut squash from vines just before frost in the fall. The shell should be hard for storage purposes.

Store vegetable carefully—avoid bruising or breaking stem. Place squash (with space between each) on a layer of sand on the cellar floor. Maintain a temperature of about 45°F.

"Taking as her subject, 'Behold I send you forth,' she said: 'In an age when the church needs to be at its best, vital, strong, that it may lead individuals and guide nations she is handicapped for the following reasons: lack of Bible knowledge, disregard in church school, and short-coming of ministers. The Bible may be the best seller, but until it becomes the world's best loved and best read book, it is of little value. There are two classes of church members, those who join and do not belong, those who join and do belong — to which group do you belong?' she challenged. 'The aims and objects of Christian Education,' the speaker said are: (1) to lead the pupil into a personal relationship with God and the church. The success of every school could be calculated by the number who graduate into active church workers; (2) to create an interest in missions at home and abroad, and (3) to inspire knowledge, understanding and love of the Bible. As crusaders we are challenged to go forth to feedification and to fulfil the aims of Christian education.' The scripture lessons were read by Dorothy and Marjorie Small.

TO ETERNITY

or Just Across the Street

Crossing the street? There's nothing to it. You do it a dozen times a day. Yet—6,600 people were killed last year— just crossing the street.
We can all make crossing the street something that's normal and safe. Drivers can drive a little slower, watch the lights, observe common courtesy.
Pedestrians can look both ways,
"Go with the lights," never jay-walk.

For safety on streets and highways — for safety in insurance, look to Lumbermen's. Lumbermen's unique Broadform "package" (including special personal accident policy) not only protects you against liability to others, but gives you needed security against loss if you are injured in an automobile accident.
Ask us for the facts.

Kinsmen Club Meet.

Mr. Sparks, field secretary of the Windsor-Essex advisory board for the C. N. I. B., was the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Kinsmen Club, on Tuesday evening last, at the Aberdeen Hotel. Mr. Sparks gave a brief history of the founding of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. He told of the 25,800 blind men, women and children across the Dominion, of their handicap, and their happiness. The worst thing one can do, Mr. Sparks said, was to sympathize with the blind. They did not wish this, but need one's moral support.
He told briefly of the blind in Windsor, Essex, Kent and Lambton counties, of which he is the field secretary, of the home teaching, library service, full time employment and preventive services. He asked that when the Institute asks for a place for these blind people, for whom the light has gone out, that we give them a fair trial in our world of business, and we would gain by employing them in more ways than one.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Sparks by Kinsman Kennedy for his inspiring address, which was seconded by Kinsman Ashton.

Cox-Myers Nuptials.

At the Salvation Army Citadel, Essex, the wedding took place Saturday afternoon of last week, with Capt.
George Cox, of Toronto, officiating.
Alice Elaine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
Roy Myers, of town, to Clifford Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cox, of Kingsville.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length white taffeta gown with sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice and long sleeves forming points over her hands.
Her floor-length veil of net was caught to her head with a coronet of tiny white feathers, and she wore a double strand of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Maxine Chase, as matron of honor, wore a gown of blue, a Jersey top, and a double net bouffant skirt, and carried yellow roses. Miss Phyllis Harrow, as bridesmaid, wore a similarly styled gown in pink, and carried pink roses. Both wore shoulder-length net veils.

A brother of the bridegroom, Victor Cox, of Kingsville, acted as best man, and the ushers were Stirling Ellis and Garth Lea.
Miss Norma Hill was at the organ, and Misses Margaret and Beatrice Bennett sang "O Perfect Love" and "I'll Walk Beside You."

Mrs. Myers, the bride's mother, was in a two-piece black wool crepe dress and wore pink roses. The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Cox, wore black crepe and red roses.

A reception for 75 guests was held in the basement of the United Church.
The bride's table was laid with a white linen cloth and centred with a three-tiered wedding cake flanked by tall white tapers in crystal candelabra.

Those serving were Mrs. Douglas Reeche, Mrs. Don McKenzie, Mrs.
Claude Shepley and Miss Bessie Smith.
Mr. and Mrs. Cox left later for Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a light blue suit with black accessories.
They will reside in Kingsville.

Gleason-Mullins Nuptials.

At an autumn ceremony, performed by the Rev. John J. White, at Ste.
Clara's Church, on Saturday morning of last week, Miss Catherine Mullins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mullins, of Maidstone, and James Gleason, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gleason, of Windsor, were united in marriage.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white taffeta with an off-shoulder neckline, a fitted bodice buttoning down the back, and a full skirt extending into a train. Her long sleeves extended into points over her hands. Her headpiece was of seed pearls catching a fingertip, tulle veil.
Miss Veronica Mullins, as her sister's maid of honour, chose baby blue taffeta styled with long sleeves, a full skirt and a smart bolero jacket. Her headpiece was of taffeta and pink flowers. She carried a colonial bou-quet of pink roses. Miss Irene Mullins, sister of the bride, and Miss Doreen Gleason, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids, both identically dressed and carrying similar flowers to the maid of honor's.

Orval Gleason, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Harold Diemer and Jack Rounding were ushers.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast for the immediate family and a reception for 100 guests were held at Lappan's Hotel. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cloth and centred with a four-tiered wedding cake flanked by white tapers in a setting of white gladioli.

Mrs. Mullins chose for her daughter's wedding a blue gabardine suit with brown accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Gleason chose black crepe with black accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Gleason left for Montreal, the bride travelling in a coral wool crepe suit, with brown accessories and a brown sailor hat. She wore an orchid corsage.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs.
Gleason will reside in Windsor.

Attention, Corn Growers!

Commercial corn growers are now
voting on a plan to set up a marketing scheme for their product under the terms of the Farm Products Marketing Act. Ballots have been sent out by the Farm Products Marketing Board
to all commercial corn growers of Essex, Kent, Elgin, Norfolk, Oxford,
Middlesex, Lambton and Waterloo
Counties, who sold corn for commercial purposes last year. On the ballot appears: "Are You in Favour of the Proposed Ontario Commercial Corn
Growers' Marketing Scheme being brought into Force in Ontario?" Each grower, along with the ballot, receives a printed copy of the scheme.

If you are a corn grower and have not received a ballot, you can secure one, and a copy of the scheme, by writing or applying to the local Department of Agriculture office. The closing date for returning of ballots is October 15th, and they are to be forwarded directly to the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board, Parliament
Buildings, Toronto.

Scout Apple Day.

Why, the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs are putting on their 10th Apple Day Sale, and will be at your door and on the streets of Essex and Cottam selling Essex County apples.

Frankly, folks, this is a money-making scheme, but an honourable one.
We need funds to carry on the good work of making the Essex and Cottam Scouts and Wolf Cubs into good citizens, with the background of Scout training, and we need your help.

We now ask one and all to kindly assist us by the purchase of an apple, for not less than ten cents. It will be your privilege to give as much more as you are able to give, and we shall be grateful.

Do yourself, the apple grower and the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs a good turn.

Essex Town Council.

Monday, September 23rd. Council met in regular session, in the Council Chamber, at 8 p.m., with Mayor Linton, Reeve Irwin and Councilors Chase, Shaw, Lee, Brushett, Francotte and Pulleyblank present. Mr. Coulter, County Weed Inspector, addressed Council re cutting of weeds. He stated he had had complaints about the weed situation in town and he would like weeds cut once again. He said he realized the town had done a good job the first time, but recent warm spell had brought on the weeds again. Mr. Coulter mentioned in particular weeds near the Fair Grounds and along Maidstone avenue near the M. C. R. tracks. Mr. Francotte stated that he would have his men go over these places once again. Minutes of last regular meeting were read, and on motion of Messrs. Irwin and Shaw, adopted as read. The Clerk read letters from the clerks of Thamesville and Blenheim, in answer to his request re costs of installation of traffic lights in their towns. The traffic light in Thamesville, the intersection of No. 2 and No. 21 Highways, was installed by the Department of Highways and the municipality on a 50-50 basis, the total cost being $920. The maintenance cost is also paid 50-50 and costs the municipality about $35 per year, plus cost of bulbs. The town clerk of Blenheim stated his municipality had paid the full cost of installation and pays for maintenance. Mayor Linton stated he had spoken to a man from Wheatley and had been informed Wheatley had installed four traffic light, at their four corners, last year, at a cost of about $500, their station. Hydro superintendent doing the installation. A short discussion followed, when it was decided to lay matter over for this year. Chief of Police N. Hogarth requested a stronger light at the Aberdeen corner. Mr. Chase advised the Chief that the local Hydro was putting in a 500-watt bulb there this week. Chief Hogarth also said he thought the "No Parking" signs along Talbot should either be freshly painted so they can be read, or taken down. Mr. Linton said he thought there should be "No Parking" on the east side of Wilson avenue, from Talbot street to the river. No action taken. Mr. Pulleyblank, for the Rotary Club, requested that power be available at the Fair Grounds for the Rotary Field Day, on Thursday, at which they expect there will be over 1,000 children. A short discussion followed and, on motion of Messrs. Francotte and Irwin, the local Hydro were granted permission to go onto the Fair Grounds property and install the necessary equipment. A letter from the Department of Planning and Development, Toronto, re Jarzarcz subdivision, requesting the Town Council to pass a bylaw restricting building of single homes on the lots, was referred to Mr. Geddes to answer and report back to Council at special meeting to be held on October 1st. The Clerk reported receiving only one tender for the McEntee drain, that from Russell and Calvin Hill, at the estimate, plus 10%. It was decided to lay tender over till Tuesday evening, October 1st, the Clerk in meantime to get in touch with C. B. Allison and ask him to be present at that meeting. Mr. Francotte reported that Mr. Michael had spoken to him about laying a new walk on Wilson avenue, over the present walk, in front of their new building. No action taken. On motion of Messrs. Irwin and Brushett, the following accounts were passed: Essex Women's Institute, grant, $50; Essex Boys' Band, grant, $50; Essex S. A. Band, grant, $50; C. Jones, account P. Cultivation is Urged to Control Weeds.

Now that the harvesting of crops is nearing completion, farmers should devote their attention to clearing their farms of noxious weeds, says John D. MacLeod, Director of the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture. Weed infested areas which should be cleaned up immediately are in evidence everywhere, Mr. MacLeod adds. After harvest cultivation is one of the most practical and effective methods for the control of weeds, says Mr. MacLeod. Plants drawn heavily on the food stored in the roots in order to produce the seed, and are at their weakest stage at the present time. If possible, cultivation should be undertaken to prevent the ripening of the current year's seed, as well as to fight a weakened root. For the control of annual, winter annual and biennial weeds thorough cultivation of the stubble is recommended immediately after the crop has been removed, using the one-way disc. Following this method seeds are brought to the surface and may be killed by further cultivation. In following this plan the soil is stirred up at frequent intervals, millions of young plants are killed and those which germinate late in the fall will be killed by early frosts. Skim plowing is also recommended immediately after the crop has been removed, followed by shallow cultivation at regular intervals until freeze-up. An abundance of moisture and the methods outlined above will prove effective in controlling such weeds as wild mustard, ragweed, worm seed mustard, false flax, foxtail, lamb's quarters, pigweed, wild carrot and Shepherd's purse. For the control of such persistent perennial weeds as Bladder Campion, Chicory and others with deep tap roots deep plowing as soon as possible after the crop is removed is recommended, followed by the cultivator, using wide shares that overlap. Such roots must be cut clean off and brought to the surface, therefore good plowing and thorough cultivation are essential.

Apple Tree Shelter.

Apple trees do not thrive best on any particular exposure. Most fruit districts, however, suffer from the effects of violent wind at harvest time; therefore, a slope provides some protection, particularly against wintry winds. Duty is carrying on promptly and faithfully the affairs now before you. It is to fulfill the claims of today.—Goethe.

Corn Markets in Canada.

Introduction. Our bulletin No. 3 dealt with the subject "White Corn and the Canadian Market" and drew attention to certain discrepancies between statements issued at different times by the principals in the white hybrid corn deal. Our Bulletin No. 4 entitled "Keeping the Record Straight" called attention to certain serious misstatements made by a speaker in an address to a Service Club at Chatham, on June 25th, 1946, said speaker, holding the office of vice-president of White Hybrid Corn Producers Limited, one of the principals in the deal referred to above. At this point it might be well to point out to our farmer readers that the White Hybrid firm is the "grandchild" of a large Toronto firm which, previous to the war, was reputed to be the largest importer of foreign corn into Canada. Our Duty to Agricultural Community. It should now be obvious to our readers, especially after reading the quotations and references made in the first two paragraphs of Bulletin No. 3, that the Windsor Chamber of Commerce has made the interests of the agricultural population of Essex County, and the surrounding area, one of the Chamber's chief subjects of study over a long period of years. We pointed out how our doubts were aroused at the end of February, 1946, were confirmed after reading the speech made at Chatham in late June; and a few days later were fully confirmed when we received Trade Press Release No. 7-762 from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board referring to Order No. A-2030 which became effective June 29th, 1946. We then felt it our duty to the agricultural community to advise the farmers as to the facts, according to the information which the Chamber has been able to gather, and this series of "News Bulletins" is designed with that end in view. Analysis of Corn Market. In the first table on page 2 of Bulletin No. 2, figures were supplied which showed, by groups, the commercial utilization of corn in Canada during the four years 1941 to 1944, inclusive. It should be obvious to the producers of corn that if they expect to properly serve the consuming trade, they must supply the type and quality of corn demanded by the various consumers. The following analysis should prove interesting, therefore, having in mind the advent of white and mixed corn into the productive field in Southwestern Ontario. Milling and Feeds. This is the largest group using corn in Canada. While the figures in the table show this group to be substantially lower than the "starch and glucose" group in the years 1942, 1943 and 1944, it must be kept in mind that during those years, and right up to the present, we have experienced a severe shortage in corn supplies so that those supplies which have been available have been "funnelled" into the starch industry where no other grain can substitute for corn. This was done at the expense of the "milling and feeds" and "distilleries" groups where other grains could be used as substitutes for corn. Before the war the "milling and feeds" group used substantially larger quantities of corn than the "starch and glucose" group and, in our opinion, will do so again with the return of normal conditions. We believe we are safe in stating that the "milling and feeds" group not only prefers "yellow" corn to either "white" or "mixed" corn but actually demands the "yellow" type to serve its purposes. This preference is due to various reasons, the most important of which is, perhaps, the higher vitamin content of the "yellow" type corn. In the report entitled "An Adequate Corn Marketing Scheme," issued by this committee on April 30th, 1945, under the heading "Flour and Grist Mills, Stock and Poultry Feeds" the following statements were made: "From a marketing standpoint these consumers of corn are combined into one group as the movement is similar in all cases. The total annual consumption of this main group is approximately the same as the starch group but, in this group the places of utilization are numerous, in contrast to only two in the starch industry. These numerous places of utilization are located mainly in Western and Central Ontario and in or near the City of Montreal, in Quebec Province. "Some idea of the number of locations of these flour and feed mills can be obtained from a study of appendix 4, a summary of Flour and Feed Mills in Canada, 1941, published by The Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa. It will be noted that, out of a total of 1321 mills in Canada, 705 or over 53 per cent are located within the Province of Ontario. "The producers of corn in Southwestern Ontario should give special attention to supplying this group (milling and feeds) with its corn requirements." We still adhere to that opinion and by producing substantial quantities of mixed corn (we consider that the indiscriminate planting of white corn under the White Hybrid Company — Kellogg deal might, according to the whims of nature, produce as much as 2,000,000 bushels of mixed corn) the producers in Southwestern Ontario automatically exclude themselves from participation in a large part of the trade of the "milling and feeds" group of consumers. Is this "offering to farmers Security for the Future" as was advertised by White Hybrid Corn Producers Limited in seeking to make contracts with farmers? Corn growers might do well to ponder this question very seriously. Starch and Glucose. Under normal conditions it is probably fair to say that the "starch and glucose" industry uses about 40 per cent of all the corn used in Canada and is a close second to the "milling and feeds" industry. In startling contrast to the several hundred plants which comprise the latter group the "starch and glucose" group consists of only two plants, the Canada Starch Company Limited and the St. Lawrence Starch Company Limited situated, respectively, at Cardinal and Port Credit, both in the Province of Ontario. From the standpoint of providing a market for Ontario corn an analysis of this group becomes a comparatively simple matter. As to "type" of corn used in this industry, "yellow," "mixed" or "white" corn can be used but preference is naturally given to "yellow" or "mixed" as long as the "Breakfast Food" industry is inclined to pay a premium of 10 cents or more per bushel for pure "white" corn. On this point the St. Lawrence Company in a booklet issued in 1943, in conjunction with the Essex Hybrid Seed Co., Ltd., made this statement with regard to its preferences: "White corn is lower in vitamin content (than yellow) and while it can be used, no premium is paid. No white corn has yet been produced that will yield as high as yellow corn in Canada, and therefore, represents a loss to the farmer, if grown, with this (starch) market in mind." Owing to the fact that Cardinal is a long distance from Essex and Keit, on the St. Lawrence River, and that the Canada Starch Company insists on its supplies being transported by water, a condition which Western Ontario growers have been unable to meet, we consider it reasonable that, until such time as Ontario growers are able to produce sufficient corn to supply Canada's entire requirements, the needs of this Company should be met with imported corn. In contrast, the St. Lawrence Company at Port Credit is much nearer the corn producing area with consequent lower rail transportation costs involved. Under such existing circumstances this concern should be considered a natural market for Ontario corn. "Breakfast Foods" and "Distilleries." Distilleries have dropped from third to fourth place in the corn utilization picture in Canada by reason of new techniques which were developed during the war whereby wheat and other grains replaced corn to a large extent in the distilling industry. Combined, these two groups represent approximately 15 per cent of the industrial utilization of corn in Canada. Conclusion. It is in the best interests of Ontario corn producers that they should be led into a deal to supply the "Breakfast Food" trade which involves only about 8 per cent of the Canadian market with the possible jeopardizing of the "milling and feeds" market comprising over 40 per cent of the Canadian market. Does such a move really "offer to farmers Security for the Future"?

Corn Markets in Canada.

Meet Human Needs — Help S. A. Appeal.

"Remember the human needs that make The Salvation Army's Home Front Appeal necessary," Air Marshal William A. Bishop, V. C. C. B. D. S. O., M. C. D. F. C. E. D. L. D., urged in a message released yesterday. The 1946 appeal will be inaugurated on Sept. 16th at services in Salvation Army Citadels and the general canvass opens Monday at many points across the country. Objective is $2,000,000 to care for deficit on public welfare operations and to permit of some expansion in social service facilities. Air Marshal Bishop, who is chairman of the Salvation Army National Advisory Board, declared that, in its functions in behalf of suffering and erring humanity, The Salvation Army was incurring an annual deficit now exceeding $1,000,000. "Few will dispute the need for making good this deficit on work for the poor, the ill, and the erring," said Air Marshal Bishop. "If the vast amount of suffering, misery and waywardness daily dealt with by The Salvation Army were dumped on the doorsteps of individual Canadians, they would realize with a horrified shock how important to Canada is the work of The Army. "Insofar as additional building and equipment are concerned, I hope Canadians will agree that the plant of this vital, humane organization should be equal to the work it is called on to perform. Today it falls far short of meeting the demands for help. The opportunity is now presented for all those of good will within our borders to do their share towards extending this plant."

People Are Asking?

Q.—Does the new regulation which says that you can give a notice to people renting shared accommodation to vacate at any time during the year apply to those living in other types of accommodation? A.—No. A landlord cannot give legal notice to any tenant to vacate during the winter months. Except under very special circumstances a landlord cannot give notice to a tenant of housing accommodation to vacate at any time. Q.—I am a citizen of the United States. I would like to get the number six ration book as I will be in Canada for six months. Can I do this? A.—No. If you make application to your nearest local ration board you will be given a temporary ration card for the length of your stay beyond seven days. The only way you as a United States citizen could obtain a ration book would be if you remain in Canada for a period longer than six months. The path of duty lies in what is near, and men seek for it in what is remote. The work of duty lies in what is easy, and men seek for it in what is difficult.—Menclius.

HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR BEET CROP

Beets grow best in loose, rich loam. Cool, moist conditions develop highest quality. To improve crop: Remove discoloured leaves from plants. Protect your beet plants from the WEBWORM, a worm which feeds principally on the under side of leaves—by spraying or dusting with arsenicals. When storing beets for winter use—leave one inch of leaf stems to prevent "bleeding". Keep beets in cool, moist place.

Receives Letter from Buddy of The Late Karl Davis.

The following letter was received by Mrs. W. P. Davis, from Chester E. Hayes, one of the late Karl Davis' buddies, who was on the plane in which Karl was killed, and written from Portland, Ore.

Dear Mrs. Davis—I was very much surprised and also pleased to receive your letter. Thank you very much for writing.

I have been out of the service now since the first of February, 1945. I was discharged from Baxter General Hospital, in Spokane, Wash., after spending eleven months in several long hospitals. I have completely recovered and am as good as now, or nearly so. I had both feet pretty badly shot up and injured. I am one of the lucky ones. I received a 100% disability pension.

Yes, I was with Karl on that last night. I was also my last. I don't know just what to say, except that he was killed instantly. I don't think he knew that we were being attacked. I don't think it all happened so quickly. The German planes were all coming in straight on the tail of our plane so I was the only one that could see them at first. I was blown out of my turret on the second pass and saw Karl lying on the floor of the plane. I tried to get to him but James Kelly, our other waist gunner, stopped me and said there was nothing that could be done for him. Kelly was also wounded and spent about a month in the hospital.

Our plane was pretty badly shot up and we had to crash land at the first Allied field we could find, which was a fighter field about 15 miles from Naples. Luckily our pilot was one of the best and made a wonderful crash landing and no one even got a scratch out of it, for which he was decorated with a silver star medal.

After the first of May I was moved from the 58th station hospital to the 17th General in Naples. That is where Karl is buried. After I was able to get around on crutches I went to the graves registration detachment and found out that he was buried there. The other three original members of our crew visited me one day and I took them all out to see Karl's grave. That was the last time I have seen any of them.

Yes, I remember the time and the place very distinctly. We started our bombing the German field airport at Viareggio, Italy. We had dropped our bombs and started for our base when they hit us, so it must have been approximately 12:30 when we were hit. It couldn't have lasted more than five minutes although at the time it seemed like hours.

I met Karl when our crew was first formed in Tucson, Ariz., in August, 1942. We all hit it off swell right from the start. For a bunch of fellows that had never seen each other before, I think we got along as good as any crew ever did. I remember we were all a little nervous of Karl because he seemed to get so much more mail than the rest of us but nevertheless I counted him as a friend and I'm sure the rest of the crew felt the same.

Would it be asking too much to ask you to send me our pilot's address. I would like very much to get in touch with him and the rest of the crew if possible. I would appreciate it very much. I know that's about all I can say, except to offer my deepest sympathy and highest regards. And thank you for getting in touch with me.

Sincerely yours,

CHESTER E. HAYES

About THE NEW PRICE OF MILK

The new price increases announced by order No. 46-9 of the Ontario Milk Control Board, effective October 1st, 1946, were brought about due to the following circumstances:

1. Cancellation of the Federal Subsidy of approximately 1 1/2c a quart to producers.

2. Approval by the Ontario Milk Control Board of an additional 1 1/2c a quart to provide for increased costs, mainly farm production.

This increase in the retail price of milk to the consumer applies in all markets throughout Ontario, to all kinds of milk including special milk, chocolate milk, buttermilk, etc. Increases of the various units of milk will be at the rate of 3 cents per quart. Cream prices have been increased at the rate of approximately 3 cents per half pint.

Milk tickets purchased at the price in effect prior to October 1st will have a value of 3 cents less per quart than the October 1st price; cream tickets will have a value 3 cents less per half pint.

This means that it will be necessary for consumers using old tickets to pay an additional amount in cash along with each ticket, in order to bring the payment up to the new prices in effect on October 1st.

GESTO CHURCH CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY.

The 60th anniversary of Gesto United Church was celebrated September 22nd, with services in charge of Rev. Enos Hart, of Toronto. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Hight, the only two living members of the church, the former being a steward the past 25 years, and the latter president of the W. M. S. the past 10 years.

Church History.
The first minister was a representative of the Bible Christian Church, Rev. J. Kinsey, who arrived in the spring of 1871. The first quarter's account, ending July 31st, 1871, was as follows: Members, 5; receipts, $16.77.

By the end of the same year the membership had increased to 18 and the receipts for the year amounted to $97.22. The deficiency was met by a grant from the Missionary Society of $355.13. During Mr. Kinsey's second year the little house that was looked upon as the first parsonage, was destroyed by fire and as a result the conference removed him and the remainder of the year was supplied by a hired local preacher named Mr. Pooley. Mr. Ball, who dated, with the year they started their pastorate being as follows: 1874, M. McNeill; 1875, W. Davis; 1876, H. Moore; 1877, D. Williams; 1878, J. Elliott; 1879, S. J. Cummings; 1880, W. Coome; 1881, W. H. Spargo; 1882, S. W. Muxworthy; 1883, C. W. Bristol; 1884, R. A. Howey; 1885, M. F. Hawley; 1886, J. A. Snell; 1887, C. F. Clarke; 1888, C. W. Kennedy; 1889, D. H. Trimble; 1890, J. C. Reid; 1891, W. E. Millson; 1892, O. F. Chittick; 1893, A. R. Kellam; 1894, D. Hicks; 1895, J. F. Reycraft; 1896, W. E. Donnelly; 1897, A. E. Millson; 1898, G. Barnard; 1899, Joseph Jones; 1900, P. H. Lawson; 1901, T. C. Wilkinson; 1902, S. J. Mathers; 1903, J. L. Foster; and then Clarence Beam, Mr. Wolland, Mr. Moorhouse and S. Dunk.

Up till Mr. Pooley's time the preaching had been done in the homes of the people, but it was their determination to build a suitable church for religious worship. The contract for the church was given to Isaac Elford, who soon received assistance from Joseph Creep, who had just arrived from the Old Country, and both of them devoted themselves diligently and devotedly till the work was finished. However, there remained quite a great deal to be done to the building when Rev. John Ball arrived in July, 1873. They succeeded in having the opening services in February, 1874, when Rev. W. Ayers, of Hamilton, was the preacher. In connection with those services supper was served in a new stable owned by J. Rodd and M. Barrett, who at that time were operating a large saw mill.

After receiving the subscriptions they were not only able to meet the necessary expenses, but had $100 to the good. This building is now used as the Ladies' Hall.

Up till 1873 the community was known as New Darlington, because most of the early settlers had come from the Township of Darlington, in the County of Durham. In order to get the mails they had to go to Amherstburg. With all our modern conveniences, we fail to realize what these pioneers had to do. The nearest general store (apart from the one situated at the corner, owned at first by Mr. Tearlow, and then by a Mr. Weldon) were at Maldstone and North Ridge. Mr. Ball took up the matter with the government postal authorities and was instrumental in having a postoffice established there. Mr. Weldon was appointed postmaster, and mail was received from Essex three times a week. It was necessary for the early residents to decide upon a name, as the name by which it was commonly recognized led to some confusion. Two meetings were held, and finally it was left to Mr. Campbell, the first settler, to make the decision. He had no great difficulty, as he named it after a place in Scotland, which he considered of some great importance, viz., Gesto.

For the next few years Conference sent young men who, as a general rule, only stayed in the mission for a year, the last of these young men being Rev. S. W. Muxworthy, who later occupied the position of president of the Conference. Rev. W. E. Millson, whose first appointment was Gesto, has also been honoured by his fellow members by being elected president of the Conference.

In 1889 Rev. C. W. Bristol, an ordained minister, was stationed at Gesto. There was not a parsonage, so an old building was rented for seven dollars a month, located just opposite to the old store. Here they remained for their three years. Mr. Bristol will always be remembered for the splendid memorials he left behind him. It was during his ministry that the Gesto and Elford (present) churches were built. The Gesto church was dedicated on October 24th, 1886, when the Rev. Wm. Burgess preached in the morning and evening, and Rev. W. J. Ford in the afternoon. On the following Monday there was dinner and tea and a great public meeting in the evening. The church cost $2,061.58, which was certainly a great undertaking in those days, but the people proved equal to it. At the Conference of 1887 a change was made in the circuit boundary by including Maldstone as part of the Gesto Circuit. This arrangement only worked for one year. It made a very unwieldy circuit and involved a great deal of work. This task for two years was placed upon Rev. R. A. Howey.

For five years the circuit had had to rent a parsonage, and there did not seem any possibility of securing one. In 1890 a request was sent to Conference that Maldstone might be detached from the circuit, and that a probationer be sent. For the next ten years the circuit was served by young men, who were as follows: M. F. Hawley, J. A. Snell, C. F. Clarke, C. W. Kennedy and J. C. Reid. It seems as if these men were well fitted for the duties and responsibilities of that time. During the last year of the Rev. J. C. Reid's ministry, arrangements were made for the purchase of a comfortable and commodious residence and fully enjoyed by those who in following years have made it their abode.

The earliest white settler in the Gesto community was Mr. Campbell, from Scotland, who settled on the farm now owned by Mrs. Alex. Millar, in 1867. In 1872 John Rodd and M. Barrett came up from Durham County and started a mill at the village, which was run for many years. While a history of the section would be incomplete without mentioning these two worthy men, whose descendants are occupying most prominent positions in other homes have been associated with the village since its inception, among them, the Colenutt, Bakers, Austins, Campbells, Battens, Sweets, Brushes, Martins, and others who have done so much to build up the township of Colchester North. Probably no one man took as prominent a part in the work of the Gesto church as did the late John Rodd, for years recording steward, trustee of both churches, and Sunday school superintendent for many years. Without doubt he was the Gesto circuit's greatest benefactor. Pure in his intention, sound in his judgment, liberal in his assistance, unassuming in his manner, faithful to his duty, unselfish in his life, Mr. Rodd served well in his day and generation and left an honoured name.

Another change in circuit boundaries was made in 1907, when North Ridge became part of the circuit. An historical sketch would be incomplete without some reference to the other churches which constitute the Gesto circuit. The history of the Elford Church is almost contemporaneous with Gesto. Long before it reached such a dignified name, when it was known as Hog Marsh, the two appointments were intimately related. For nearly half a century they have worked together harmoniously and a complete understanding prevails. North Ridge became identified with the Gesto Circuit in 1907.

The union of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches into the United came in 1925, the first minister of the union being T. C. Wilkinson.

Below will be found two of the letters received from old time residents. The writer will be well remembered by the old residents of the Essex and Gesto districts, they were members of the Rodd family.

Unionville, Ont., September 25th.
Dear Friends—The invitation to attend the 60th anniversary of the Gesto United Church seemed to have some difficulty in finding me, and hence arrived too late for my reply to reach the committee on time. Yet, as one who spent childhood and girlhood in Gesto, and was an early member of the church there, I feel I would like to send a message of congratulation to those who, with untiring skill and patience, have carried on the work in church and community, during these long and of late, unusual years.

All of us who have been reared in Gesto, have many happy memories of busy and care-free life there, the Sunday school picnics, the Christmas programs, with their loaded trees, and the annual tea meeting, all of which meant, in our young lives, only fun and feasting. How quickly these celebrations have sped away, and those who have, with us, participated in them, scattered to the ends of the earth, or passed on to a higher and better life. Few indeed, of those with whom I shared the benefits and activities of your church, now remain, but the memory of their useful lives and generous, kindly spirits, will long remain Acres of Diamonds.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.
A generation ago Russell H. Conwell delivered one of the world's best-known orations. He delivered it, in fact, a thousand times. It was reprinted on so many occasions and in so many forms that a vast multitude who had never heard his voice still thrilled to the message of "Acres of Diamonds." In instance after instance he rang the change in the story of a wealthy Persian who became so obsessed with the vision of vast fields of diamonds that he sold his lands to a stray-homestead and left his wife and children to range the world in his lifelong quest for the diamonds he was never able to find. But the friend who had bought his lands, caught away by the flash of light from the sands of a brook that crossed his fields, went to look and found it filled with diamonds, and so discovered the fabulous Golconda diamond mines of historic legend. One man searched the world and did not find. The other found his treasure at home.

Sometimes we exercise ourselves over the comparatively slow growth of our country. We wonder what new policy might fill our vacant fields. We overlook the fact that the acres of diamonds, represented in young lives, are not elsewhere, but here at home, and that while we try to formulate policies that will induce people from other countries to come to us, we are continuing to take chances with our own. It is to our outstanding shame that with a sovereign spirit against diphtheria, there should have been 32,000 cases in Canada last year. With an inherent chance of complete protection, we have not taken the trouble to assure ourselves against those other desperate plagues of childhood, scarlet fever and whooping cough.

Last year there were 11,982 cases of the one and 12,192 cases of the other. Almost 25,000 cases of deadly disease that could have been prevented through the use of reasonable precautions. There is the dreadful threat of lockjaw, in which youth, by the very nature of its activities, is particularly open. There is the still greater threat of a possible upsurge of smallpox, for which conditions are a blessing and an inspiration.

To you, who carry on the work so well established by courageous and far-seeing Christian forefathers, I pray God's continued wisdom and blessing. There are difficult and faith testing times for all church workers and there is much still to be accomplished. Only through His leadership, and in His strength, will the church share and carry the responsibilities that are truly hers, on the setting up of "The New World Order" the future so sorely needs.

With many other friends and supporters, I join in best wishes for your continued success, and pray God's presence and blessing may be with you.

Yours Sincerely,
(MRS. J. H.) ESTELLA I. BROWN.

Woodstock, Ont., September 15th.

To the United Church in Gesto:
Dear Friends—I received a letter from Mrs. George Hight, and also a card, with an invitation to be present at the celebration of the 60th Anniversary of the present church, on Sunday, September 22nd, 1946, and in case I would not be present, I was to write a letter.

Now I take that to mean that I am supposed to write about something that I remember that happened sixty years ago in connection with your church, seeing that it is impossible for me to be present with you.

First of all, I want to say that Gesto and the church in Gesto hold a very warm place in my heart, for Gesto was my childhood home, and for many years after that.

Sixty years is a long way to look back, and I am afraid I cannot remember much about what happened the Sunday of the dedication, for I was not present at the service, for I was afflicted with a very bad toothache. By Monday I was pretty well all right and you can guess the remedy, but my memory was badly spoiled.

I remember Victoria Russell and myself were appointed canvassers for donations for the supper, and the donations were very liberal, so much so that the ladies held an auction sale after the entertainment. The butter, which was sold for cash at the Austin Bros. store in Essex, brought around eight dollars, and that was a lot of money in those days.

If my memory serves me right, there was an autograph quilt to be auctioned off. Every name brought ten cents. I do not remember who got the quilt, but I think either Mr. Weldon or Mr. Barrett got it. So the ladies gathered quite a sum of money, which was handed over to the Building Fund. There was no mortgage on the church.

You deserve a great deal of credit for always keeping your church looking nice, and I understand that it is now looking especially nice, but there is one thing still greatly more important and that is that you hold fast the true faith which is being attacked today.

The true faith is "that only by repentance and faith in the atonement made by Christ, and in His resurrection, can salvation be obtained."

I was converted more than sixty years ago, and am still trusting in Christ for salvation. Now I cannot be with you today, but I hope to meet you around God's throne in glory on the resurrection day and that day may not be so far distant.

Let us watch and pray lest when Christ comes He might find us unprepared.

Yours in the true faith,
CLARA RODD SHEPPARD.

A REAL THANKSGIVING...

...because he hears again!

HE had nothing to be thankful for. Or so he said. He was deaf. And as his deafness worsened, life for him seemed to shrink. How he missed the old intimacies of his friends. Even the companionship of his family wasn't what it had been.

All that was left for him—was to be resigned. Resigned to a life shut off from the laughter of his children, the banter of his friends, the music he had loved.

Bitter? Of course he was—until his physician urged him to investigate the Acousticon "Super-Power" Unipac, world's smallest, lightest, most powerful hearing aid.

He's wearing an Acousticon today.

And never was happier. Never more thankful. For he found what he thought he had lost—his hearing.

If you are hard of hearing—or if you know someone who is—be sure to attend this free demonstration of the Acousticon "Super-Power" Unipac, the hearing aid that can promise you more in comfort and satisfaction. The all-in-one hearing aid that's as easy to carry as a spectacle case.

If you cannot attend the demonstration, plan to have one in your own home. Just telephone the Acousticon at the above address. Remember, there's no obligation—yet it might mean a new life for you... or for someone you love.

So Insignificant!

You can wear an Acousticon "Super-Power" Unipac without embarrassment or discomfort! Its natural-colored plastic earpiece and cord are hardly noticeable. And because of its trifling 7 1/2 oz. weight, it's as easy to carry as a spectacle case. Actually, the complete hearing aid is hardly half the weight, half the size, that the batteries alone used to be.

Attention, Corn Growers!

Commercial corn growers are now
voting on a plan to set up a marketing scheme for their products under the terms of the Farm Products Marketing Act. Ballots have been sent out
by the Farm Products Marketing Board
to all commercial corn growers of Essex, Kent, Elgin, Norfolk, Oxford,
Middlesex, Lambton and Waterloo
Counties, who sold corn for commercial purposes last year. On the ballot
appears: "Are You in Favour of the Proposed Ontario Commercial Corn
Growers' Marketing Scheme being brought into Force in Ontario?" Each grower, along with the ballot, receives
a printed copy of the scheme.

If you are a corn grower and have not received a ballot, you can secure
one, and a copy of the scheme, by writing or applying to the local Department of Agriculture office. The closing date for returning of ballots is October 15th, and they are to be forwarded directly to the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Board, Parliament
Buildings, Toronto.

ALL CORN GROWERS ARE UR-

GENTLY REQUESTED TO VOTE.

Weller-Cox Nuptials.

At Harrow United Church, beautifully decorated with pastel chrysanthemums, a lovely fall wedding was solemnized, on Friday of last week, when,
at 4.30 p.m., Miss Maxine Lorraine
Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C.
Cox of Harrow, became the bride of Robert Weller, son of Mr. and Mrs.
G. R. Weller, of Essex. Rev. J. A.
Walker officiated.

Given in marriage by her father,
the bride was lovely in a blush pink satin gown featuring a high net yoke embroidered with pearls, bishop sleeves ending in points over her hands, tiny satin-covered buttons down the back of the bodice from the yoke to the dropped waistline and a full skirt extending into a train. Her finger tip veil of blush pink net was held to her head in a tiara of matching net, and she carried a shower bow quet of Joanna Hill roses.

Mrs. Malcolm Cox, as matron of honour, wore a flowered yellow taffeta gown with an off-the-shoulder neckline and covered buttons down the back of the bodice. Her headress was styled similarly to the bride's and was of yellow net. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaid's gowns were fashioned like the matron of honor's, Miss Margaret Golden, of Windsor, being in flowered pink; Miss Eleanor Hendershot, of London, in flowered blue, and Miss Gloria MacIntyre, also of London, in flowered white. Their net headresses matched their gowns and they carried colonial bouquets of contrasting chrysanthemums.

The bridegroom was assisted by Donald McCay, of Kingsville, as best man, and the ushers were Malcolm Cox, Charles Cornwall and Thomas Plant, of Toronto.

Mrs. A. A. Hildebrand played the Lohengrin wedding music and Miss Cleopatra, of Detroit, sang "God Save Me" and Greig's "I Love You."

For her daughter's wedding Mrs.
Cox wore a floor-length gown of pale blue crepe, having sequin pocket trim and novel shirring at the waist. She wore blue and fuchsia flowers in her hair, fuchsia gloves and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Weller's floor-length gown of crushed strawberry crepe had a side-draped bodice and further side draping in the skirt. She wore chat-reuse feathers in her hair and her corsage was of green baby orchids.

A dinner for 140 guests followed the ceremony, at Beach Grove Golf and Country Club, where further arrangements of pastured chrysanthemums were used in decoration. The bride's table, in front of the fireplace, was centred with the bride's cake and the wedding cake flanked by burning taper-

For their honeymoon trip to New Orleans, the bride wore a Kelly green suit of wool, a black hat with green and black feather trim, and black accessories. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Weller will reside in Essex.

included Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Turner and Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Atkins, of Toronto;
Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Blain, of Brampton;
Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Laing, Thomas
Plant and Gordon Drighthon, of Lon-

Aids to Safety.

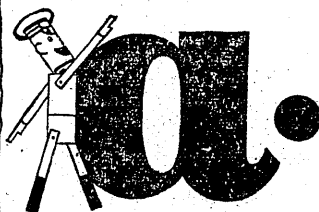

It is an easy matter to prevent fires and save lives in our homes by simply being careful and using common sense. The following suggestions are offered as a guide to every Canadian citizen:

1. NEVER LEAVE YOUNG CHILDREN ALONE.
2. Keep chimneys and smokepipes clean and in good repair.
3. Keep storage in attic or basement at a minimum and store neatly.
4. Make sure there is an alternative means of escape.
5. Keep electrical wiring and appliances in good repair.
6. Do not overfuse circuits. Fuses of 15 ampere capacity are efficient on house lighting circuits.
7. Unless protection is given, smokepipes should be at least 18 inches distant from joists and woodwork.
8. Install fire-extinguishers in cellar and at head of cellar steps, attached to go up in stairs hall.
9. Keep doors closed at night.
10. Have an approved extinguisher handy.
11. The door at the top of the cellar stairs should be one which will resist fire for at least an hour.
12. Keep matches in metal container and out of reach of children.
13. Do not leave irons or other electrical appliances turned on except when they are in actual use. Let them cool off before putting away.
14. Keep oily dusting cloths in a covered metal container.
15. Never use inflammable liquids for dry cleaning in the home. There are safe types of cleaning fluids on the market.
16. Don't hang electrical cords on radiators or over nails.
17. Don't use matches or candles to hunt in closets. Use a flashlight.
18. Don't empty ash trays in wastebaskets. There may be a live cigarette among the ashes.
19. DON'T USE KEROSENE TO START OR QUICKEN A FIRE.
20. Don't smoke in bed.
21. Don't hunt for gas leaks with a match. Put soap lather on suspected joints and watch for bubbles.
22. Never leave a fire burning in an unscreened heater.
23. Don't use inflammable insect sprays indoors and under no circumstances should gasoline be sprayed in closets, etc., as an insect spray.
24. Don't heat paraffin wax over a direct fire. Use a double boiler to melt the wax.
25. Always use care, common sense and forethought and you will live longer.

Plans for New High School at Leamington.

Leamington Post and News.
Tentative plans for a new high school for Leamington and district are now in the hands of the High School Board for consideration. It was revealed by Dr. D. D. MacMillan, chairman of the board, this week. The plans were drawn by S. B. Coon & Son, Toronto Architects, at the request of the board recently.

Increased Enrolment.
The high school board decided to call for the plans after the increasing enrolment at the high school showed that the already crowded school will need additional rooms next year to accommodate the expected pupils, Dr. MacMillan said. At the present time the enrolment numbers 538 and it is expected that next year the school will have to take in over 600 pupils.

Plans for the new school call for a building to cost in excess of $500,000 and the High School Board will receive at least 60 per cent of this expenditure from the Department of Education in Toronto, the chairman stated. The remainder of the cost will be spread over the present high school district which comprises the town of Leamington, most of the Township of Meuron, and part of Gosfield South township. Under this set-up Leamington's share will be about 20 per cent of the total cost of the building. However, it is possible Leamington, in which the school will be built, will be obliged to issue the debentures for the entire amount and will receive grants from the Provincial Government according to the needs of the school.

When erected, the new school will be one of the most modern institutions of its kind in Canada. It will be erected on the north side of Talbot street on ten acres of land recently acquired by the High School Board opposite the present school grounds. Of brick and steel construction, it is expected to occupy about four acres of the land while the remainder will be used for recreational purposes.

The main entrance to the school will stand on the site of a gas station at present on the property. On the left of the entrance will be the principal's offices, and staff room while on the right will be the auditorium designed to seat 900 people with a stage 20 x 52. Further to the right will be two gymnasiums, one 56 x 96 and the other 50 x 56. In going over the plans, J. N. Hume, principal of the school, pointed out that the auditorium and gymnasium will be available for community use and they are so arranged so that they may be shut off from the rest of the school for that purpose.

Also on the ground floor are the agricultural and shop work departments and also four classrooms. A greenhouse is planned adjacent to the agricultural rooms, as Mr. Hume pointed out more stress is being placed on practical work than in the past. A large plot of land along the west side of the school has also been reserved for this purpose. Other innovations on the first floor will be a health department, with rooms for a doctor and a nurse, and also a cafeteria with seating capacity for 318. At the present time, Mr. Hume stated, about 250 students were carrying their lunches to school and an up-to-date cafeteria would give them the opportunity of obtaining hot lunches.

On the second floor of the building there will be a library, 28 x 56, also an art room, two home economics rooms, a commercial department of three rooms, two science laboratories and four classrooms.

There will be only a partial basement under the school to accommodate the furnace room and a rifle range.

At the present time the land is being levelled off and it is expected there will be room for a rugby field, softball diamond and other recreational areas. A running track is to be built with the softball diamond and rugby field in the centre of it.

The plans, which are now being considered, if accepted, will then be submitted to the Department of Education for their approval. No definite decision on when the school will be started has as yet been reached.

Greyhound Lines Reach Into Foreign Countries.

With travel prospects brighter abroad, Greyhound Lines are re-entering the foreign promotion field under a long-range peacetime program.

From 1932 until World War 11 abruptly ended pleasure travel, Greyhound placed increased emphasis on its promotional efforts abroad.

Postwar presumption was made public today with an announcement from L. R. Higgs, chairman of the Greyhound Traffic Managers' Foreign Promotion Committee, that R. N. Cunningham is enroute to Paris as European Representative of Greyhound Lines.

Cunningham will establish Greyhound agencies in major cities on the continent and in the British Isles to arrange highway transportation in America for Europeans, whether as tourists or prospective American citizens. Agency representation for Greyhound is planned immediately in important European port cities.

It is Greyhound's intention to establish a friendly transportation link between America and foreign lands, a service designed for travel in both directions—whether the tourist is going from Boise to Berne or coming from Paris to Peoria.

With continued improvement in the transoceanic shipping situation, the flow of travel to America is expected to increase steadily. To assist travel-

D.D.T. Big Ooze to Potato Growers.

Although this is the first year that D.D.T. has been available commercially as an insecticide for the potato crop, the product is now widely distributed. Mr. E. Goodin, potato specialist of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, reports that it is now being used generally by potato growers. In visits to more than 200 potato growers this year, he found that approximately 75 per cent had used D.D.T. compounds in spraying and dusting.

D.D.T. has been found very effective for the control of leaf hoppers and flea beetles, which have been responsible for heavy losses in the potato crops during recent years. This insecticide will also control Colorado potato beetle and has some effect on reducing populations of potato aphids, particularly when applied in spray form. Fields where D.D.T. has been used can usually be quite easily recognized, as the plants are more vigorous and healthy, the foliage is a deeper green and there is an absence of injury by leaf hoppers and flea beetles.

As a spray D.D.T. is used at the rate of one pound of actual D.D.T. to each 100 gallons of liquid and may be mixed with the usual fungicides such as Bordeaux to control blight. As a dust, it is used in three percent strength combined with some suitable filler and natural or fixed coppers for blight control.

ers from abroad, Greyhound representatives will offer guidance in Europe and Britain and others will meet them upon their arrival in America and start them safely by motor coach to their destinations.

This service is particularly useful to Americans who have earmarked funds for the purpose of financing transportation of relatives and friends abroad in this country.

Greyhound Lines are concentrating on travel between North America and Cuba and other neighbours to the south. Manuel I. Rodriguez veteran travel expert, is the Greyhound representative in Cuba and the Caribbean field.

Cunningham has been identified with European travel for a quarter of a century. He joined the Greyhound organization after serving as auditor with the French Colonial Mission in Washington. From 1942 to 1944 he was with the War Department.

Motor transportation manager for the Y. M. C. A. during World War 1, Cunningham founded Franco-Belge Tours after hostilities ended. His company specialized in continental motor travel. Later he organized Mutual Travel Operators, an international tourist service. He returned to his native America as Hitler's armies overran Europe.

A group of junior farmers representing the Ontario Junior Farmer Association, attended the 4-H Club State Fair for the State of Michigan. The party was made up of members of the Provincial Executive: Wayne Emmott, president; Wesley Downie, vice-president; Raymond Arbogast, Donna Stewart and Fieldmon T. R. Hilliard. Mrs. Arbogast accompanied her husband on the trip. This visit was in response to a return invitation from the Michigan 4-H Club organization, after a representation of 4-H Club boys and girls from that State attended the annual Junior Farmer Conference at Guelph in April.

In Ontario terms, a 4-H State Fair can be likened to an Achievement Day on a Provincial basis, where Boys' and Girls' Clubs, Junior Institutes, Garden Brigades, Junior Farmers and Homemaking Clubs combine to hold a show of local champions. The two day fair in itself was quite large, but was further enhanced by the magnificence of the Michigan State College, on which grounds it was held.

A. G. Kettunen, the 4-H Club Leader for Michigan, who also attended the Guelph Conference in the spring, was host to the group and guide for the two days. Under him, a complete knowledge of 4-H aims and accomplishments was gained. The most enlightening fact brought out was the large number of volunteer adult leaders which 4-H Club projects have in the local communities. This has been developed in Michigan to a much greater extent than in any type of Junior work in Canada. The group from Ontario felt that their trip was worth while, and that such interchange-

Junior Farm Clubs National Contests.

Approximately 90 members of junior farm clubs from all parts of Canada are expected to take part in National Rural Youth Week under the direction of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work in conjunction with the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto in November.

A new feature of this year of the event, the fifteenth to be held under the sponsorship of the Canadian Council, is the inclusion of a contest for teams representing girls' clothing clubs. It is expected that seven provinces will send teams to compete in this contest. Other projects included in the contest have a valuable broadening effect on their work as Junior Farm leaders.

In the National contests are dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine, poultry, grain and potatoes.

The junior farm club members eligible to compete will all be members of the provincial championship teams selected in provincial elimination contests.

The members are to arrive at Toronto on Sunday, November 10th. The project contests will be conducted the following day and the remainder of the week will be devoted to several educational tours, including attendance at the Royal Winter Fair.

The annual meeting and meetings of the directors of the Canadian Council will be held during National Rural Youth Week. The president of the Council this year is Dr. W. V. Leach, Director of Extension, Nova Scotia Agricultural College, Truro, N.S.

The first meeting of the Keep Klean Club was held in the classroom of Brookside school on October 4th, with the president, Douglas Trimble, in the chair. The meeting was opened by the singing of "O Canada," followed by the flag salute and reading of motto "I Serve." During a business discussion plans were made for raising money for a school radio fund. After hearing reports of the different committees, an interesting and entertaining program followed, consisting of a vocal solo by Raymond White, duets by Diane Lozinski and Geraldine Birch and also Fern Baker and Geraldine Birch; a chorus by junior girls; stories and recitations by Patsy Trimble, Barbara Brooker and Patsy Newman; and piano selections by Verna Trimble and Doreen Calder. The meeting closed with God Save the King.

The Cottam Junior W. I. will hold their Blue and Gold Prom, in the Poplar Inn, Cottam, on Wednesday next, October 16th. Cherry Chase's orchestra. See advt. in this issue.

Show me one couple unhappy merely on account of their limited circumstances, and I will show you ten who are wretched from other causes. — Coleridge.

Scout Apple Day.

Why, the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs are putting on their 10th Apple Day Sale, and will be at your door and on the streets of Essex and Cottam selling Essex County apples.

Frankly, folks, this is a money-making scheme, but an honourable one. We need funds to carry on the good work of making the Essex and Cottam Scouts and Wolf Cubs into good citizens, with the background of Scout training, and we need your help.

We now ask one and all to kindly assist us by the purchase of an apple, for not less than ten cents. It will be your privilege to give as much more as you are able to give, and we shall be grateful.

Do yourself, the apple grower and the Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs a good turn.

BUY AN APPLE ON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12th.
